It was noted here that French quarters in Vichy sought to convey the impression that Petain was yielding to a certain extent solely to gain time, but the Nazi press hailed the progress of "collaboration" negotiations as a blow to what was termed "United States intervention".

President's Statement Broadcast

The President's statement was quickly broadcast by short wave, an indication that the government was desirous of reaching as large a world audience of French people as possible.

In this connection, informed quarters said that they thought that Mr. Roosevelt's appeal was aimed primarily, not at unoccupied France, but rather at those parts of the French Empire which remain loyal to the Petain regime.

In well-informed quarters here there was no expectation that an agreement for closer "collaboration" between Vichy and Berlin would transform France overnight into a full-fledged Nazi ally. Instead, it was said, the process probably would be gradual, with France moving step by step toward an eventful status tantamount to that of a belligerent.

Because of this, these officials predicted, there probably would be no formal diplomatic break between the United States and France—at least for the present—although the rift, in effect, already exists.

Action Without Warning

As the President's surprise statement, the posting of guards on refugee French ships came without warning.

Coast guard headquarters here made a brief announcement last night that armed guards had been placed aboard all French shipping in American harbors.

Besides the $60,000,000 Normandie, four other vessels were boarded in New York—the Fort Royag, Mont Everest, Ile De Noirmoutier and the Ile De Ouessant, the last recently returned from Martinique. The Normandie has been tied up in New York since the last week in August, 1939.

Guards likewise went aboard ship at San Francisco, New Orleans, San Pedro and St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands.

Headquarters announced that similar action would be taken with any other French-flag vessel subsequently arriving in an American port.

Courses Open to U.S.

In the event Vichy-Berlin "collaboration" warrants, the United States has several courses of immediate action open, informed sources said. It may:

1. Place French colonies under its own protection or the joint protection of hemisphere nations.

2. Stop all food shipments to unoccupied France and terminate negotiations under which Vichy hoped to obtain 15,000 tons of wheat monthly.

3. Halt the petroleum shipments which have enabled French North African colonies to proceed with their spring planting, and cancel plans for sending other vitally-needed supplies.

4. Refuse any more withdrawals from "frozen" French assets here estimated at $1,500,000,000, depriving the Vichy Government of funds for its embassy and consulates here and throughout Latin America.

Unofficial Reaction

Vichy, May 16—(AP)—Unofficial reaction today to President Roosevelt's appeal to the French people is that it was based on a misunderstanding of Marshal Petain's aims.

It was considered unlikely there would be any publicly expressed official reaction to the Roosevelt statement since it was not formally directed to the Vichy Government.

Chart To Be Kept Of Cheese Production

In order that a truer picture of the actual cheese production in the province of Ontario be presented and that records of such production might be kept as up-to-date as possible the Department of Agriculture Toronto, has had charts made and distributed to all cheese boards, agricultural representatives and factory instructors in the province, upon, which will be marked each week production records of factories. On each chart space is provided for a comparison of this year's cheese production with that of last year and records will be kept up-to-date by compiling monthly.

Such a chart was exhibited at Thursday evening's meeting of the Belleville Cheese Board and Secretary Fred Mallory asked that all factory presidents selling cheese on the local board state how many cheese manufactured this year had been sold off the board. Each season, it was stated, before the board opens several factories begin manufacture early and rather than hold their cheese until the first meeting of the board sell to buyers individually. The reporting of such cheese sold referred only to those for export and did not include cheese sold in grocery stores for the domestic trade.

The charts were introduced by agriculture authorities as a means to determine as the season progresses whether cheese production was falling off, and also to determine as quickly as possible if Canada would be able to meet her quota of 112,000,000 pounds of cheese to be supplied to Britain this year. Should cheese production be found to be falling off there was every possibility of measures being introduced to increase it, it was stated.

Bacon Board Curtails Domestic Pork Supplies

Ottawa, May 16 (CP)—Canada, in a move to meet increased British demand for pork products, from next Sunday will limit the quantity of such products distributed in her domestic markets to the weekly average made available last year.

The limitation, effected under authority of the War Measures Act, was announced last night by the Bacon Board, which said "this action will not result in any serious shortage in the domestic market since domestic distribution is being curtailed only to the level of 1940, during which year the consumption of pork was well above average of recent years." Last autumn an agreement was reached between the United Kingdom and Canada under which the Dominion was to ship 425,000,000 pounds of pork products before the agreement expired next October.

The Board announced that after May 31 a licence from the Board will be required by any packer or other person who slaughters hogs or processes pork for distribution in the domestic market. This order does not apply to farmers slaughtering hogs produced on their own farms or to retail meat dealers who operate only one retail store.

Officials of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board said no consideration has been given yet to the possibility of fixing a maximum price on pork products in event the curtailment of domestic supplies resulted in an upward price trend, but it was considered likely the situation would be surveyed immediately.

During 1940, according to Bacon Board figures, the average weekly domestic consumption of pork products amounted to 40,000 hogs, 5,000 per week more than 1939 consumption.

From October, 1940, to March, 1941, the average was 47,000 a week and in the latter month the figure rose to 51,000.

BRITISH TAKING

No Immediate Confirmation

Foreign reports that German tanks were crossing Syria bound for Iraq were not immediately confirmed. Similar reports in Istanbul, Turkey, however, said one or two German air squadrons had landed in Syria and that light tanks also had arrived.

Britain's hold on the sea lanes of the Eastern Mediterranean make it improbable, some sources thought that any Nazi forces had been disembarked from ships on the Syrian coast.

Military circles, however, regarded it as likely that the Germans might be flying light tanks and light guns by planes as they did in Libya.

Probable Route Outlined

If they are using Greek bases, these sources pointed out, a probable route would be by way of the Italian island of Rhodes in the Dodecanese group to the inland city of Aleppo, a distance of about 550 miles.

They said the Germans were not likely to use the longer, more dangerous sea routes to the ports of Tripoli and Beirut, exposing their transports to interception from the British-held island of Cyprus which stands outside those harbors off the Syrian coast.

Propagandists in Iraq

German air-borne propagandists, technicians and similar Axis specialists are already in Iraq—a token of great infiltration to be expected.

Independent French News Agency dispatches from Cairo described all this German activity as amounting to the occupation of Syria.

Informed sources in Cairo said that the Germans probably got their equipment into Syria by air and boat from Italy's Dodecanese Islands, some 450 miles away in the Mediterranean.

There were indications that the British Government is gravely concerned at the swift developments, but an authorized source said the situation in Iraq "can be taken care of and will be handled all right."

This informant declared significantly that Britain "doubtless will fulfil in due course" the policy outlined yesterday by Foreign Secretary Eden, who told the House of Commons that Middle East forces have been given authority to bomb German planes on Syrian airfields.

Vichy Gov't Warned

Well-posted sources said the government already had warned Vichy against even passive collaboration with Germany.

One authorized source referred to the "extremely pointed and potent comment" by President Roosevelt yesterday on the tendency that is being shown by the Vichy Government and his expression of hope that the French people would not deliver themselves into the hands of the Nazis.

"Marshal Petain is a tired and weary old man" this informant said "who has been under constant and insidious pressure from Germany and from false French.

"What he says does not get us very far."

This source said that the British Government had every reason to believe that French authorities in Syria were well aware of the Vichy Government's attitude in regard to the granting of facilities to the Nazis in Syria.

Britain Appreciates Loyalty

He added that there was no tendency on the part of the Arab States to "play ball" with Rashid Ali, the Iraq rebel Premier, and that Britain "apprecaites the loyalty of our Arab friends."

Gen. Charles De Gaulle's Free French headquarters protested in a statement "in the name of our nation, now gagged and powerless", against the Vichy regime's "policy of treason" in permitting Nazi use of Syrian Airdromes.

"In allowing Syrian airdromes to be used by German planes, the abetters of the June capitulation have just been guilty of a fresh act of treason," the statement said.

Just a Mere Toy

"How could Marshal Petain, revoking the promise he so recently made publicly, associate himself with a move against the Allies of France?

"Frenchmen who had joined Gen. De Gaulle in order to continue the struggle note with deepest sorrow the sad end of a French military leader who now is the mere top of a small group of conspirators, who went over to the enemy.

"Free French have never held that the Vichy Government, which was formed without consulting the French people, is entitled to speak on behalf of the nation. They have always maintained that the action taken by the Vichy government defies the wishes of the immense majority of the people.

Does Not Represent France

"Faced with this fresh infamy on the part of Admiral Darlan and his accomplices, the free French wish to state before the whole world, that the Vichy Government does not represent France and that the French people must not in any way be involved in that government's dishonor."

(The British Broadcasting Corporation quoted the Daily Express today to the effect that "the painful possibility of direct conflict between Britain and Vichy must be faced." The broadcast said further that the British press this morning agreed that "a new and critical phase has been reached in British relations with the men of Vichy.")

Some circles in London, after hearing Marshal Petain's brief broadcast yesterday, expressed belief, however, that there was little hope Vichy would provide any further opposition to Nazi demands.

They said the reported basing of German planes in Syria constituted a further French capitulation to the Nazi conquerors, and the British government was known to be taking an extremely serious view of the situation.

The political correspondent of the News Chronicle even went so far as to write: "The general feeling among members of parliament is that Foreign Secretary Eden's statement (in Commons yesterday) was in effect a declaration of war on the Vichy government."

There was no official comment immediately on President Roosevelt's appeal to the French people to reject collaboration, but it met with general commendation.

The Times called for "careful reconsideration of the basis on which our policy toward the Vichy government has hitherto rested—the supposition that that government will not actively further the designs of the Axis against its former ally."

R.A.F. Ordered to Attack

The Daily Telegraph said it is "evident that a situation of extreme gravity threatens in Syria", where British bombers have been ordered to smash Nazi planes which Mr. Eden said were using Syrian airdromes in carrying "specialists" to the aid of the Iraqi rebels.

Reuters News Agency quoted A.F.O., Independent French News Agency, as saying that the first Nazi planes to pass through Syria early this week were escorted by French fighters.

"There is still some mystery . . . whether Marshal Petain has approved and condoned such a gross breach of his oft-repeated pledge to prohibit the use of French Overseas territory for military purposes," the Telegraph said.

"It is tragic indeed that the present government of France should have sunk so low as to lend signal aid and comfort to the mortal enemies no less of their own country than ours".

Thirty Nazi planes, principally bombers, have landed at three Syrian bases thus far, according to reports reaching here from Cairo, some of the planes going on to Mosul, Baghdad and possibly other Iraq points. The planes were said to have come from the Italian Dodecanese Islands, 450 miles away.

London Views Events In Syria As Hostile

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.)

Washington, May 16 (AP)—Evidence that France, Britain's former ally, is "collaborating" with her German conquerors with at least passive military assistance in the East headlines the war news.

It places even the Hess flight mystery in second place, since it may lead to Franco-British hostilities in French-mandated Syria. Indeed, there is one unconfirmed report that the hostilities have started, with the Royal Air Force bombing an airdrome.

Nazi planes, presumably fighting craft, have reached Iraq. Whether or not they were escorted on their way by French fighting planes, as a report from London states, remains to be confirmed. That they used the Syrian route from Aegean islands and were refuelled en route at French air stations is not open to serious question.

Definitely Hostile Act

Formal notice that British forces in Iraq or elsewhere have been ordered to attack such Nazi planes wherever intercepted means that London interprets this new phase of Franco-Nazi "collaboration" as a definitely hostile act by the Vichy regime.

Chief of State Petain at Vichy made no admission of open hostility to Britain in his surprise radio broadcast calling on all Frenchmen to follow him unquestioningly in the Franco-German negotiations now going on. There seems no doubt, however, that at the behest of Germany Vichy ordered the Syrian route opened for Nazi planes. And there was at least a hint of uncertainty in the Petain broadcast of what the reaction might be in Syria or elsewhere in colonial France to the Hitler-Darlan program of closer Franco-German collaboration.

It cannot be gainsaid that the developments in Iraq, Syria and Vichy gravely complicate Britain's position in Iraq and throughout the East. Up to the appearance of Nazi planes in Iraq it seemed that the pro-Nazi uprising there was being squelched. Early elimination of Gailani, its leader, was being predicted by British sources.

The chance of that has dwindled. Instead Britain may have a war with French Syria on her hands soon. In any event, London and Cairo can look for revival of the flagging war in Iraq and intensive German efforts to foment a "holy war" throughout desert regions.

Need Land, Sea Routes.

There is no indication as yet of the full extent of the Nazi air aid that may be sent via Syria to Gailani. The fact that the Nazis delayed some time before answering his appeals for help seems explained. It was to permit pressure on France to obtain unopposed passage to Iraq via Syria. And that delay has given Britain all-important time to reinforce the Iraq garrisons and demoralize much of the Iraqi Army.

It seems unlikely that any formidable Nazi army could be ferried to Iraq by air. Troops thus transported would be at a disadvantage. They would lack the tank and gun equipment that is available to British forces.

To throw the full weight of German intervention into Iraq would require land or sea routes for the movement of mechanized equipment and heavy guns. For that reason what may be developing in Turkey could prove more menacing to Britain than Vichy's apparent yielding to Berlin pressure.

Hitler's ace diplomat von Papen, is back in Turkey. That he may be trying to induce Ankara to yield a land route eastward goes almost without saying. If Turkey also gives in, Britain's position throughout the Middle East will be terribly jeopardized.

Radio Highlights For Tonight

Interesting programs on the air tonight include "Voice of London," the story of Big Ben at 8.30 (DST) over CBL; the War Savings program at 10.00 (DST) over CBL and CFRB including such artists of the airlanes as Andre Kostelanetz, Kenny Baker, tenor and Larry Adler, harmonica ace. MANY GERMAN

At the same time, small forces of Nazi planes struck at widely-separated districts of Britain and gave London its first alarm since Monday.

Nazi Activity Light

Nazi aerial activity overnight was described officially as comparatively light and confined largely to coastal areas. Two raiders were shot down by British fighters in a pre-dawn dogfight high over the southeast coast.

A few casualties resulted in one district in England and damage was reported at several points. No bombs fell in London and the alert there was brief.

The Air Ministry announced yesterday that three Nazi supply ships were left burning off the Frisian Islands after the R.A.F. attacked an escorted convoy.

Fighter squadrons also swept over Northern France yesterday and machine-gunned enemy aircraft on the ground.

Calais Appears Targets

Dover, May 16.— (CP) — The rumble of exploding bombs and gunfire on the Nazi-occupied French coast rolled across Dover Strait for several hours before dawn today, indicating to observers that the Royal Air Force was carrying out a heavy attack.

At one time Calais appeared to be the target and later the British bombers seemed to be concentrating on Boulogne and points farther inland.

From the sounds audible here it was judged the attacks were carried out on an unusually large scale.

Two of the German supply ships attacked off the North Frisian Islands of 5,000 and 4,000 tons, were left in flames, while the third, of about 2,000 tons, was emitting clouds of smoke.

The Air Ministry News Service said a faint smudge on the skyline first revealed the convoy to the British bombers. The leader of the squadron chose the largest ship to bomb. As he was about to release his bombs, "two other aircraft beat me to it," he said.

A few seconds later smoke came up, followed by a sheet of flame. Flames also leaped out of the ship between the deck and the water level.

The squadron leader attacked the smallest ship from a low level. Immediately after a pall of smoke poured up from the ship. The second largest ship was damaged simultaneously.

Carry Away Ship's Aerial

"One of the attacking bombers flew so low it carried away the ship's wireless aerial," the News Service said. "Bombs hit the ship and the vessel was well ablaze."

Two Messerschmitt 109s attacked one of the returning British bombers. One bomber was hit and driven down. Then the rear gunner of another bomber caught the attacker in the belly with an effective burst and sent it into the sea. The other Messerschmitt was believed to have been damaged and made off.

MOTORISTS WARNED BY THE MAGISTRATE

"There are several cases of alleged violations of the city traffic by-laws pending to be heard in the City Police Court next week. For the benefit of the driving public in Belleville, I might say that unless there is more caution used in the driving of motor vehicles in this city, there will be operators minus their driver's privileges if convicted in my court in the future," warned His Worship, Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., at the conclusion of Friday's police court proceedings in Belleville.

Charge of failing to observe stop street signs and of speeding are pending for local court proceedings of next week. Magistrate Butler made it quite clear today that motorists should be advised to proceed with caution and keep their vehicles well under control or suffer the consequences.

SOLEMN REQUIEM WILL BE SUNG

London, May 16.—(CP Cable)— Solemn High Mass will be held in Westminster Cathedral next Monday for Col. Claude Brown, former head of the Knights of Columbus War Services in Britain, who died suddenly of natural causes.

He will be buried in the Canadian military cemetery at Brookwood. Col. Brown, from London, Ont., had been waiting to return to Canada to take up other work.

Flight of Hess, Nazi Party Chief, to England Takes News Spotlight

Rudolf Hess addressing Hitler youth meeting

Flight of Rudolf Hess, Nazi party leader and No. 2 Nazi in line of succession to Adolf Hitler's dictator post, is the talk of the world. Hess flew a commandeered Nazi fighter plane from Augsburg, Germany, and landed by parachute near Glasgow, Scotland, where he is held by the British. Speculation was rife as to the "why" of the fantastic flight of Hitler's most trusted lieutenant. Among theories advanced are that Hess quarreled with Hitler; he is a victim of "hallucinations" as claimed by the Nazis; he brought peace proposals to Britain; it was the beginning of a Nazi party breakup; he was marked for a "purge."

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating breakfist and ma said to pop, My, Willyum, the dream I had last night. It was so unusual I'm sure it had some special significance, just wait till I tell you, she said.

Dreams being one of ma's favorite subjects and some of them taking her a long while to tell and pop said, I'd like very much to hear it, my deer, but time marches on and I dilly dally.

But Willyum, I never had such a dream, and I doubt if anybody elts ever did, ma said, and pop said, Well, that would make it unusual, I admit.

In the first place I thought I was all alone in the world, ma said. There wasn't another man, woman or child in existence. In fact there wasn't even a bird or an animal or a tiny sprig of vegetation I was the only living thing, she said, and pop said, Well now by gollies that's curious, I dreamed practically the same thing, at least in principal.

Why Willyum, when- ma said. You dont mean last night do you? she said, and pop said, Absilutely, probably the same moment you were dreaming yours. It's uncanny, I dreamed I was in a vacuum, in a terrific big vacuum, all alone, even more alone than you were in your dream, because of course there wasn't even any air in there, and nobody can be more alone than that, he said.

Why that's fantastic, I've heard of duplicate dreams by 2 distinct people, but I never thought I'd actually experience one, ma said, and I said, Well wait till you hear my dream, ma. G, talk about being all alone, I dreamed I wasn't even there myself, wait till you hear, I said.

You wait till you get a good slap, and your father didn't fool me either, ma said. I knew everything wasn't on the surface as soon as he interrupted me, and now you couldn't drag my dream out of me with wild horses, she said.

Wich we didn't try, pop having to go to his office and me having to go to school.

By The Canadian Press

TODAY

The House will consider Private Bills.

The Senate stands adjourned to Tuesday.

YESTERDAY

The House approved increases in the National Defence Tax proposed in Finance Minister Ilsley's 1941-42 budget after members of all parties took part in a general protest against the tax and offered counter-suggestions; began debate on the proposal to increase from five to 15 per cent the tax on interest and dividends payable in Canadian funds to non-residents of Canada; Mr. Ilsley announced he would amend one budget proposal so the new 10 per cent tax on travel tickets would not apply to soldiers in uniform and proceeding on leave; Labor Minister McLarty announced the Unemployment Insurance Scheme will begin operating July 1

The Senate did not sit.

THE WAR TODAY

By DON GILBERT
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

German armored forces were reported rolling across Syria today in an attempt to join forces with Rashid Ali's rebel movement in Iraq, opening up a new war zone between Britain and her principal enemy.

After Marshal Petain's statement to the French people last night there can be no doubt that the Nazi thrust through French-mandated Syria has the support of the Vichy regime, that the old marshal's pro-German advisers have won at last his full support for the program of collaboration Darlan and Laval have been working for.

Britain took a grave view of the situation, one newspaper, The News Chronicle, declaring Foreign Secretary Eden's announcement that German aircraft in Syria will be attacked by the Royal Air Force "was in effect a declaration of war on the Vichy Government."

As for the immediate situation in Syria, a London spokesman declared the menace "can be taken care of and will be handled all right."

Whether the British army in Palestine under Lt.-Gen. Sir Maitland Wilson will strike into Syria remains to be seen, but the situation is made difficult by the consideration that Nazi infiltration appears to be concentrated in the far north of Syria, with the airfield at Aleppo and the principal air base. Whether tanks reported landed by Germany are baby tanks flown in, or whether they were transported by sea was not made clear in Cairo dispatches.

In Iraq itself Britain seems to be there first with the most men. However, the arrival of the Germans would give new life to Rashid Ali's flagging revolt. Should Soviet Russia move simultaneously into neighboring Iran (Persia) all Central Asia would be stirred up and general fighting might be expected.

"DAUGHTER OF DESTINY"

By ELEANOR ATTERBURY COLTON

CHAPTER XXIII.

"Chumming with our young D. A.'s brother now, are you?"

Smiling a little wearily, Devona shook her head. "No, Jose. Not chumming with any one's brother. And you know it."

"I'm not so sure," his voice only half hid a threat. "I didn't like the way that young fellow looked at you."

Macias' fierce temper blazed quick and hot in his face, staining it red, setting his thick lips into a hard line. Then, obviously regaining control, he drew a deep breath, changed the scowl to a sly smile. "Sure. Of course. I didn't mean to make you angry, Dona." Clumsily, he patted her hand.

Relieved to see Elsie, the hat-check girl, coming toward them now, Devona was more relieved that the girl brought a message that some one was waiting to see Macias. She excused him gladly.

Just what, she wondered as he made his way toward his office, would happen to her if once he let that temper loose! Like a maddened bull, ruthless, bestial—Devona shuddered. And anything, any one in his way, he'd simply trample to death! She was a fool to risk that. Next time, she'd better watch her tongue.

Her eyes followed him idly. Then, suddenly, her whole body stiffened. The small man waiting just outside Macias' office seemed strangely familiar! Chinese, he was obviously — slanted almond-shaped eyes, and something about his flashy sport coat, the immaculate grey flannels jogged her memory painfully. Hat in hand, he bowed as Macias went toward him. It reminded her of Wong. Devona's heart stopped a moment. But that ugly, repellent little Oriental would have no business here. It couldn't be he, of course.

A Daring Manoeuvre

For an instant, she sat immobile, turning that picture this way and that in her mind, trying to get it into focus. She must be mistaken, of course. Wong would not be permitted to come here as guest. And if not as guest, then—

It was a mistake, of course. Still, there was one way to make sure. Any excuse to follow Macias into that office—

She glanced at the costly fan her fingers opened and shut idly. A loosened stone—the need to store the fan away safely.

Before she had time to reconsider, she made her way to that grey-paneled door. Tapping softly and then, deliberately not waiting for an answer, she pushed open the door, stepped into the little office.

"Pardon my butting in like this, Jose, but my fan is—" she began. Then she stopped, let the door slide shut behind her with a snap and the words of her flimsy little excuse fainted in her throat. Jose was alone!

Standing at the window, he whirled toward her almost fiercely. "Well—what?" he snapped, his face strangely white, his eyes smouldering dangerously.

Another Knows the Secret

"—that is—my fan is—a stone is loose," she stammered, trying hard to hide her own amazement as her glance traveled quickly around the tiny room. "I thought I'd better put it away before I lost it."

He eyed her suspiciously a moment. "Sure. Hand it here. I'll take care of it."

"Thanks." She tried to smile naturally, turned to open the door again.

But only when it was safely closed behind her again, did she realize how she trembled. She'd seen some one — a some one who looked like Wong — go into that room. He couldn't have come out without her having met him, face to face. So—and the realization brought a shuddering premonition racing along her spine—someone else knew about that secret passageway now!

Talbot sent the copy of his play the next day. The bulky package was waiting for her when she went to work that afternoon. And Talbot himself appeared later that evening, sat waiting for her at the little table behind the potted palms, his thin face eager, his voice husky with excitement.

"Have you had time to read it, yet, Devona?" he asked the moment she slipped into the chair opposite him.

She shook her head. "Not yet. I'm saving it until I get home. It's too noisy here."

"I hope you like it." His eyes pleaded shyly from behind his surface hardness. "Though you probably won't understand what I'm driving at. Nobody does, really."

"I'm sure I will," and slipped her own warm hand over his cold one as if to protect him from the fear she knew hovered over him like a pall. Then, realizing that he wanted, needed to talk about it, she asked, "How did the rehearsal go last night?"

"Not bad. Vara's magnificent. Some of the support is pretty foul. Dale thinks we can round out the cast better once we get it to New York."

Another Shock

Dale! The name like a banner unfurled. It was the first time Tal had mentioned him. Desperately, she checked the tremor that raced through her.

"How is—Dale?" she tried to ask naturally.

"Oh, fine. Working like a dog. I don't see much of him. Too busy—both of us—to be civil, I guess. We live in the same house and that's about all. He shows up after rehearsals usually and takes Vara home. She depends on him a lot, too. Good business man, Dale. Good level judgment. Don't know what we'd do without his advice. Owe everything to him."

Again—Vara and Dale. Tortuously, her imagination conjured up the picture—leaving rehearsals together, Dale's splendid height, Vara's dainty petiteness, the powerful coupe, supper just for two somewhere.

Drawing a deep breath, she steadied her voice. "Dale's doing very well in his work, isn't he?"

What Dale Is Facing

Tal nodded. "He's got something, Devona. And they're finding it out at last down theres at the D. A.' office. They know it in other spots that don't make it too healthy for Dale, too," he added gravely. "If they just don't bump him off. That's what worries me. He goes to the source of supply for his evidence and his witnesses, you know. That's not exactly—safe."

Devona nodded. This was awful—listening to Tal, getting a close-up picture of Dale's life. And yet she had to listen.

"He's had one threatening letter already that I know of. And he won't let any of the staff be seen with him on the street for fear of endangering somebody's life besides his own."

"A—letter!"

"Under our front door, one night. I found it. Some crackpot had written 'Lay off—or else'. No signature. No envelope. Not even fingerprints. Dale had it checked."

"And—did he? Lay off, I mean?"

Tal laughed. "Dale? He turned around that very night and went back to the office. Worked until daylight."

It was late and dancers were already leaving the floor, crowding around the bar for a last round of drinks. It left Devona and Tal almost alone, circling slowly, in perfect step to the dreamy music.

"You're a swell dancer, Devona," Tal smiled down at her once as they waited for an encore. "I always said that, didn't I?"

"You're no slouch, yourself," and when he drew her back into the circle of his arms, realized that this was the first time she'd really enjoyed dancing since the night Dale had—Vara had——

Then she noticed Macias glowering at her from the door of his office. Instantly, her own fears began sharpshooting at her poise. His jealousy, so quick to ignite, so white hot——

"What's the matter?" Tal asked, sensing the change in her.

"Oh, nothing." After all, this was part of her job—dancing with patrons. No reason for Macias to look as if he'd——

But Tal had followed her glance. "Who is the handsome guy with the sour puss?"

Tal Gets Quizzical

"Mr. Macias, you mean?" she asked casually—at least she hoped it sounded casual. "Just the owner of this place—and my boss."

The dance ended and Tal led her back to the little table.

"Why are you afraid of him?" he asked abruptly.

Startled, Devona stared at him. Was her expression that transparent. "Why do you ask that?"

"It's true, isn't it? You're scared to death of him."

She forced a laugh. "Don't be ridiculous. Why should I be?"

"I'm sure I don't know." Tal searched her face. "But you are, and I still say this is no place for you."

Turning his chair so that he could watch Macias, Tal went on calmly. "I don't like this set-up. I'm going to get you a job somewhere else. Let me go tell that guy you're leaving right now. Will you?"

"Oh, no. Please." A detaining hand on his arm, Devona drew him back in to the chair from which he'd half-risen. Where else could I find work? I can't really offer anything except the kind of singing they like here. Besides, Macias wouldn't let me go. My contract——"

"To hell with your contract," Tal cursed furiously. "And now who needs scolding about being your own worst enemy?"

"Please. I'm all right. And really you'd better go now," Devona begged, frantically.

He hesitated. Then, reluctantly, "Okay, I'll beat it now but——" and one finger under her chin, he tipped her face up, smiled at her affectionately. "I'm getting you out of this place just the minute I can find something to offer you. Understand?"

In that moment, Devona did understand—perfectly. Perhaps better than Tal himself. She saw it plainly in his eyes, heard it in the depths of his voice. He was falling in love with her. Like a shock from an electric charge, the knowledge smashed into her mind. And in the same instant, she realized she mustn't let him discover that love. He mustn't love her. Not that!

"I'll be back," he was saying now. "Take care of yourself in the meantime."

She nodded. "Good night."

Sneering Macias

Steeling herself, Devona watched him drop into the chair Talbot had just vacated.

"Oh, they all are," she said carelessly. "Hadn't you noticed?"

He looked at her sharply. "Don't give me that. This guy's different. He's in love with you. Isn't he?"

"Is he?" she shrugged—a masterpiece of indifference. Then, deliberately risking all on a single parry, "I'm tired, Jose. Would you have time to take me home?"

His grim lips relaxed into a confident smile. "Sure. Right now?"

Safe—for the moment! Devona made her way to the dressing room, slipped out of her elaborate costume into the once-smart blue suit grown definitely shiny at the seams now.

Her courage was wearing shiny at the seams, too, she thought as her fingers stumbled with the fastenings on her jacket. This was merely trading one danger for another. But if Macias knew for sure that Tal loved her, meant to find a way out——

Out the Secret Passage

He was waiting for her, the wall safe already ajar. Smiling, he took the valuables, thrust them quickly almost furtively, into the safe, slammed it shut.

"We'll go out the back way"—and he pushed the little white button. The panel slid open as if moved by invisible hands.

Instinctively, Devona shuddered. The back way. There was something sinister about that, too, she felt, but she led the way docilely enough, patting a little yawn as they waited for the panel to slide back.

Still, her fears seemed groundless really. It was Joe with the big limousine that waited in the alley outside. Devona breathed a sigh of relief as she sank back against the luxurious upholstery. And even managed a smile when Joe, deftly manoeuvering the cross-town traffic, brought the huge car to a stop before the Brownstone's modest doorway.

"Thanks so much, Jose," she began.

But he laid a heavy hand on her knee. "Not so fast, Dona. I want to talk to you a minute."

Leaning forward, he closed the glass panel behind Joe's stiffly noncommittal back, looked at her probingly. "I want to know why you are playing up to young Brasher?"

"But I'm not," Devona denied and looked at him with wide-eyed directness. "Nor to any one else for that matter."

No? How come he hangs around so often?"

"He was at the club last night and tonight. Twice! What's peculiar about that?" she snapped, hiding rising fears behind irritation. "I supposed you liked repeat business."

New Cause for Fear

"Not when it's the assistant D. A.'s brother."

Instantly, Devona's every suspicion came to attention. "Why not?"

"Never mind why not. I just don't want him hanging around you. Get that?" His dark eyes didn't leave her face.

For a long tense moment Macias just sat back behind the thin veil of cigar smoke that enveloped him.

Then, too quietly, "I think you do see why."

She felt the net closing in on her. She was stumbling onto something important. She knew. More than that, Macias had guessed that she knew—or suspected—something. Her every nerve went taut with real fear. With a man like Jose Macias, her little knowledge could be a dangerous thing!

HOW ELDERLY WOMAN ESCAPED BACKACHE

Many people think that backache is a trouble that comes naturally with advancing years, but this woman of 71 proves that it is not.

"I suffered for a long time from backache," she writes, "but put it down to my age (71). Reading your announcement, I thought I would try Kruschen Salts. I have been taking it for some time and have found great relief. I thought you would like to know it has done me a world of good."—(Mrs.) E.R.

Because Kruschen has a diuretic action which helps to flush your kidneys and liver. After that, your blood throws off all impurities; you get happy relief from pain.

The Stars Say

For Saturday, May 17

A DAY on which dogged determination, reserve, sound judgment and well-rooted integrity may avert entanglement in some very disturbing, unprooting and startling events both unprecedented and unique. Such visitation may be upsetting to the very foundations of life and its associations, but may be successfully engineered into safe and productive channels by restrained and conservative action in the critical moment.

Those whose birthday it is should be prepared for a year of some extraordinary and unprecedented events, in which the whole life and its destiny may seem to be spaded up from old ties, interests and objectives. While on the face of it there may be calamity yet sound evaluation of circumstances may change woe to results of an enduring and gratifying nature.

A child born on this day may have some disturbing or erratic tendencies although it will be deep, sound, steadfast and philosophic.

Bomb-Shocked Babies Regaining Health As Special Nursery

Most are from London, some from other heavily-raided areas. Many have been cured and authorities hope to treat hundreds more at the nursery, called St. Christopher's College.

"Most of them are in a badly shocked condition when they arrive," said Miss Muriel Payne, the director.

"Treatment begins with relaxation and special feeding, followed by gentle physical exercise, using scientific toys. A cure usually takes about two months, but some difficult cases have been here since the first heavy raids."

Baby "clients" include curly-headed Marie, aged three. When admitted she weighed less than 17 pounds. A few weeks later she weighed 22 1-2 pounds and was gaining rapidly.

KATHLEEN NORRIS GETS HER REPLY

Mrs. Harriman Explains to Author How Much U.S. Should Do to Aid Britain

New York, May 16.—(CP)—Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, vice-chairman of the committee to defend America by aiding the Allies, made public yesterday a reply to a recent statement by Kathleen Norris, author and honorary vice president of the newly incorporated peace organization, women united, that Americans "do not feel this is our war any more than does Canada, who is getting cash for every bullet and every can of peaches sent to Britain".

Quoting statistics of the Canadian Department of National Defence from a recently published book "Canada Fights —An American Democracy at War", by J. W. Dafoe, Mrs. Harriman in an open letter to Mrs. Norris said:—

"Canada has raised, fully equipped and is maintaining an army of 180,000—65,000 of which are in England. Canada's Air Force numbers over 45,000 and under the Air Training scheme is turning out fliers at the rate of 25,000 or 30,000 a year. Her navy of 181 ships and 16,500 men is convoying Canadian and American goods and munitions to England.

Spending 44 Per Cent. of Income

"This all costs the Canadian people about $1,500,000,000 for 1941. And in addition Canada is supplying England with $1,500,000,000 worth of supplies for 1941, most of which has to be financed by Canadian loans. Directly and indirectly Canadians are putting 44 per cent. of their National Income into the prosecution of this war.

"Of course, Mrs. Norris, if you insist that we should consider this our war to the extent Canada considers it her war, then here is what we should be doing: The United States should be convoying ships carrying $21,000,000,000 worth of war materials and supplies a year, have under arms now a trained army of over 2,000,000 men and an air force of about 540,000 men, and the American people should be devoting $37,000,000,000 of their National Income of $85,000,000,000 to the prosecution of this war".

CANADA-BERMUDA TRADE

New York (CP)—Canada was second only to United States in 1940 as a source of supply for Bermuda, reported D. S. Cole, Canadian Trade Commissioner. The United States sold Bermuda goods valued at $2,674,332, Canada $1,586,000 and the United Kingdom $1,490,000.

RADIO GAS-MASK DRILL

London (CP)—Residents of London the other night turned from their radios, seized gas-masks and opened their windows into the street—but it was only the B.B.C. giving a "one-handed blackout gas-mask drill."

RAF DETERMINED TO DESTROY SYRIAN AIRDROMES

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

VICHY REGARDS U. S. ACTIONS WITH CONCERN

Intensification Of RAF Activity Hourly Expected

Will Not Allow Nazis To Use Syrian Airdromes as Springboard For Drive On Suez

CONSOLIDATE HOLDS

London, May 17 (CP)—The Royal Air Force holds the initial edge in expanding hostilities in the Middle East and intends to use its advantage to destroy Syrian airdromes which the Nazis might use as the springboard for a drive to Suez, informed Britons said today.

They predicted sharp intensification of R.A.F. activity in the wake of an official announcement Friday that Nazi planes had been bombed already at Damascus, Rayak and Palmyra in the French Mandate.

(In a statement issued last night the Vichy Government acknowledged the British bombing of airdromes in Syria but said they did not consider that the attacks constituted aggression.)

In Africa, on the other side of the Suez Canal, British forces were said to be hammering at Fort Capuzzo, Axis-held bastion just across the Egyptian border in Libya, while other British troops consolidated their hold on Salum, Egypt and Halfaya Pass.

Only Local Success

British recapture of Salum, reported yesterday, was regarded here as "only a gratifying local success." Britons were not disposed to take it as the resumption of a general offensive or as an indication that the danger of an Axis drive into Egypt had been averted. The town has changed hands four times since the war began.

Rebel Communique

Beirut, Lebanon, May 17 (AP)—An Iraq rebel communique mentioned bomber activity against the British forces for the first time today.

(This probably means that German or Italian warplanes already are fighting with the Iraqis, whose own weak air force has been virtually destroyed.)

Reporting an attack by "a number of bombers" on the British-held Cineldebane Camp, the communique claimed that "what remains of the camp installations was hit and damaged badly."

(Comment on this claim was not immediately available in London or Cairo.)

The war bulletin, which reached here from Baghdad, also said a battle was being waged outside Basra, with Iraq forces trying to drive southward to the Persian Gulf.

The battle began, the communique said, when Iraq troops engaged British forces trying to dislodge the Iraqis from their positions.

The war bulletin did not make clear whether the engagement had been terminated or which side had the upper hand and said details would be given in a later communique.

(Military sources in London earlier said they had no confirmation of reports that a battle was raging around Basra.)

THE WEATHER

Toronto, May 17 (CP)—Showers have occurred in Ontario and Manitoba, while in Alberta and the greater part of Saskatchewan the weather has been cloudy and moderately warm.

14,656 Tons Shipping Reported Lost In Week Ending May 16

(By The Canadian Press)

Two British and two Norwegian ships totalling 14,656 tons were reported by neutral sources in the week ended May 16 to have been sunk in the battle of the Atlantic. Wartime secrecy, however, prevented assembling of a full picture of the week's sea warfare.

Two other ships were reported during the week to have been sunk, but information available suggested they had been sunk some time ago. These were the 11,660-ton motorship Derbyshire, said to have been sunk in the Mediterranean, and the 7,982-ton motor tanker San Conrado, sunk by bombing.

Response To Campaign Expected To Reach Peak In A Month

Ottawa, May 17.—(CP)— Response to the new campaign for 32,000 recruits for the Canadian (Active) Army is expected to reach its peak in about a month, Air Minister Power told a press conference in his capacity as Associate Minister of National Defence.

"I don't think there's any limit on the number", Maj. Power said. "If we get more than 32,000 well take them all".

The campaign is to extend over two months and many of the recruits will be posted to the armored division, he said. Campaign committees now are functioning in all of Canada's military districts under the direction of the general officers commanding the districts.

Press and radio were co-operating in the campaign by providing free advertising facilities, said Maj. Power, and while he had no definite statistics on the response to date "there has been an improvement in recruiting figures".

In response to a question, Maj. Power said he believed that other age groups than 21-year-olds would be called for compulsory training for Home Defence before those trained under the old one-month plan would be recalled for service.

Maj. Power said no men in the Canadian army now are being trained as parachute troops, but "we have had an awful lot of applications from people, who want to be parachute soldiers".

Meanwhile, Canada's first pictorial campaign for recruits since war began got under way across the country today, featured by 890 huge billboards in 265 cities and towns.

These billboards, showing a soldier in full battle dress pointing forward and saying: "You are needed NOW".

COLOGNE HEAVILY ATTACKED BY R.A.F. BOMBERS

Large Fires Caused In Industrial Quarters On Both Sides Of Rhine

SUPPLY SHIP SUNK

London, May 17—(CP)—Cologne was heavily attacked by bombers of the Royal Air Force last night and "large fires were caused in the industrial quarter on both sides of the Rhine," an authoritative source said today.

A small force of bombers also successfully attacked the docks at Boulogne in Naiz-occupied France. In daylight yesterday, other bombers attacked a number of vessels off the Norwegian coast, sinking a supply ship of about 2,500 tons.

(Nazi sources said British raiders damaged several apartment buildings and an industrial plant and caused a number of casualties in Western Germany.)

Reports from Dover said the R. A. F. attacked heavily German-held ports across the English channel and continued the blasting for several hours.

British planes also were said to have turned back a number of Nazi bombers headed for England's southeast coast.

AT LEAST SIX, PROBABLY SEVEN KILLED IN PLANES

Two U.S. Army Planes Crash Within 100 Miles of Each Other in Southern Ohio

GOING TO DAYTON

Columbus, O., May 17 (AP)—Two United States army planes which crashed less than 100 miles apart in hilly southern Ohio during last night's violent wind and rainstorm killed six and perhaps seven men.

Four bodies, none identified immediately, were removed from the wreckage of a plan which struck a hillside eight miles north of Nelsonville and Sheriff Floyd Duffy said he understood a fifth man also was in the plane.

Two air corps captains were killed as their ship plunged into the ground with great force 10 miles south of Wilmington—15 minutes after the Nelsonville crash.

Major J. W. Sessums, Wright field adjutant, identified the victims in the Wilmington crash as Capt. R. A. VonDerau of Dayton and Capt. John C. Stanley. Both were stationed at Washington and were en route to Dayton in an advanced training ship, he said.

Canada's Share Of Air Training Plan Now Totals $531,000,000

Ottawa, May 17—(CP) — Cost of the British Commonwealth Air Training plan up to March 31, 1943, now is estimated at $824,000,000 of which Canada will contribute $531,000,000, Air Minister Power said at a Press conference today.

When the plan was launched in the fall of 1939 the estimated cost for a three-year operation starting April 1, 1940, was placed at $600,000,000 with Canada's share. $350,000,000.

Since then various estimates of increased cost ranging up to $1,000,000,000 have been made but Maj. Power said a more precise estimate now was possible.

Canada alone, recruiting and Manning Depots initial and elementary training of Canadian pupils, $120,000,000;

Shared by Canada, Australia and New Zealand, advanced training $510,000,000.

Of the $510,000,000 Canada's share is 80.64 per cent or roughly $411,000,000; Australia's 11.28 per cent or roughly $58,000,000 and New Zealand's 8.08 per cent or roughly $41,000,000.

Estimate is For 3-Year Period

The estimate, Maj Power explained, is for the three-year period of the Air Training agreement and is based on the assumption the plan is ended with the agreement which, of course, is unlikely unless the war ended. Even if it did end then an additional $28,000,000 would be needed to complete the training of pupils in the advanced schools.

Of the $630,000,000 to be paid in cash by Canada and shared between Australia, New Zealand and Canada it is estimated $250,000,000 will be spent in the current fiscal year.

The Minister broke this down as follows: pay and allowances, $66,000,000; aircraft, engines and parts $62,000,000; aerodromes, works and buildings, $23,000,000; overhaul of engines and aircraft, $18,000,000; maintenance of personnel works and buildings and certain aircraft, $81,000,000.

Halifax Lives Turbulent Life Anew As The World Is At War Again

By DOUG HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Halifax, May 17 (CP).—Here life is boisterous and abundant because here happen the spontaneous things born of the temperment of a wartime humanity.

Here crowd the men of many lands, going and coming to and from the wars with a fighting man's yen for a good time. These are some of the things that strike an observer:

Playboys:

No Broadway Galahad ever spent with the abandon of the Norwegian seamen. They do the town with bulging bankrolls, leaving shocked taxi drivers, check girls, waitresses in their wake. . . . A newsboy went home one night, clutching two quarters and a fifty cent piece in a grimy hand. The first quarter, he explained, came as a tip from a lame Norwegian he helped along the street. The Viking donated the second quarter when he was helped into a restaurant; the half when the lad got him a taxi. . . .

Fables:

They tell a story of an officer in charge of artillery troops guarding the outer harbor. A Norwegian freighter ignored the men's first two challenges one day and two shells were fired near her as warning. The third shot would have to be into her vitals but as the men made ready their weapon, a call came through from headquarters. "Allow that ship to pass," the officer was told. "We have been informed she is all right". . . . So, the officer rushed to the door of his office and bellowed at the stupefied gunners "Let 'er go". . . . The freighter is still afloat—the men guessed right, and didn't fire.

Signs of the Times:

Stevedores, playing poker in a waterfront restroom, ignore a foreman's shouted notice "there's work at 23—if you guys want it" . . . a collegian on vacation makes $50 in two days on a waterfront job . . . jammed liquor stores . . . jammed theatres . . . jammed dance halls.

Languages:

Here can be heard Arabs and Greeks, Free Frenchmen and Brazilians. Doormen or deskmen at theatres, rinks, clubs are smothered under an avalanche of varied vernaculars.

Miscellaneous:

A Haligonian lays down his evening paper to answer a knock at the front door and is promptly greeted by a smack in the eye. His seafaring assailant, whom he says he never saw before, calmly closes the door and walks away.

Similar is the case of the sailor knocked down by a man who had stopped his car and quietly walked up to him in the street. He, too, never saw his assailant before . . . but street fights are amazingly few for a city as cosmopolitan as this.

Most popular movieman, George Formby. Theatres can't bring the horse-faced Briton back often enough. . . . Dance hall consensus is that sailors, lithe and nimble, are jitterbugging tops. . . . Sailors get the reputation as most ribald of servicemen; their tradition-stuffed officers, most pompous.

FOUR NARROWLY ESCAPE DEATH BY DROWNING

Car Plunges Into Trent River After Being Sideswiped by Another Vehicle

PULLED TO SAFETY

Trenton, May 17 (Special)—Four persons narrowly escaped death by drowning in the Trent River last night, when their car plunged over a steep embankment, after being sideswiped by another automobile.

They are Frederick Lusk, Ponton Street, Belleville; John Warner, Victoria Avenue, Belleville; Ruth Mitchell, Coleman Street, Belleville, and M. Mondville.

Only last fall a car had plunged into the river one mile south of the scene of this accident, carrying two women and a girl to their death. The accident was identical to the accident last night, with the car going out of cnotrol after sideswiping another automobile.

The quartette was driving south on the highway along the Trent River, when their car came into collision with a northbound car driven by F. Gallagher, Frankford. Following the impact, the Warner driven car went out of control. The car swerved to the left, crossed a narrow shoulder and plunged down a steep embankment into the Trent River.

Judgment Reserved On Paper's Appeal

Toronto, May 17 —(CP)— Judgment stood reserved today in an appeal of Globe Printing Company against an order of the Master of the Supreme Court, directing it to give particulars of its statement of defence in the $100,000 libel action launched against it by the Toronto Star, Limited.

Judgment was also reserved in a cross appeal entered by the Star interests who took exception to the same order in that it refused to strike out certain paragraphs of the statement of defence on the ground they would prejudice, embarass and delay a fair trial. The libel action arose from an editorial in the Globe and Mail early this year.

16 MORE PLANES LAND

New York, May 17 (CP) — A British Broadcasting Corporation news report heard here today said 16 more German planes have landed at Damascus, Syria.

JUSTICE MINISTER NOT SATISFIED WITH PROGRESS

House Adjourns With Budget Debate Still Before the Commons

TAXES DISCUSSED

(By Frank Flaherty)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 17.—(CP)— Justice Minister Lapointe indicated in the House of Commons yesterday that he is not satisfied with the progress made in dealing with tax increases proposed in the budget.

The House adjourned for the week end with the increased levies on beer and malt and some change in the Income Tax approved after several days of discussion.

"There will be the same business on Monday and, I hope, with some progress", Mr. Lapointe, who was leading the House at the time, said as the sitting ended.

"I do not think the Minister ought to say that" replied Conservative House Leader Hanson. "We have made some progress".

As the House adjourned it was considering the increase from five to 15 per cent in the tax on non-resident persons, not corporations, drawing royalties, rents or similar payments from Canada.

Howard Green (Con. Vancouver South) suggested it was unfair to tax gross rentals since a foreign property owner, after paying his municipal taxes, insurance and maintenance of poverty might have nothing left. He said the tax should be on net income.

Finance Minister Ilsley thought the suggestion impracticable as Canada had no jurisdiction to inquire into the profits and losses of a non-resident. He admitted there might be hardships in some cases but there was a way out by incorporating a company in Canada, in which case the property-owner would pay corporation income tax instead of the withholding tax on money leaving Canada.

Section Approved

Another section increasing from five to 15 per cent the tax on interest and dividends payable to non-residents in Canadian funds was approved after a vigorous protest from Mr. Hanson and John R. MacNicol (Con. Toronto-Davenport) who referred to the objection advanced by Premier Hepburn of Ontario against "discrimination" in exempting Dominion Bond interest while taxing provincial.

"We are seeking accommodation from Ontario with respect to income tax" said Mr. Hanson. "How are we going to help that accommoda-

MIDLANDS UNDER HEAVIEST ATTACK OF PAST WEEK

Some Casualties Caused By Direct Hit On Air Raid Shelter

LONDON QUIET

London, May 17 —(CP)— The Nazi air force gave Britain its heaviest air raid of the week last night and early today, striking mainly at the Midlands.

Although the Nazi raid was the first extensive attack on the Isle since the parachute landing of Rudolf Hess a week ago became known, the government said it was not a concentrated, large-scale bombing.

In the Midlands, a communique said, "some damage was done by incendiary and high-explosive bombs and there were a number of casualties." Elsewhere, in south-eastern and eastern England, "little damage and few casualties" were reported.

Some of the casualties were caused in a direct hit on an air raid shelter.

London was under alarm from midnight until just before dawn, and planes were heard overhead, but no bombings were reported in the city.

In a running battle high above the clouds over Dover, Royal Air Force fighter planes were reported to have turned back a Nazi fighter patrol attempting to cross England's southeast coast today.

Watchers from the ground said they heard cannon and machine-gun fire, then saw the German planes head back.

The heavy rumble of gunfire and the thunder of bomb explosions heard across the channel during the night indicated the R.A.F. was attacking the Nazi-held French ports heavily.

The Air Ministry said two British aircraft were missing from the offensive against coastal shipping. It announced that seven Nazi fighters were destroyed over the south-east coast of England yesterday.

ONE DAY ABSENCE IN 50 TEACHING YEARS

Oregon, Ill., May 17 (AP) — Miss Ruby Nash is retiring at the end of the present school term with this record: Fifty years a teacher in Ogle County schools. Forty-two years a teacher of First Grade. One day of absence, because of illness.

BICYCLIST KILLED

Windsor, Ont., May 17 —(CP)— Gilbert Deloney, 60, of Windsor was almost instantly killed last night when the bicycle he was driving was involved in a collision with a car. Police said John Hunter, also of Windsor, driver of the car, told them he did not see the cyclist until it was too late to avoid striking him.

Proposed Nazi Purge May Include Famed Designer, Willie Messerschmitt

London, May 17 (CP)—"Unknown disclosures" of parachutist Rudolf Hess and a suggestion that a proposed purge has included the Nazis' famed fighter plane designer, Willie Messerschmitt, were topics broadcast by Britain today for the ears of any Germans listening.

The BBC said in its German-language programs that there were rumors that Messerschmitt might have aided Hess' flight. Messerschmitt has a private air field near Augsburg, from where Hess started his strange journey to Scotland a week ago today.

Further, it was reported, the machine Hess used "was one of the latest reconnaissance planes, one not yet in service with the Luftwaffe."

The plane was not a Messerschmitt 110, as previously reported, it was said.

In connection with this claim the press considered it significant that plans to exhibit the plane on Trafalgar Square were suddenly abandoned.

It was Arthur Greenwood, minister without portfolio, who sought to prey on German uneasiness over what Hess might disclose.

Some of the answers to hundreds of questions in the case will be forthcoming soon, he said, but "we can afford to wait for fuller information and leave to Germany all the anxiety, suspense and discouragement that can be associated with Hess' unique light and unknown disclosures."

Speaking in London, he said the flight was an indication that the Nazi foundation "is certainly becoming chipped."

"Disunity, doubt and disillusionment are growing and will continue to grow within the German Reich," Mr. Greenwood said.

"The Nazi foundation upon which Germany's grandiose edifice of military aggression rests has begun to show signs of internal stress and strain."

Has No Intention Attacking Britain Much Less U.S.

Semi-Official Statement Given On Vichy's Position In Matter

NO PRESSURE CLAIMED

Vichy, May 17 —(AP)— Vichy government sources regarded with "astonished" concern today what they described as "semi-official declarations" in the United States indicating that occupation of French Guiana and Martinique is under consideration.

Circles close to the Vichy government interpreted the attitude in the United States toward France's colonies as resulting from a "misunderstanding" of Vichy-Nazi collaboration.

Britain's moves also were watched closely after a Vichy statement acknowledging yesterday for the first time the British bombing of air fields in Syria. The government declared, however, it would not regard the bombings as aggression.

A semi-official statement expressing astonishment at United States interpretation of the status of French colonies inquired also about the "taking over of the Normandie and other French merchant ships by armed American guards."

One semi-official statement gave this as Vichy's position:—

"In May, 1940, when France had been abandoned by England, America didn't think it her duty to reply to her (France's) appeal.

"Today, France, careful of guarding her position as a great power and the integrity of her territory as an empire, has definitely the right to consider with the conqueror the conditions of common reorganization of the continent of Europe.

"That in no way signifies she has the intention of attacking England—even less the United States.

"The menaces of Mr. Eden (British Foreign Secretary) against Syria and the bombardment of Syrian airdromes have just been added to the things which France still refuses to consider as the Anglo-Saxon will for aggression".

NEW THEATRE PRICES IN EFFECT MONDAY

The new tax includes a seven-cent advance on adult tickets at the Belle and McCarthy Theatre where the admission price of 35c is in effect during the evening performance. Children's ten cent tickets realize a two-cent tax and students' 15c tickets a three-cent tax. At the Capitol Theatre where the price of admission is 25c, a tax of five cents will go into effect when the new Government regulations go into effect on Monday.

ANGLERS HOOKING SMALL PICKEREL

Local anglers report they are having difficulty in keeping within the bounds of the new fishing restrictions, pertaining to the length of pickerel season on Thursday last, local anglers state the size of fish now being caught are unusually small. With Governmental regulations calling for pickerel to be at least 13 inches in length, anglers are being forced to return the majority of their catches to the water owing to the new regulations. The fish are taking the bait, but are small in size. One local angler hit upon a novel idea in order to assure himself of keeping within the bounds of the new regulations. He measured 13 inches on his rod and marked the measurements, whereby all that is necessary is to place his catch alongside the markings to keep within the law.

W. R. McCreary Claims Misunderstanding Over Col'd Cheese Discussion

Mr. W. R. McCreary, local cheese buyer, told members of the Kingston Cheese Board on Thursday afternoon that he took a strong exception to the impression which had gone abroad to effect that he had sponsored the idea, in the form of a resolution, asking the Dominion Government to allow the manufacture of colored cheese during wartime.

During the course of the meeting Mr. McCreary argued that the report in the Kingston Whig-Standard gave the impression that he had moved a resolution when it quoted C. Cramer, chairman of the board, as stating: "Mr. McCreary you have no seconder for your motion so you will have to drop the matter for the present". Mr. McCreary claimed that there was no resolution and that Mr. Cramer was wrong in making the statement he did.

It was a clear case of misunderstanding according to Mr. McCreary, who stated that he had no intention of asking the Kingston Cheese Board to pass any such resolution, although he thought the Government should be asked to grant permission for a certain quantity of colored cheese to be manufactured as at the present time there is a large domestic demand for the colored variety.

Lt. Governor Pays Tribute to Religious Bodies For Foresight In Establishing Schools In Address At Albert College

The Honorable Albert Matthews, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, with his daughter, Mrs. C. P. Fell, and attended by Lt.-Col. Norman Alexander, Q.O.R., who were in in the city Friday enroute to Queen's University, Kingston, for Convocation at which His Honor will receive the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws, paid a visit to Albert College during the afternoon. The faculty of the College, the students and guests assembled in Memorial Chapel to greet the distinguished visitors.

Dr. Bert Howard, Principal of the College, expressed the great pleasure it gave the staff and scholars to have His Honor and Mrs. Fell present. The Lieutenant-Governor, Dr. Howard said, was the type of gentleman one loved to see in such an office. He was a sincere worker in his church and carried out in the highest tradition the duties of his office. Mrs. Fell, past president of the Y.W.C.A., was interested in philanthropic work and as the mother of four children, her devotion to home was an example to all.

Dr. Howard regretted the absence of Mrs. Matthews, who was unable to come because of the illness of her mother and expressed to Mrs. Fell appreciation for her graciousness in visiting Albert College.

His Honor, replying to the words of welcome, said:

"It is most kind of you to receive us in this delightful way, and we are looking forward to the pleasure of meeting the members of your Board of Governors and your Faculty and I hope the students later on this afternoon. Some of the members of your board are valued friends of ours and I mourn with you in the passing of your Chairman, Mr. W. G. Morrow, who was a friend of mine for many years. Being a fellow-townsman, of Mr. Morrow, I was always interested in his career and I greatly appreciated his many splendid qualities of leadership. I am sure his place here will be hard to fill, and I wish to express my sympathy in the loss you have sustained.

"One of the great pleasures and indeed one of the chief compensations of the Lieutenant-Governor is to visit the educational institutions of the province and today brings a real treat to us in visiting this well-known college, which has made such a name for itself both in the academic field and in the cultured leadership it has provided for this community.

"I have read with much interest the brochure titled 'Eighty Years of Service.' The vision of the founders, coupled with their courage and sacrifice compels our admiration and thankfulness that the pioneers of Ontario held the education of youth to be of such importance. This province cannot hope to repay her obligation to the religious bodies for their foresight in setting up the schools and colleges which have provided cultural leadership for the generations which follow on so rapidly. Albert College for 84 years, situated in this beautiful part of our province, has performed an outstanding service in this community in the development of character and a way of life that would promote good citizenship.

"I was impressed with the cover announcement of another brochure. It is, "Albert College an Aid to Success." This immediately brings forward the question, "of what does success consist?' "How can it be described?" There are many definitions. In a vulgar sense, success is the gaining of money and position, though it must be said at once that money and position are often the reward of hard work coupled with high ethical standards and noble character.

"I am very happy to think that Albert College supplements its academic training with that of character-building and guidance in the building of citizenship of the highest type which is in keeping with the noble aims of the great church which founded the institution.

While speaking of success, may I here say a special word to the boys and girls comprisng the student body. Henry P. Davison said, "The simple virtues of willingness, readiness, alertness and courtesy will carry a young man farther than mere smartness."

"The Century Dictionary describes success as "A termination which answers the purpose intended." I know what the intended purpose of your headmaster and faculty is, and you must covet a termination of your course here which will effectively demonstrate to the educators, to your parents, and to the world at large that you have grasped the deeper meaning and high purpose of the founders of this college.

"Mr. President, may I again say how much I appreciate the privilege of visiting Albert College. Your physical and academic equipment leave little to be desired, and best of all, the Christian influence which you exert over the students is a matter for congratulation and profound thankfulness on the part of those who have a personal interest here, and also to the whole Province."

Faculty, Guests Presented

Following His Honor's address, the party visited various parts of the college and later assembled in stately Ackerman Hall where the members of the faculty and guests were presented to His Honor and Mrs. Fell. Dr. and Mrs. Bert Howard received. The tea table at which Mrs. E. N. Baker and Miss Jessie B. Tuite dean of women at Albert College presided was lovely with pink tulips and ivory tapers. Mrs. T. C. McMullen, Mrs. K. McAdam, Mrs. T. Franklin, Miss Dorothy Greer, Miss Gretta Ross, Miss Bessie Handley and Mrs. B. Simpson were tea asistants. Guests who were invited to meet His Honor and Mrs. Fell were Mrs. E. N. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Ackerman, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Deacon, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Morrison, Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Ostrom, Judge and Mrs. G. E. Deroche, Judge and Mrs. Chas. Cameron, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Baird, Dr. and Mrs. James Semple, Rev. and Mrs. Dilts, Rev. and Mrs. D. T. McClintock, Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Deacon, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Gordon, Tweed, Mayor and Mrs. Glencoe Thompson, R. D. Arnott, M.P.P. and Mrs. Arnott, G. H. Stokes M.P., and Mrs. Stokes, Principal and Mrs. P. C. MacLaurin, Mr. and Mrs. I. G. Hefkey, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Jewell, Mr. and Mrs. K. McAdam and Mr. Mrs. A. Reekie, Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Deacon and Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Findlay.

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington, May 17 (AP) — The world will probably soon know the real scope of Vichy's 'collaboration' with Germany.

British bombing of Syrian air bases used by Nazis has touched off actual Franco-British hostilities. Despite Vichy's statement that the bombing is not considered an act of aggression, it is unlikely that French forces manning the bases did not answer the attack, possibly by anti-aircraft fire or sending aloft French fighter planes to drive off the British airmen. That would be a natural French reaction, all the more certain if there is any French commitment to facilitate and protect German incursions into Iraq via Syria.

There are probable limitations upon the extent to which the French can aid the Nazis in Syria. It seems wholly improbable that there is any adequate supply of oil and gasoline there to service German planes en route to Iraq, or even to keep France's own planes and mechanized equipment going along at an active war pace.

Cut off From Supplies

Syria has been cut off from anything more than boot-legged oil ever since France gave way under German attack nearly a year ago. The first act of Britain and the then pro-British regime in Iraq was to stop oil delivery over the pipeline that runs through Syria from the Mosul field. It was the only source for the French army in Syria and the main supply for French naval forces in the Eastern Mediterranean.

Therefore, German planes or the light mechanized units they ferry to Syria en route to the Iraq war front may soon have to bring their own fuel with them. That has been done to keep the Axis forces in Libya going. Some fuel may reach Tripoli or other Axis ports in Libya by sea, but indications are that it is upon air transport from Sicily that the Axis forces in Libya have depended primarily for refueling.

Thrown Out of Egypt.

That may account in part for the slow-motion pace of the Nazi attack against the British defences at Tobruk. Now that the British forces have reoccupied Salum, east of Tobruk, and have retaken "Hellfire pass" in that area, it seems possible that the German-Italian advance has not only been halted, but thrown out of Egypt completely. There are even suggestions that the British forces have started a counter-offensive to push westward again beyond Tobruk, although that is doubtful.

For among the possibilities of Franco-German "collaboration" is the further grave consideration that French bases in Tunisia also will be placed at Nazi disposal. That would greatly shorten the Axis air or sea route to the war front in Libya. It is only ninety miles or so across the Sicilian Straits to Tunisia.

An effective night shuttle service by air or sea from Sicily to Tunisia would seriously increase the menace of the Axis North African campaign. There has been a suspicion that that route was used clandestinely to get German tanks and troops to Libya, although French authorities denied it. An agreement by Vichy to put Tunisian as well as Syrian facilities at the service of the Axis may be the next development, and thus it is unlikely that the British command would risk a major offensive into Libya at this stage.

Capital Closeups

By JOHN DAUPHINEE

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 17 (CP)—(Advance) Mostly About People—

To most folk Princess Alice is "Her Royal Highness" but that doesn't go in the family...... Her married daughter, Lady May Abel Smith, calls her simply "mummy" when talking to friends...... And while functions at Government House are usually formal there's informality there too.... Most afternoons schoolmates of Robert and Anne Abel Smith, the grandchildren, use the rambling estate as a playground.

Lord Beaverbrook, newly-appointed British Minister of State, is usually considered a New Brunswicker...... But Dr. H. A. Bruce (Con. Toronto-Parkdale) told the House of Commons "We claim him as a son of Ontario because he was born (at Maple, Ont.) only 15 miles from Toronto"....Said Paul Martin (Lib. Essex East): "He lived that down, though."

William Van Tets who has arrived to act as private secretary to Juliana of the Netherlands is from a family of diplomats...... But he was in the shipping business before the war...... He replaces Baron C. de Vos, aide-de-camp to Queen Wilhelmina who came to Canada with the Princess last year and now is back in Britain.

Occasional Chuckles—

Leonard Brockington, special wartime assistant to Prime Minister Mackenzie King, introduced Lily Pons at the Metropolitan Opera star's concert...... He said he didn't usually hear such fine music and added: "Usually my ears are filled with the noise of the two windy Houses on Parliament Hill—though I must say it is usually Morpheus and not Orpheus who plays up there"...... (In case you don't get it, Orpheus is the Greek god of music, Morpheus the god of sleep.)

Clarence Gillis (C.C.F. Cape Breton South) got a laugh in the House from members who enjoy "mother-in-law" stories when he told Finance Minister Ilsley that "the man who is obliged to maintain his mother-in-law should be given some consideration" in income tax exemption..... Mr. Ilsley turned thumbs down.

And during discussion on divorce procedure, A. W. Neill (Ind. Comox-Alberni) told this one on J. S. Woodsworth, veteran C.C.F. leader...... He said Mr. Woodsworth, absent this session because of illness, always asked this final question in every divorce action before Parliament: "What about the children in this case?"...... "As a matter of fact," said Mr. Neill, "the procedure became so formal that one day a bill to rebuild a bridge came in with a number of divorce bills and Mr. Woodsworth unconsciously asked, "Any children?"

Odds and Ends—

Later Information Department: Clement B. Burns, former librarian of the Supreme Court of Canada, says precedent won't be broken if Mrs. Roosevelt accompanies the President on his proposed visit to Ottawa and is invited to sit with him on the floor of the House...... The Countess of Aberdeen, wife of the Governor-General just before the turn of the century, sometimes used to sit to the left of the speaker...... And the Duchess of Connaught, wife of the 1911-16 Governor-General, and Princess Patricia were invited to sit in the House one day...... So we were wrong last week.

Luis Feliu, Consul-General for Chile, is a one-man news agency on the side...... His latest mimeographed mailing of Chilean news to Canadian papers gives these surprising figures on the armed strength of Chile, a country much smaller than Canada: Army, 24,000 men, 609,734 trained reserves; Navy, one 28,000-ton dreadnaught, three cruisers, 11 destroyers, six submarines; Air Force, 100 fighters and bombers and "necessary" training planes.

Official records of the House run 4,000,000 to 5,000,000 words a session—and that's less than it used to be ......Earl C. Young, editor of Debates, has a theory there is some kind of tie-up between shorter House hours and the general disappearance of beards and moustaches.

German War Prisoners Get No Free Cigarets

Ottawa, May 16—(CP)—For some time now, internment officials said today, German prisoners of war, held in Canada have not been getting the customary free issue of cigarettes.

One official said Britain and Germany agreed to supply free cigarettes to prisoners but when it was found Germany was not supplying these to British prisoners, the issue to German prisoners in Britain was stopped and Canadian authorities followed suit in regard to prisoners held in the Dominion.

"BLOOD... TOIL... TEARS and SWEAT"

This is a war for existence. It is war to the death. It is a war to win or to lose.

There can be no half way—no compromise. It is a war to WIN.

Money is the fourth arm of the service.

Whatever you are called on to pay or to lend, it is little compared to the lives that our sons offer.

There have been many and heavy calls upon Canada already.

There will be more.

Let us face the truth and the truth will make us free.

It is freedom we are fighting for, British freedom, the freedom of body and spirit that makes life worth living.

If we fail, we fall.

Be prepared for sacrifice.

Great Britain has set us an example on a scale of heroic magnificence history doesn't record.

Let us FIGHT!

Canada has the resources. Let us spare nothing. When our soldiers offer their lives, let us be willing to share our livelihood.

Presently the Government of Canada will call for money.

The money is here.

We are spending billions. We are already heavily taxed. But most of these billions and those taxes are being spent in Canada. That money comes back to you. Keep it rolling. Keep putting it back into the war effort, so that it may be spent again and again and again until Right prevails and the world is free.

LIEUTENANT - GOVERNOR'S VISIT

Two well known institutions, the Ontario School for the Deaf and Albert College were yesterday en-fete for the visit of the Hon. Albert Matthews, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario. At the former institution the Lieutenant-Governor saw the noble work which the Province is doing for a large number of boys and girls who are handicapped in their hearing. He saw the evidence of the work which is being accomplished by Superintendent Morrison and his staff. At Albert College likewise he saw the work of education carried on in secondary education and also in the first years of university study under Rev. Dr. Bert Howard and his faculty.

This lovely spring day in mid-May formed a perfect occasion in its lovely green setting for the visit to these institution where the young and youth are prepared for the work of life. Hon. Mr. Matthews, who is much interested in education, left a deep impression on the students of the school and college of the value of education and of the cause of liberty for which the British Empire is fighting.

SAVING WILD FLOWERS

The season is at hand when wild flowers are showing or are about to show their beauty in their native haunts and it is a noble instinct in man, woman and child to admire their beauty and symmetry. Beauty in the flowers may blush unseen in the desert air but in places where they can be seen along the highways or in the woods, man will see them and pay his tribute of admiration in praise of nature and nature's gifts to the race.

If it is a noble motive to see the beauty of these flowers as nature grew them, it is also noble to desist from tearing them from their roots in their own soil where they have developed and grown in conditions suitable for their development and where they will continue year after year to delight the eye and the heart of flower lovers if only those who come to admire do not carry flowers away after wrenching them from their stems or roots, thereby damaging the plants and the roots or after merely plucking off the flowers which would ordinarily bloom for many days in the woods. A plucked flower is a tragic sight as it withers in an automobile, almost always before the car has ended its journey homeward.

Those who see the flowers in the woods and leave them unplucked serve their generation in leaving these flowers for others to adore.

The appeal of flowers draws many to the woods. If they are not despoiled they will continue to bloom for countless others yet to visit these shady nooks or damp grounds.

Gathering of flowers in such a way is a result of carelessness and not of wanton vandalism. One can admire these beauties of nature without tearing them apart.

GROWTH OF LARGE CITIES

The growth of cities in the United States is one of the wonders of the modern days. A census bureau study shows that about 63 million persons or 47.8 per cent of all residents in the continental United States live in 140 metropolitan areas, which is a growth of 8,205,058 in ten years, while the entire nation's growth in the same period was only 8,894,229. New York metropolitan area has a population of 11,690,520, though New York City proper counted 7,454,995. It is pointed out that because of congestion the metropolitan areas of the larger cities grow more rapidly than those within their municipal boundaries.

Where will all this city-building run to? No end is naturally in sight. There will be a growing population and smaller cities will come forward. For instance the third Unted States city, Los Angeles, though sow only one sixth of metropolitan New York in population, grew in the decade nearly 586,070, while metropolitan New York gained 788,116. Los Angeles had the most phenomenal rise of any of the largest ten metropolitan centres.

In the world there are thirty or forty or more cities of over a million population. Montreal and Toronto are now numbered among the large cities of the world.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

There is one Canadian veteran of the last war who has a German Iron Cross, order of the Second Class, who did not "pinch" it from a prisoner of war; swop a bar of chocolate or soap for it during the German occupation; steal if from a pal, or have it left on his hands when a buddy forgot to pay back the ten francs for which he had given it as security.

Major F. C. Vanluven, Kingston, late of the famous Twenty-First Canadian Infantry Battalion, and now construction engineer at a nearby airport, was decorated with the medal by the late Marshal Von Hindenburg. Vanluven was given the decoration for saving three German soldiers, instead of "bumping them off" as had been his daily occupation for the preceding three years.

The evening was warm. Soldiers, civilians mingled with each other as they strolled down the avenues. It was Spring, and the war seemed far away. Vanluven walked slowly along a quiet street, noticing with amusement the antics of three French soldiers who had gazed upon the Rhein wine when it was a trifle too ruby. The poilus, arms interlocked in traditional French style, sang of the beauties of Gay Paree and La Belle France in a manner that lacked not for volume if it did for harmony. They staggered slightly as they måde slow headway along the street.

Then the singing stopped. The poilus stared straight in front of them. In the darkening shadows across the street the Canadian major followed their line of vision.

Three German officers in the field-grey of the erstwhile enemy had turned a corner and were bearing down on the trio of FrFenchmen. One of them appeared to be of high rank. A monocle rested over the left eye. They strode along in the quick, precision-like German military style directly toward the tipsy Frenchmen.

Suddenly there was a cry. Voices, thick with wine, shouted something that sounded like "La Boche." The Frenchmen galvanized into action and charged the approaching Germans. There was a flurry of arms and legs. Blows landed on twisting bodies. Then out of the semi-darkness emerged the flying figure of a khaki-clad officer.

Grasping a poilu in each hand he bumped two French heads together, at the same time rapping out two or three commands in typical parade-square style. The Frenchmen immediately ceased hostilities, came to attention and saluted.

"I gave 'em hell in my own language," Vanluven related, "but I doubt if they understood the words although they did the meaning. They looked a bit sheepish, and I think one of them winked at me. They saluted again and turned away and as they rounded the corner they had resumed their arm-in-arm style and were singing a ribald French song."

"The German officers, one of whom was a major, saluted me. Another of them, an exceptionally fine-looking chap, spoke to me in perfect English. 'You shall hear more of this, Herr Major,' he smiled as he turned away with his companions."

He was right. A week or ten days later Vinluven received the surprise of his life when a written communication invited him to appear in Cologne Square on a certain date.

His curiosity piqued, he put in an appearance with two fellow officers at the designated place and received another surprise when he was conducted to the late Marshal Von Hindenburg. The German was seated in a large, handsome room surrounded by officers of his staff. Included in the latter were the three Germans who had been involved in the street affair of a few nights previous.

The Field-Marshal pinned the Iron Cross on Vanluven's breast and thanked him for the service he had rendered. Staff officers shook his hand and complimented him for his action. The rescued officers were profuse in their thanks as they shook hands and saluted the Canadian.

The German major who had spoken to Vanluven on the street following the affair insisted that the Canadian officers partake of refreshment in an adjoining room. It was during this pleasant afterlude that Vanluven discovered that his host, the man he had rescued from the poilus, was none other than Gount Eric Von Ullrich, a nephew of Field-Marshal Von Hindenburg.

The census officers being bound to secrecy, there can be no such thing as obtaining from them a statement of the population of this city, but we have reason to believe that the returns will foot up to about 9,950, which is a gain of 434 since 1881, when the population was given as 9,516. Taking into account the decay of the lumbering industry; the virtual wiping out here of that important industry upon which the trade of Belleville was largely dependent; the loss of the axe factory, the stove foundry and other unfortunate industries upon which not less than one thousand persons were dependent, the increase although small cannot be regarded other than satisfactory. Had not Belleville within it the elements of progress, it could not have stood such a drain upon its population and yet be able to show an increase in population and in assessed value, which latter fact is demonstrated by the assessor's returns. Let all the people of Belleville unite in praising our lovely and progressive little city instead of — as some of them have done decrying and running it down — and the effect will be beneficial to the city and to all who have an interest in its welfare.

Europe Has Its Joke With the Haughty Huns

By D. G. JOHNSTON

Of London Newspaper Services, Ltd.

When the patient sits up in bed and can make a joke, even if it is at his own condition, it is a good sign. Holland, Belgium, Norway and to a lesser degree, perhaps, occupied France just seem to be reaching the stage in their convalescence. The Nazis can take their money, their freedom, their food and even some of their workers, but they cannot take away their sense of humor. The Germans, no doubt, would decree that even jokes are verboten—but very often they do not realize that a joke is being made and, when they do, they find it difficult to deal with it without looking even more ridiculous. You cannot put a joke in a concentration camp.

Belgians gave their rulers many headaches during the occupation of 1914-18. All sorts of decrees were made in an effort to stop subtle digs at the army of occupation. The Belgians have not forgotten the art of making Germans feel fools. When the Nazis in Antwerp came out with their edict that all Jews should wear a yellow armlet, the Jews obeyed. But so also did every other citizen. The whole of Antwerp was wearing yellow armlets; The edict was cancelled within 48 hours!

The favorite Belgian joke at the expense of their conquerors depends upon a pun on the word "Manche," which means "sleeve," and is also the French equivalent of the English Channel. Not long ago when quisling Degrelle had explained to the people of Liege why Germany was bound to win the war, they retorted with a flood of facetious "Situations Wanted" notices on the walls. "Paviors wanted, to make a road on the Manche and tailors to shorten it."

Their failure to cross the English Channel is the German's rawest spot and the wits of the occupied countries play on it like a boxer on his opponent's cut eye. A Dutchman was sentenced to prison when he told a shopgirl "Serve those German soldiers first. They are in a hurry to leave for England." The Dutchman was unlucky, but there are many ready to carry on where he left off.

One of the best "Channel" stories concerns a Dutch boy who was accosted by a German officer at Flushing and asked what a certain statue represented. "Admiral de Ruyter who s-s-s-sailed up the Medway and d-d-defeated the English," stammered the boy.

"You'd b-b-better imitate him and n-n-n-not me," replied the boy.

Another invasion joke in Holland concerns the soldier who went into a shop for cigarettes and was told they kept a special brand packed in watertight tins for German soldiers. Rainy days give many opportunities for sly digs. A German soldier boarded a tramcar in Amsterdam in heavy rain with water running off his coat. "What! Have you got back already?" asked the conductor, and it is not hard to see the halfsmiles of the Dutch passengers.

Some time ago Seyss-Inquart had to order his troops in Holland to stop singing their favorite "We Are Sailing Against England" because so often the boys who always follow marching soldiers would shout on the three drumbeats between verse and chorus "Swim! Swim! Swim!"

Another effort was that of the bookseller in The Hague who was threatened with punishment if he did not remove a photograph of the Dutch Royal Family from his window. He replaced it with a picture of the Fuehrer, but he did not replace the other books in his display, which was a special one of Frau Braun, the famous Dutch swimming coach's book entitled "How Do I Learn to Swim?"

The Dutch are undoubtedly the boldest in showing their feelings towards their conquerors in subtle ways. The wearing of orange—in memory of the royal family—is forbidden. But can the occupying forces object to women curtsying when the traffic lights turn orange? Red, white and blue, the national colors, are forbidden, but shopkeepers seem to have an extraordinary supply of every day articles made in these colors—for marking rings, for instance. Thus in a thousand ways the Dutch keep alight the flame of patriotism and the hope of freedom and at the same time insult their oppressors in a way which is difficult to stop.

A good story from Holland recently concerned the woman who, charged with listening-in to British broadcasts, pleaded that she had not used her wireless since she listened to Berlin in September and that the last thing she heard was that the Germans would be in London in a week. She quite naturally, therefore, pleaded that she was justified in assuming that the London broadcast was being put out by Dr. Goebbels.

The Danes are slowly recovering from the shock of invasion and their natural good humor is difficult to suppress even in the face of hardships. A Danish newsboy was forced to sell the German-controlled newspaper. He did not want to, but he could not refuse. He therefore cried his wares "Eight pages of lies, eight pages of advertisements! Paper, paper. Eight pages of lies. Eight pages of advertisements." It was hardy surprising that no one bought his paper—but quite a number of people slipped him a coin.

The slight in all countries which the Germans resent most is the way people get up and go out when they enter a cafe. They issued a decree that no one was to leave within 15 minutes of a German entering a cafe or public place. The answer was simple — the diners simply took out their watches, placed them on the table and exactly on the expiration of 15 minutes rose in a body and left, thus demonstrating how insult can be added to injury!

The French have always been one of the wittiest races. As they recover, their wit will become more biting. There are many jokes circulating—which do not flatter their conquerors. One of the neatest defines a pig as an animal which is born in Germany, fattened in France, salted in the Channel and canned in England.

Sometimes they pull the legs of the German soldiers unmercifully. For instance, when they were asked what was the significance of the double cross they were wearing as a brooch (the Cross of Lorraine, symbol of General de Gaulle and Free France), they replied "It is the very latest fashion. All smart women are wearing it." Whereupon the Germans went to the shops, bought brooches with their bogus marks and sent them home to their wives. . . !

A good Paris story takes the form of a riddle. What is the difference between an Anglophile and an Anglophobe? The answer is "One says 'I hope those British win', the other says, 'I hope those damned British will win'."

The cinemas with their darkness offer a wonderful opportunity for the conquered people to get in their digs. The jokes are often local, understood only by those in the news. Some are understandable even by the Germans, however, such as the "Glug, glug, glug," the sound made by a drowning man, chorused by Paris audiences when news reels show German soldiers. Cinemas are often cleared. Sometimes the Germans "make examples" of members of the audience picked at random. On one occasion they threw out one man from every row, then returned and settled down to enjoy the film. When the lights went on there was not a single Frenchman in the audience!

The tide of laughter over Europe is rising. It is not often happy laughter, but it is a form of sabotage, sapping the morale of the occupying armies, a weapon to which the German, who is the least genuinely humorous of all men, is particularly susceptible.

QUADS ARE BORN IN CHICAGO BUT CHILDREN DIE

CHILDREN WEAK

Chicago, May 17—(AP)—Mrs. Frances Adams, 20-year-old wife of a lunchroom chef gave birth to quadruplets—the second set on record in Chicago—but all the infants died today less than seven hours after they were born.

The quadruplets, all girls, were born three months prematurely. The first born was weakest and had to be placed in an artificial respirator immediately. The others were placed in incubators.

In the early morning hours all the infants showed signs of weakening and were placed in the respirator in shifts. Frances, the third of the quads, was the first to die. Charlene, the fourth born, and Margaret, the first, died within five minutes of Frances.

The fourth and tiniest of the quadruplets Marie, who weighed one pound, four ounces, died approximately three hours after her sisters succumbed. Mrs. Adams' condition was described as "good". The children were her first.

Very Light in Weight

The young mother gave birth to the quadruplets less than a half hour after her arrival at hospital last night. None of the infants weighed more than a pound and a half.

Wrapped in a blanket and carried in the arms of a husky taxicab driver, Mrs. Adams arrived at the hospital at 8.05 p.m. The first baby was born at 8.26, the second at 8.28, the third at 8.30 and the fourth a minute later.

Edward Adams, 22, the father, was at work when a hospital attendant telephoned the news.

"No kidding?" was the only response. Then he dashed to the hospital.

"I feel weak", Adams gasped on his arrival. "We both wanted a girl but we didn't expect four".

Mrs. Adams, who married last November, is five feet, two inches tall, and normally weighs 106 pounds.

Car loadings of revenue producing freight on Canadian railways, a total of 2,812,587, last year were the greatest since 1930, about 10.3 per cent more than in 1939 and 15.8 per cent in 1938.

London (CP)—Boats of the Royal National Lifeboat Institution have rescued about 750 lives since the beginning of 1941—an average of more than six every day.

MEASURING THE YEARS

But the oldster crowding seventy knows that time is swift of wing.

The youngster looks at forty as if two-score years are long,
But the oldster smiles to hear him, for he knows the lad is wrong.

Then what is age, you question, if it isn't told by years,
And how are we to know it when the end of youth appears?

Well, Time is swift of feather but the heart of man is stout,
And years alone won't age him till his strength has given out.

The heart alone can tell him when old age has caught him here.

You'd Be Surprised!

THE SPIRIT OF '76

"The Spirit of '76" is probably the best known painting in America.

It is reproduced more often than any other painting in the United States and virtually every American is familiar with it.

Yet comparatively few people have ever seen the original.

"The Spirit of '76" was painted by Archibald M. Willard and it was completed a few months before the opening of the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia in 1876.

After being exhibited at the centennial of the signing of the Declaration of Independence and taken to many other parts of the country by request, it was presented to the city of Marblehead, Massachusetts.

Willard at first gave this painting the title of "Yankee Doodle" and for that reason it is presumed that the seventy-sixers in the picture are marching to the tune of Yankee Doodle.

"The Spirit of '76" captured the fancy of the throngs who attended the Centennial Exposition of 1876 in Philadelphia and it has remained a favorite painting in America ever since.

Archibald M. Willard achieved what many greater artists have sought but failed to do. He gave his country its favorite painting, which has grown in favor and popularity with the passing of the years.

No matter what critics may say about "The Spirit of '76" as a work of art, Willard seems to have put on canvas something that suggests to Americans the spirit of the men who fought the Revolution.

Picton and District

Department Will Establish Military Camp At Point Petre

Picton, May 17 — Point Petre is to be the scene of a big military camp. Already a total of 350 men, and a staff of 79, have arrived at the location, which is on the shore of Lake Ontario at the same spot the Anti-Aircraft Battery was stationed at the outbreak of war.

The men arrived Wednesday and Thursday and consisted of an anti-tank battery. Later it is expected that an anti-aircraft battery and other units will be in camp there. Preparations have been made to accommodate 650 men.

Buildings Erected

Five buildings have been erected in the grove of trees on the ground, but the men will live in tents. Supplies arrived by truck from Kingston.

This makes Prince Edward a real military centre, since two bombing and gunnery schools are located in the county, at Mountain View and Picton and companies of the 2nd Battalion of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment are located at Picton and Wellington.

Armchair Club Meets

Thirty members of the Armchair Club enjoyed a pleasant evening at H. U. Pyne's cottage at West Lake, Wednesday night, when John R. Lewis of the Canadian Industries Limited, showed two reels of sound motion pictures. The first was entitled "Wings over the Wide World" and dealt with flying. The second showed operations at the C.I.L. salt plant at Windsor, Ont., this being in color and showing the work of processing salt. Mr. Lewis stated that there were great salt beds in the Windsor area and sufficient to last thousands of years. This is the largest salt manufacturing plant in Canada. A pleasant social time was spent following the meeting.

The Boy Scouts held a meeting Thursday night to complete plans for their annual Apple Day on Saturday.

R. A. F. Concert

Members of the R. A. F. presented their first concert at the Bombing and Gunnery School recreation hall, before a large crowd of airmen and their civilian friends, Wednesday evening. Perfectly presented, the show offered a wide variety of entertainment with every number being encored. A new stage, with a splendid lighting system, has just been completed and made an effective setting. Flying Officer H. K. Mitchell, in charge of entertainment, was responsible for the show, and also took a leading part. Pilot Officer Wodehouse was master of ceremonies, keeping everyone in good humour with his stories. Four local girls assisted on the program, these being Misses Phyllis and Shirley Newman, Phyllis Leavitt and Frances Pearce. They assisted in the three choruses, the finale being a beautiful rendition of "The Holy City". An action song, "One Finger, One Thumb", was also very popular. Two vocal solos each were given by A. C. Phillips and Cpl. Snaue; A. C. Devon gave harmonica solos and L. A. C. Lawson excelled in cornet solos. Flying Officer Hince, dressed to represent Hitler, gave a timely skit. One of the highlights was the Indian chorus, with painted bodies, feathers and tomahawks, the braves gave songs before discovering a white woman (Frances Pearce) whom they bound to a tree. In came the hero on a wooden horse to knock out the Indians and rescue the maiden.

Community singing was led by T. O. Mitchell and Group Captain C. H. Keith, O.C., spoke briefly. Throughout the program, there was a variety of clever skits, done in professional style.

Miss Pearce's lovely voice was heard in "Rose of Tralee" and "I Love You Truly" and she led in singing "Bicycle Built for Two". The Misses Newman gave a beautiful rendition of Barccerole from Tales of Hoffman and "Trees" by Joyce Kilmar.

Cpl. Rigby, physical training instructor, and former English boxing champion, demonstrated many holds and methods of breaking up undesirable situations. Cliff Abrahams received much applause for his feats of magic, done in his usual clever and mystifying manner. The National Anthem brought this pleasant evening to a close. The same concert was given Tuesday evening for the airmen only.

Sustains Torn Scalp

Mrs. Earl Van Horne of Picton was taken to P.E.C. Hospital early Wednesday evening, suffering from a badly torn scalp, and a severely cut leg, sustained in a car accident on Main St., East, just in front of Geo. Miller's garage. The car in which she was riding was in collision with a sedan, driven by Aircraftman J. H. Hodden, R.C.A.F., Picton.

Both cars were proceeding towards Picton but when the car driven by Earl Van Horne went to turn into Spencer St., it was in collision with the Hodden car and turned over twice. Earl Van Horne and two other passengers besides Mrs. Van Horne, Mrs. Jessie Lawson and Mrs. Wm. Beasley (nee Dorothy Dunlop) suffered from shock, cuts and bruises. The occupants of the car driven by Hodden, Sergeant Robert Lundgren and Misses Lola Channel and Mary Clegg were uninjured. Both cars were badly damaged. Police investigated and two charges of dangerous driving and reckless driving were preferred against Aircraftman Hodden.

Team Frightened

Irvine Unger of Yerexville was badly injured while at work on his farm on Tuesday, while rolling a field, the tongue of the roller broke, frightening the team of horses who bolted. Mr. Unger was thrown to the ground and the roller passed over him, fracturing his spine in three places and crushing his side badly. A neighbor, W. B. Blakely rushed the injured man to the local hospital, where his condition is very serious. A neighbor of Mr. Unger's, Everett DeLong, met with a similar accident on the same day but escaped serious injury.

Mr. Harold Haddon has accepted a position in Jones' grocery.

Mr. Maurice Jenkins has purchased the residence of the late Thos. Crandall on Jane Street.

Malone

Melrose — Mothers' Day program was observed in the United Church on Sunday morning with special music by the choir and the pastor delivered a fitting address on the theme of "Mother". There was also a splendid attendance.

The May meeting of the Women's Missionary Society was held at the home of the Misses McLaren on Wednesday, May 7th, with Mrs. C. Haight as group leader.

The Y. P. U. held their meeting on Tuesday evening, May 6th, with a good attendance, with Miss Jean McLaren as Missionary Convener.

In Toronto on May 3rd, the marriage took place of Wanda McInroy, youngest daughter of Mr. Wallace McInroy and the late Mrs. McInroy, Bonarlaw and Wilson Campbell, eldest son of Mrs. G. Campbell of Bonarlaw and the late T. W. Campbell. The marriage was performed by Rev. J. E. Munro. The couple were attended by Miss Joycelyn Flooks and Mr. Phillip Gilbert, both of Toronto.

Dr. G. H. Hammond of the Division of Entomology, Science Service, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, who has been making a study of white grubs and methods of combatting them for the past three years, has again returned to Marmora to continue his work. Experiments are being carried out on the farm of Mr. Donald Shannon, Marmora Township. This is the year when the grubs fly as beetles or "June Bugs" as they are commonly called and they are likely to be very numerous.

Dr. Hammond has rented Mrs. F. N. Marett's cottage at Crowe Lake for the summer.

The regular monthly meeting of Marmora Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. W.A. Sanderson on Wednesday evening with the President, Mrs. H. W. Sabine in the chair. After the singing of The Maple Leaf and the Institute Ode, Dr. W. P. Fletcher offered a short prayer. The roll call was answered by paying 25 cents membership dues for 1941-42. Twenty-eight responded. Minutes of April meeting were read and confirmed. Bills and communications were dealt with. Delegates to the District Annual Convention to be held in Madoc on June 5th were appointed and it is hoped arrangements may be made so that all members who wish to attend may be able to do so. A number of articles for the British War Victims that had been completed were handed in and one quilt will be finished on Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. D. Thomson.

Mrs. F. M. Rutherford, District President, conducted the election of officers for the coming year, which resulted as follows:—

The first call is to the home where the necessity of health and economy must be stressed and secondly the War Effort must be pushed to the limit if we are to win'. Mrs. Rutherford was tendered a hearty vote of thanks.

The program consisted of a duet by Mrs. Prentice and Mrs. Wells and a "Vegetable contest". After singing "God Save the King", lunch was served by the committee.

"I Was Young Then"

By GENEVIEVE FOURNIA

Picton, May 17—Recently I was associated with several hundred women for a few days, and had a chance to observe them rather closely. I think not more than a dozen, stood out in that crowd, and captured your attention. But that dozen were women worth looking at. Everything about them seemed admirable, the suitability of their clothes, their carriage, their appearance of good grooming, and the air of vitality, magnetism and well-being, that they radiated. I got to know one of the twelve rather well. She had hyacinth-blue eyes and dark hair; and there was an aura of alertness, happiness, and warmth about her. Her clothes suited her. She wore a smart, grey, wool-sheer dress, a hyacinth-blue corsage, and a chic bangkok sailor of the same hyacinth blue. You would have guessed her age as thirty-five. When she told me she had five sons, and one daughter I could scarcely believe her. When she also said one son of nineteen was with the R.C.A.F. in England, and her eldest son on the ocean at the time bound for the Old Country, I knew I had guessed her age wrongly. She was forty-three; but I am sure she could have passed for an attractive sister of those sons.

I ask her how she did it, and she laughed, and said it was a matter of environment. Her mother had had eight children, had never lost her slim figure, and had always worn her clothes well. That was in the days before "permanents" but her mother had lovely hair, and always kept it waved. Her father had been proud of her mother, and constantly reminded his daughter, that he wanted her to be like her. He always said, that even when the family was small, he had never seen her mother come down stairs in the morning, without being fully dressed, and with her hair neatly arranged.

This woman had married young. Her husband was a doctor. When she was twenty-five she said, and had three children, she began to put on a little weight. Her husband casually suggested, that a little attention to selecting her food wisely, would overcome this. After that she drank her coffee clear, and refused candy, pie, cake or any dessert except fruit. She said she really didn't find this hard after the first few weeks and she had never varied this procedure. She eats fruits, vegetables, milk, eggs, one serving a day of lean meat, one potato and two slices of whole wheat bread a day. Her complexion was clear and her figure slim and supple

She said her mother-in-law kept at her always about having becoming and suitable clothes even when she was tied down with a small family. Her mother-in-law always reminded her, that a husband is proud of a wife who dresses well.

Her dentist was the fourth person in her environment, responsible for her marvellous appearance. He was terribly strict about having teeth attended to every six months, about brushing teeth after each meal and using a mouth wash three times a day. So this woman laughed, and said, "so you see, I couldn't be careless with these four people keeping after me."

She was very proud of her only daughter, who is just sixteen. She also is a very lovely girl, tall and blonde, who appears eighteen. Her mother only allows her dates on Friday and Saturday nights, as she is still in school.

On Saturday afternoon this woman was going to play the piano for a military social gathering. She lives in a city where many men of the different forces are stationed. Many of the women's organizations supply entertainment for the boys. Because refreshments were to be served she took her daughter along to help.

One officer of about thirty-six, made a big fuss over the daughter. His attentions were too marked to please this woman. She walked up to him, and said, "Major Blank, I would have you know that my daughter is just sixteen years old and would ask you to treat her accordingly" knowing this woman did me good and I would like to have known the life and interests, of those other eleven women, who seemed to me outstanding in that gathering.

Free French Leader Appeals To Syrians To "Take Up Arms"

London, May 17.—(CP)—Gen. Georges Catroux, Free French leader in the Middle East, warned Friday that 800 tons of arms and munitions have been transferred from French stores in Syria to Baghdad, capital of Iraq, and appealed to Syrians to "take up arms" against the enemy.

"If you should choose to take up arms to chase out the enemy", Gen. Catroux said in a broadcast quoted by the British Broadcasting Corporation, "I am at your gates with ardent (Free) French cohorts."

Gen. Catroux added that "enemy" planes had landed at Beirut, Aleppo and Damascus, and that 17 enemy aircraft had landed at one airdrome in a single morning.

(The BBC report did not amplify Gen. Catroux' reference to "enemy" planes but reports from Cairo said Nazi shock forces supported by aircraft were reported moving toward Iraq to support that government in its guerilla war with Britain.)

The bride looked charming in a pale blue suit with hat to match, with a corsage of roses. The young couple were attended by Miss Kay Genereaux, sister of the groom, and Mr. Jack Murphy of Belleville.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served to the immediate friends of the bridal couple at Dicken's Tea Room. The groom's gift to the bride was a cut glass buffet set, to the bridesmaid, silver cream and sugar service; to the best man he gave a gold pen knife.

SECRET PLANE USED

London, May 17 (CP Cable)—The British Broadcasting Corporation in a news emission to Germany today said Rudolf Hess flew to Scotland last Saturday in a secret plane—one of the latest long-range reconnaissance machines that have not yet been in service with the German air force.

Annual Music Festival At Queen Victoria School

Over two hundred parents, together with other interested spectators filled the auditorium of Queen Victoria School to capacity on Friday afternoon as the children of Pine Street elementary school staged their annual Musical Festival. A delightfully decorated stage, across which was tastily arranged large banks of seasonable flowers provided a suitable setting for the well-arranged program which demonstrated the exceptional musical ability of the children taking part.

Miss Phyllis May, supervisor and instructress of music for Belleville public schools and the teachers assisting her in the training of the pupils came in for much warm comment on the part of the parents for the high standard attained by the children taking part in the program. Mr. A. C. Wilkin principal expressed the pleasure of the staff in the keen interest taken in the work by the parents as was exemplified by their attendance at the school. In addition to the selections of solos, duets, grade choruses and folk dances which were much appreciated the program was interspersed by numbers played by the school band, under the direction of Mr. Alfred Cooper.

Children Complimented

Mr. H. B. Fetterly, Chairman of the Board of Education, complimented the children upon the splendid manner in which they rendered their various numbers and also commended Mr. Cooper for his activities with the school band. He referred to the recognized value of teaching music in schools and stated that "music was one of the greatest courses of study introduced into primary schools." He was indeed proud of the public schools of Belleville stated Mr. Fetterly in conclusion.

As Chairman of Queen Victoria School, Rev. W. J. Walker stated it had often been said that Belleville was not a musical centre. This assertion had arisen out of the fact that hitherto there had always been a scarcity of talent for city choirs, but the public schools of the city are rapidly remedying that situation, he said. Mr. Walker hoped for the time when, as the result of the present training pupils are receiving in schools, there will be musical festivals staged in the city. Queen Victoria School is doing nobly in the musical training of its pupils, he concluded.

Following is the program:

Tubbable Tailleur

By PRUNELLA WOOD

Trim tailored town or travel suits in washable cotton fabrics are important news for summer.

Clothes appropriate for travel are stressed by one outstanding designer this season, on the theory that American women will be doing much dashing back and forth by car, train and plane this summer, to visit husbands, brothers and sweethearts in Army camps.

Perfect for summer wear is the suit sketched at left, made of a washable, color-fast cotton twill in a Glen Urquart plaid that looks like wool suiting. The fabric is heavy enough to tailor beautifully, porous enough for summer comfort. This plaid is in green, brown and white, and others are shown in gray and in black and white checks.

The jacket is hipbone length, with smoothly tailored shoulders, one-button closing and rounded corners. The skirt achieves fullness without sacrificing its slender line by means of a wide pleat in front.

Slenderizing Panel Frock

PATTERN 4766

By ANNE ADAMS

Of course you can look slim, no matter what the scales may read! Here's proof in Pattern 4766 by Anne Adams. Designed to flatter the thirty-six-to-fifty sized figure, it both accents your height and takes away from your width across. The two outstanding slenderizing details are the tapered, all-down-the-front panel and the seaming that slants in from either side, over the smooth hips, letting you omit the belt if you like. Even in back, there's a becoming effect in a low-pointed waist-seam with neat darts above. More darts at the front shoulders hold-in the softness of the bodice. The front panel may form a point at the neckline, or you might have a squared neck and add a pretty lace-edged collar of contrast or self-fabric.

Pattern 4766 is available in women's sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50. Size 36 takes 3 7-8 yards 39 inch fabric.

Send TWENTY CENTS (20c) in coins (stamps cannot be accepted) for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly SIZE, NAME, ADDRESS and STYLE NUMBER.

Send your order to The Ontario Intelligencer Pattern Department, Belleville.

Fashion Flashes

COMING ALONG for wear soon are fresh prints on white ground. Crinkled white silk crepe is used for a little afternoon frock made with plunging neckline and groups of unpressed pleats on the skirt. Flowers in lilac and purple, with green leaves, make the print, and there is a fitted section in green grosgrain at the midriff.

DEMURE CHARM is the theme of some of those tiny Victorian bonnets seen about town these days. One pompadour model has red poppies, strawberries and red velvet bows on navy straw. Narrow red velvet ribbons tied under the chin.

A CHARM ALL THEIR OWN marks the new Spring dance frocks made of fragile layers of pink and mauve silk marquisette posed over peach-colored taffeta. Ruffles mark the off-shoulder line, and there are flower appliques in one corner of the taffeta slip.

IT'S A CLOSE RACE between suits and coats this season. A grand coat is made in a basket-weave woolen in a golden wheat shade and has groups of unpressed pleats on either side of the easy skirt. Brown leather belt studded with gilt nail-heads.

IT'S NICE to find a hat that is neither too dressy nor too tailored. Such a model is a dashing affair of pale yellow felt with high, tapering crown and wide profile brim. Trimmed with a cluster of coq feathers in golden yellow.

THERE'S ALWAYS DRAMA in the black and white theme. A black and white fine scroll print is used for a handsome evening ensemble in heavy silk crepe. The jacket has the black scroll lines picked out with black sequins and there are black sequin bands on the bodice.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Wise Woman Learns Art of Letting Herself Be Loved

We've heard a good deal in recent years about equal partnerships in love.

Is it true, as I'm beginning to suspect, that it is just as natural now as it ever was for the man — the leader and protector, as well as the lover — to accept a good deal more than a half share in so-called love partnerships?

Just because so much has been said these latter years about women's independence, just because so many young wives have held jobs and done the housework, have young men come to prefer the girl who is not only deeply loving and devoted but who unselfishly insists on standing squarely on her own two feet?

Or are they still likely to be beguiled, as I fear they always have been, by the self-indulgent coquette who makes herself irresistible by demanding that everything in the world be done for her while she does nothing in return?

Here's a case of a girl whose loss of a lover seems to be due to her complete unselfishness and her innocence of the age-old trickery through which women hold their men.

This girl, Grace M., has been deserted by her boy friend. The following letter tells her story:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I had been engaged for two happy years. The wedding date was set and the time drawing near. And now I have lost him. He cares for another girl and has told me so. It is worse than losing my life. I love him with my whole being and always shall.

"And now I can do nothing but cry all night long. Sleep and food are out of the question. Is it my own fault? Do I deserve this misery? Please tell me, Miss Fairfax.

"My boy friend always has had a small salary. I got a job so that we might both save for our new home. Besides that, I never would let Tom take me out, so we could save that much more. We'd sit at home and read, or play games, or walk in the park. We had so many things to plan.

"I thought no two people ever loved each other as we did. In my mind we were just as firmly bound together as though we were married.

"About three months ago he met a girl who began to scheme to get him away from me. She wouldn't lift a finger to help him as I did, and I know she doesn't really love him. But she has him, while here I am with my life ruined and over."

"Grace M."

In this case, at least — and who knows in how many others? — it is heartbreaking to admit that abounding love on the girl's part has not been enough to save the day. Did Tom feel too sure of this girl who so generously adored him and who gave up years of her precious youth to slaving in the interest of his future comfort?

Perhaps it would be fairer to say that he was uncomfortable because he really wasn't playing the man's part in this love situation. When a purely selfish siren came along, who gave him a chance to do all the loving, all the working, and likewise all the worrying, he fell for her and for the chance to play a completely masculine role.

We can never love too much, but if we are women, it is perhaps well that we keep some part of our love secret, so that our sweethearts may never be quite sure just what treasures our hearts hold for them. Women have to learn that there is an art in loving as in letting themselves be loved. It's tragic, indeed, when we lose a lover merely because we didn't know how to weave a few charming tissues of perfectly harmless deceit.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

INFORMAL INVITATIONS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am being married in May at an informal church wedding with an informal dinner and reception afterward at a restaurant.

1. I understand that it is proper to send informal notes of invitation to this kind of wedding. Are these to be written by my mother? If so, how are they worded?

In writing these invitations may they be concluded with R.s.v.p. at the bottom? If this is not done, how are we to know if the invited guests accept the invitation?

2. Is it necessary to use black ink for these invitations, or is blue ink also proper?

T.

1. Yes, for your informal wedding and reception, written notes of invitation are the proper thing. Since your mother is to be the hostess, the best form is for her to write these notes.

The notes should be worded with a request for answer indicated in the notes; it is not correct to write R.s.v.p. on these invitations. The note might read:

Therese and Bob are to be married informally in the ——— Church, on Tuesday, May twentieth, at ——— o'clock, and we all want very much to have you and Tom come to the ceremony, and directly afterward, to the reception at the ——— Restaurant. Do please tell us that you will both be with us.

Dearest love to you both.

Sincerely,

Signature

2. Either black ink (which is my favorite) or dark blue is correct.

MALE ATTIRE FOR JUNE WEDDING

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

For a June wedding, when the men in the bridal party are wearing blue coats and white flannel trousers, are white or black shoes proper? What style and color of tie should be worn? Should gloves be worn?

Bride

When the groom and his attendants wear blue coats and white flannel trousers, they usually wear black shoes. Sometimes, in midsummer weddings in the country, they wear white shoes or white with tan or black, but these kinds of shoes give too much of a sports effect.

Dark-blue four-in-hand ties are in excellent taste with this attire, smartly all-blue, or, if preferred, blue with small white or gray stripes. Very often the men wear bow ties . . . but only if they are really becoming. The all-blue bow tie is best. The ties should definitely be on the conservative side. Gloves are not worn by the men wearing this type of attire.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Reading Habit Can Be Encouraged in Children as Early as Two

The nourishment that goes to his stomach isn't the only food the human requires for his health, his growth and his development. He needs, too, mental food which is provided for him in the form of teaching, companionship, conversation, books and other intellectual stimuli.

The child is often undernourished in some of these respects. In these modern days, when families are small, he often lacks companions of his own age. His conversational opportunities are limited. There are so many other means of spending time, that development and encouragement of the reading habits is neglected.

This is something that should be begun in early childhood. It can begin, in fact, as early as two. A technique designed to teach children of pre-school age to read and speak by playing a game at home with objects and lettered cards, has been developed. I know that it is effective, because we have used it with the Quints, with the result that they had a recognition vocabulary of 250 words at six.

After this game there can be the picture books that tell simple stories, followed by other books graded as to the age of the reader right up to the five-foot shelf of classics.

One of the best means of encouraging a love of books and reading in the child is for the parents to read to them regularly. The Sunday evening reading hour, at my home is something to which I feel I owe a great deal of happiness. After my father had read us David Copperfield, for example, I had a natural inclination to go on to all of Dickens' stories.

Frequently parents are alarmed by the course children's reading takes as they get older. They think they have them headed for the classics, and are very much alarmed to find them eagerly devouring thriller stories. I have a letter from a man which says:

"I have always encouraged my boy to read good books. We have Scott, Dickens, Dumas, Shakespeare in the house, but he won't read them. He prefers detective stories, and those new comic magazines and all sorts of weird yarns. I am afraid of what those things will do to his mind and his imagination. He is twelve years old."

My first reaction when I read that letter was: "I wonder what the father and mother read?" I suspect Dickens and Scott is not their own steady fare. Do they remember their own childhood reading? When I was a boy "Jesse James" and "Buffalo Bill" were the books the boys read, and our fathers also used to wonder what the younger generation was coming to. When they found a boy with his nose in a Jesse James or Buffalo Bill thriller, into the stove it would go. Yet I don't think that kind of reading ever did us much harm. To the contrary, I think it had one very good effect. It cultivated the reading habit. As we grew older, our tastes improved until we chose the classics.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

SUNDAY'S horoscope indicates that there may be a state of much bustling, excitement and stress but without any encouraging promise of success achievement or satisfaction. Such disturbing influence affects all phases of life, with dangers and distresses to be manipulated along lines of least disfavor by sound sense and rigid self-control, fortitude and optimism. Tempest, strife, reckless behavior would not prove constructive in any difficult situation. Public affairs are stressed.

Those whose birthday it is may find it constructive to have a definite and decisive recognition of responsibility and obligations when stress and storm seem to undermine the life and its foundations. Persistent efforts sane and courageous attack of portentous problems, with fortitude, prudence and patience rather than despair or turbulence, may swerve difficulties and trials into safe harbors, but self-control, calmness and balance are indispensable.

A child born on this day may require a careful education, both by training, precept and discipline, to build up its patience, fortitude and courage to meet life's trials and tribulations with philosophic calm. Impulsive and passionate indulgences would prove calamitous.

For Monday May 19

Monday's astrological forecast should be for some measure of success in some unpromising situations in which writings, documents or other tricky state of affairs may spell loss and defeat. Funds as well as peace of mind are endangered, by carelessness or treachery, with elders or superiors antagonistic. With vigilance, conservatism and diplomacy there are many benefits in sight.

Those whose birthday it is may reap a successful and happy year by exercising much care with writings documents and contracts as well as tact and consideration with superiors, elders or those in authority. Loss and trouble may be turned to success, expansion and good fortune by shrewd and sagacious effort.

A child born on this day may have fair success, if it keeps alert to treachery with documents and writings. It should avoid offending elders and superiors.

MAKE-UP Magic

THE BEAUTY BAZAAR

by Delight Dixon

Some new tricks of the trade to put your facial ensemble in the pink of condition and suit it to your hairdo

PINK marks a high spot in today's smartest and most lady-like make-up. Delicate skin tones are enhanced by the use of an equally delicate tone of face powder. Lips and cheeks are highlighted and given fragile tenderness (as natural as a baby's blush) with a rouge of that shade. It matches lips and cheeks and blends with subtlety into the powder and natural complexion.

But there is more to this season's make-up than powder and rouge. The ensemble is spotlighted and should be the goal of every feminine heart. The ensemble is only correctly complete when make-up blends with hairdo and clothes. So, for a truly successful beauty formula which any girl can prescribe for herself, blend the correct shade of make-up over the skin, use great care in making the application, top off facial perfection with a smart hairdo with whatever type of pompadour or bangs please you, and see that your dress carries out the charm and delicacy of this a day-in-May ensemble. Then, for good measure, use a perfume that will make you feel as lovely as you look.

Pink may be used with flattery on all complexions. Even the tanned skin is given freshness and delicacy with subtle pink lip rouge and a light blending of rouge on cheeks which have been powdered.

If a foundation is used with this makeup, it is important that it is the same shade as, or lighter than, the skin. For the naturally fine-textured skin a lotion type of powder base is best. Skins of coarser texture, however, will find the cream-powder foundation most harmonious with the skin and make-up.

When the foundation is dry, or the creamy type thoroughly blended, pat on powder. And because the application of powder is the true base of the make-up, it is necessary that it is patted well into the foundation and blended into nothingness. The powder in this set of cosmetics is of exceptionally good texture. It is not a heavy powder, but does a noble job of covering slight imperfections and gives the skin the illusion of smoothness and fineness. (And I've never met a girl who didn't literally love any make-up aid which could do that!) Pat on a liberal amount of powder, not forgetting your throat and underchin and, while the skin is covered with excess powder, use cheek rouge.

Cheek rouge is worn higher this year. Although it is of vital importance that the color is blended over the most becoming region, try for a new look this season. If you've been wearing your rouge just smack on your cheeks without giving much thought to its proper placing, try, I urge you, to make the application a trifle higher than usual and perhaps a little more toward your temples and ears. This placing of cheek rouge will fit into the ensemble and help accent youthful facial contours.

A second patting on of powder aids in blending cheek rouge and at the same time gives the skin the appearance of added softness and fineness of texture. Then use a complexion brush for removing surplus powder and for blending the outline of cheek rouge into nothingness. Don't let sharp outlines of cheek rouge give this delicate make-up harsh lines. Brush all powder from around the eyes and eyelids.

Because this beauty formula can only be successful if the steps leading to the complete make-up are correctly applied, it is very important that the application of lip rouge is perfect. Follow the true outline of the lips, to be sure. But if you want to emphasize the lines of the lips to give the illusion of fulness without extending the color beyond their margin, you can accomplish this with a make-up trick that works like magic. First, make your application of lip rouge. The pink shade will give the lips a soft tone, while the consistency of the rouge will give the texture of the lips softness and smoothness. Cover the lips carefully. Then, being careful not to extend the rouge beyond the outline, go over the very outline with a slightly heavier application of rouge. Don't blend this line with your finger, but let it stand out a bit sharply against the pink covering of rouge over the main body of the lips.

To complete the ensemble of facial make-up, use lash and brow darkener, but don't let the application of either be too heavy or it will over-shadow the delicacy of this make-up. A lady-like make-up is the key to this perfect ensemble, which consists of complexion, its color tones and texture, hairdo, clothes and perfume.

Then consider an appropriate hairdo to go with this make-up. Truly your complexion will be so soft and delicately tinted that it will make even a rather severe coiffure appear fragile, youthful and lady-like. Let your hair arrangement add the finishing touch to this lovely make-up.

Your complexion will need freshening up, as all good make-ups do, away from home, and you'll take more than average pride in using the miniature cosmetics in this new shade which come in a little pink silk faille purse-like kit. Two pink tabs, used for opening the kit, are edged with black lace. The special pockets in this kit hold powder, lip rouge, cheek rouge and any other items necessary to the upkeep of your pink complexion while away from your dressing table.

Any girl, regardless of her age or natural skin tone, can use these correct make-up aids for giving the complexion beauty, and smoothness of feeling and texture. Carry out the new delicacy of this make-up with a smart hairdo, and be sure that the delicate touches of your clothes are suited to and complete the ensemble. Then use a perfume that will make you feel as beautifully fragile as you look.

Cheek rouge, applied higher up this season than before, accents the youthful coloring of the natural complexion.

Highlight the extreme margin of the lips with rouge if they are to present the illusion of perfect proportions.

Excess powder is brushed off and the subtle application of rouge blended with the deft use of a blending brush.

The perfect make-up is delicately fragile. Hat, dress and coiffure are also featured in this modern make-up.

MISS DIXON will be happy to answer questions on beauty upon receipt of a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply, sent to her in care of this newspaper.

Delight Dixon Says . . .

BUBBLES galore! A new liquid concentrate which comes in a jug, a copy of an old New England decanter, has a wooden measuring cup attached. It comes in three fragrances, woodbine, meadow mist and balsam. A jiggerful of the concentrate, used in an average-sized bathtub of warm water, bubbles profusely and perfumes the entire house. The decanter is attractive enough to be used as a lamp base or flower vase.

Husbands who get "huffy" about their wives using make-up should be kept in the dark, so to speak. Let them sit back in amazement at the "little woman's" natural beauty. Here's a tip to wives of such men: Use all the make-up you need to enhance your natural loveliness, but use these make-up aids cleverly, which means sparingly and subtly. He will not utter a word of protest if the make-up job is done cleverly enough.

A deodorant is a beauty must. But can you imagine a deodorant that also serves as a perfume? Such a one comes in 12 fragrances, all lovely. Here is an aid to daintiness which fulfills the two most essential demands of fastidious grooming. This is a luxury grooming measure without luxury costs.

If hair ends are only slightly split and broken, use a good pomade as a corrective aid. But, if the ends are split and broken beyond repair, clip them off, treat the new ends gently, and use protective measures for keeping them soft and unbroken. In addition to corrective or protective measures, remember to brush your hair every day, shampoo it as often as necessary and keep it, and all of your hair-grooming aids, as clean as the proverbial whistle.

Morning facial lines caused by sleeping on the side of your face, or by pushing one hand against your cheek or chin, should be guarded against. Look at your face the first thing in the morning and if there is evidence that you have slept a new line in your face, do this: Wash or cleanse your facial skin. Then wring out a washcloth in medium-hot water and hold it over the new line. Repeat three or four times. Dry the skin and make an application of lubricating cream. Use a light, rotary massage movement directly over the line until it vanishes. If the line is permanent, of course it will not disappear altogether. But lines that appear all of a sudden should and can be nipped in the beginning, so to speak.

PROBLEMS

I HAVE been troubled with acne for several years. I have had quite extensive treatment which has left me with acne scars. Will you please let me know if there is any possible way for me to peel my skin in order to remove the scars? I do not want to hide the scars; I want to remove them.
"SENSITIVE."

There is a preparation which was originally created for the purpose of correcting acne and which will, when used according to the special directions, flake off the outer layer of skin. If you will send me a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope, I will forward you the name of the product as well as the address of the manufacturer, so that you may write for special directions for removing the outer layer of skin.

How can I make my too-large but well-shaped lips look smaller? The truth is, my lips look smaller without make-up, but I do not feel dressed or made up without color on my lips.
DARLENE.

You've practically answered your own question. Simply use a light, inconspicuous shade of rouge on your lips. The liquid tint, in a natural tone, will, I am sure, be excellent for your purpose.

Is there anything I can do about wrinkles around my mouth and over the neck?
F.N.

If the facial lines are only beginning you can check them to a great degree by the daily use of a lubricating cream created especially for the purpose. But if the lines are deep, the best you can hope to accomplish with any method is to soften the skin so that the lines will be less noticeable and to help prevent them from becoming deeper. If you wish names of special creams to benefit the skin, send along a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope, and repeat your question.

Because the bright sun is too strong for my eyes I am compelled to wear dark glasses every minute I am out-of-doors. These glasses seem to blur my vision and after an hour or so my eyes ache. My eyes are not very strong anyway and I am afraid if I continue to wear dark glasses they might make my eyes weaker and interfere with my vision. Please tell me what to do. WILMA.

Have your eyes examined and get glasses fitted to them at once. If you wish, have your prescription ground into dark lenses to be worn as a protective against eyestrain. I must caution you, however, against wearing inferior dark glasses which may prove damaging, even to normally strong eyes.

I'm a young man of 17 and would like to know if it is possible for me to grow taller. My mother advised me to write to you for advice. I haven't grown at all in the past two years.
GEORGE.

Stretching exercises will help encourage your growth. I suggest that you join a good gym. Tell the instructor what you want and I am sure he will outline correct stretching exercises. Or, send a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope for my leaflets.

Harry Gumbert Shows Skill Scoring Shutout Over Braves In His First Start For Cardinals

Trades Bring New Life to Fading Major League Ball Players

YANKEES WIN

(By Judson Bailey)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Apparently the best tonic a baseball player can get is a new uniform. Time after time a trade has pepped up a player to performances he never would have reached at his old familiar stand.

This reason has produced many examples —Billy Herman, who was hitting .194 for Chicago Cubs and jumped away above .300 as soon as he joined Brooklyn Dodgers; Steve Sundra a mediocre pitcher for New York Yankees who has won four and lost one for Washington Senators.

The latest exhibit is Harry Gumbert, the rugged righthander whom New York Giants traded to St. Louis Cardinals Wednesday. In his last start with the Giants, a week ago today, he was knocked out of the box in the sixth inning by Boston Braves.

In his first start with the Redbirds yesterday he held these same Braves to six scattered hits, didn't walk a man, and shut them out 4-0.

Gumbert is 27 years old and a veteran of five years' service with the Giants, for whom he never won less than ten games a year and in 1939 captured 18. He unquestionably is a good pitcher, but Manager Bill Terry arrived at the conclusion last winter that Cumbert was no pacemaker.

Cannot Make Him Ace

"Gumbert could win 20 games this year" Terry told newspapermen, "if Hubbell or Schumacher could carry the mail for us. He has the stuff, but somebody else has to be the leader. You can't make him your ace".

While the Cardinals were winning, Brooklyn Dodgers had their seven-game victory string snapped by Pittsburgh Pirates, 3-2 in 11 innings. Elbie Fletcher, who had singled one run across earlier, hit a homer off former teammate Mace Brown in the 11th to decide the score. This reduced the Dodgers' National League lead to 1 1-2 games over the Cards.

The Giants took their second straight from Chicago Cubs 4-2 by punching out two runs in the eighth inning against Bill Lee.

Cleveland Indians added to their margin in the American League by battering Boston Red Sox 9-3 with a 14-hit assault, while young Jim Bagby buttoned up his old teammates with seven-hit pitching. The Cleveland offensive was led by Gerald (Gee) Walker with a two-run homer, a double and a single.

Yanks Shake-up Batting Order

Joe McCarthy shook up his New York Yankee batting order, benched Rookies Phil Rizzuto and Gerry Priddy, and managed to break the Bombers' five-game losing streak at the expense of Chicago White Sox 6-5. Joe Dimaggio came out of his hitting slump with a homer in the third and a triple that set off the winning rally in the ninth.

The Yanks had Gordon at second base and little Frank Crosetti at shortstop and this seasoned pair pulled off two sparkling double plays to give the club its brightest defensive play of the season.

A two-run homer by Rookie Pat Mullin in the sixth inning brought Detroit Tigers a 5-4 decision over Philadelphia Athletics with Paul (Dizzy) Trout working four shut-out frames in relief.

Washington Senators edged out St. Louis Browns 7-6 as Eden Auker of the Brownies lasted the full nine inning although giving up 18 hits. Mickey Vernon and Jim Bloodworth each made four off him. The modern record for hits off one pitcher in one game is 26.

MERVYN DUTTON APPOINTED HEAD OF N.Y. AMERKS

National Hockey League Will Remain Intact as a Seven-Team Group

Boston, May 17—(AP) — That hockey-mad mob of galleryites who invade Madison Square Garden to cheer New York Americans—win or lose—need have no fear. The Amerks will return to the National League for the 1941-42 season and with a new president.

League President Frank Calder, in announcing at the annual meeting yesterday that the league would remain intact as a seven-team group, added that Mervyn (Red) Dutton would take over as club president with an option to purchase the Americans' franchise. Dutton has been manager of the Amerks for several seasons, with Calder as club president since the American franchise was taken over several years ago from William Dwyer.

Calder said the American franchise is worth approximately $200,000. He was unwilling to discuss any plans concerning the Amerks, weak team of the league last season.

Near the end of last season Dutton told newspapermen in New York, that he had considered the possibility of purchasing the Americans' franchise. He did not say, however, that the franchise was for sale and he mentioned no associates. At that time there were reports that the Americans might not operate this season.

During the meeting Calder was re-elected league president for the 25th consecutive season. The governors accepted a gift from Art Ross, general manager of Boston Bruins, Stanley Cup holders, of a perpetual trophy to be awarded to the league's most valuable player. The award will be based on the voting of league players.

Named to the board of governors were Ross, Dutton, James Norris of Detroit Red Wings, Maj. Frederic McLaughlin of Chicago Blackhawks, Col. John Kilpatrick of New York Rangers, Conny Smythe of Toronto Maple Leafs and Frank Patrick of Montreal Canadiens.

VIRGIL TRUCKS STRIKES OUT 14 IN BEATING LEAFS

Has Whiffed 58 So Far This Season and May Break League Record of 330

ROYALS MOVE UP

(By the Associated Press)

Virgil "Fire" Trucks, Buffalo speedballer, looks like a good prospect to break the long-standing International Baseball League strike-out record of 330 in one season set by Lefty Grove in 1923.

The 22-year-old right-hander, who came up from Beaumont of the Texas League, has been mowing down opposition batsmen at better than a one-an-inning clip since the season started and is showing no signs of weakening. He ran his total to 58 last night, fanning 14 while his mates pounded out a 9-5 decision over Toronto Maple Leafs in the first home night game of the year.

The Bisons gathered only six hits off Walter Lafranconi and Joe Vance but made every one count to score six runs in the sixth inning. Dixie Parsons, Trucks' battery mate, paced the attack with a two-run homer, a double and a single in four tries.

It was the fourth straight victory for the Bisons and the fifth in a row for Trucks, who hasn't lost a game.

Montreal Royals advanced to within a half game of the leading Newark Bears by trouncing Rochester 12-6 while the Bears were losing to Syracuse 8-5 in the only other games. Rain at Jersey City forced postponement of the Baltimore-Jersey City contest.

Like Buffalo, the Royals had a big sixth inning, pushing across eight runs to send starting Pitcher Carl Doyle and Matty Surkont to the showers. Bob Doyle finished for the Wings and allowed another tally in the eighth. Jack Graham and Herman Franks each hit a homer in the sixth for the Royals. Ed Head went the distance for Montreal, tossing his third straight six-hitter for his third triumph.

Newark and Syracuse each had a big inning, but the Chiefs had Lynn Nelson to halt the Bears' splurge, while none of the Bruin pitchers was effective.

The Chiefs bunched five hits and two errors for six runs in the second. Frankie Kelleher's home run with the bases loaded and a homer inside the park by Ken Sears accounted for all the Bear tallies before Nelson replaced Les Hinckle and blanked the league leaders the rest of the way.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

Elbie Fletcher, Pirates—Singled in one run and hit homer in 11th inning to beat Dodgers.

A SLOW TRACK PREDICTED FOR THE KING'S PLATE

Warrigan Moves Up in Class When Track is Heavy

SOME LIKE BUDPATH

By SCOTT YOUNG

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, May 17 (CP)—Today is Plate Day, and the young folks and the old folks are toting their bankrolls and their new clothes to Woodbine Park for a look at the winner of the 82nd running of the King's Plate.

Some think they will look at Undisturbed in the winners' circle after the race, and some think they will look at Budpath. Still others will hope to see Warrigan, or Skyliner, or any one of several other thoroughbreds pound down in front. Some, but not many, won't care which horse wins. That class will comprise mainly those unfortunate people who lose all their money on the first three races and therefore are unable to back their Plate convictions.

The morning line in the betting found Harry Gidding's Undisturbed still the favorite, with H. C. Hatch's Budpath ranking second and the Parkwood Stables' entry of Warrigan and Skyliner third. Behind was strung a powerful field and each owner believed he had a chance to win the gold and the glory taken last year by Willie the Kid, which hadn't won a race in his life before he won the Plate.

The race, restricted to Ontario-born three-year-olds which have won only in juvenile events, is run over nine furlongs for an $8,000-added purse. The Plate record is 1:54 1-5 and is expected to stand up against the field today. Willie the Kid won in 1:55 4-5 over a slightly slow track last year.

The weather this morning was cloudy and cool, with showers forecast. Mud or a heavy track would favor Warrigan, which won impressively on a heavy track last year, and Top Boots, which gloshed home in thick goo for his only two-year-old victory.

A few of the 11 horses entered worked out briefly yesterday, and a couple went through a furlong blowout this morning. About 18,000 people are expected to watch the race.

Two Soldiers Injured

Pembroke, Ont., May 17.—(CP)—Harvey Dow of Pembroke suffered serious head injuries and R. Carney of nearby Petawawa military camp was painfully injured Friday night when struck by a taxi driven by Wilfred Fournier of Pembroke. The men were brought to hospital here where their condition was described as "not critical".

CORBYS DEFEAT "CEMENTMEN" BY A 17 TO 10 COUNT

Paced by "Ki" Kiser, Corbys Score 16 Runs in Two Innings

HARRIS WINS FIRST

Two big innings proved enough for the Corby A. C. to win 17 to 10 over the Point Anne "Cementmen" in their initial game of the Belleville Softball League played at Coleman Flats last night.

After getting a lone tally in the initial frame, Harold Bawden's charges pushed nine runs into the scoring column in the fourth and added seven more in the bottom half of the seventh in an abbreviated seven-inning tussle. By winning the Corby A. C. advanced into a tie for the league leadership along with the local Junior nine.

Paced by "Ki" Kiser, their veteran outfielder, who collected two three-base hits and a single, the Corby squad drove starting pitcher H. Barnhart from the mound in the latter stages of the game, as Connie Harris chalked up his first win of the season. Harris struck out four and walked but three, as Barnhart developed a wild streak and walked eight.

The lineups: Point Anne—Genereaux, cf; Loft, 3b; Whitehead, lf; Sero, ss; Green c; Whalen 2b; B. Bennett, rf; D. Bennett, 1b, and Barnhart, p. Corby's A. C.—Ronsky, 3b; J. Barraige, lf; Henn, 2b; Cy Barriage, ss; Chuck Barriage, cf; Pointer, c; Moon and J. Bawden 1b; Kiser, rf, and Harris 6.

Score by innings:
Point Anne ...... 0 1 3 0 3 3 0—10
Corby A. C. ...... 1 0 0 9 0 0 7—17
Umpires—Pointer and Maracle.

BOB MONTGOMERY TAKES JENKINS

Philadelphia Negro Out-Classes the Lightweight Champion in Non-Title Bout

New York, May 17—(AP)—Another shot at Lightweight Champion Lew Jenkins—this time with the title on the line—then a quick foray into the welterweight division where Fritzie Zivic is head man—that's the program of Bob Montgomery, Philadelphia buzz-saw and the newest candidate for national fistic recognition.

In Madison Square Garden last night Montgomery, a former cotton picker in South Carolina, took up where he left off against Jenkins some weeks back by handing the New York and California 135-poung king one of the worst lickings of his meteoric career—a 10-round affair in which the Jenkins title was not at stake.

Tuesday the Negro's handlers will go before the New York State Athletic Commission and formally challenge for the title. If agreeable Promoter Mike Jacobs will stage the encore during July or August, either in the Polo Grounds or Yankee Stadium.

If he can repeat last night's triumph, Montgomery then will go after Zivic, who now is busy with plans for defending his title against Al (Bummy) Davis, earlier in the summer.

Jenkins came out of last night's melee with a bad cut on the nose, another on the right eye and a gash on the left ear. He lost seven of the ten rounds.

It was apparent from the third round that the Sweetwater, Tex. scrapper sorely missed the motorcycle on which he did most of his training. He averaged a winning minute a round until the fourth, but from then on, with one brief exception, it was all Montgomery.

GOSSIP NEWS COMMENT

Maybe we'll get our ears pinned back for relating this little yarn, but it's so good it can't be kept on ice.

It seems Harry Rollins arrived a little late for last night's softball game at the Flats. Rushing into the stands, Harry turned to Prexy Clem Bowler and asked: "What's the score?"

"Nothing to nothing," replied Clem.

"Good game?" asked Harry.

"I don't know. It hasn't started yet," replied Clem with a note of irony.

Without fear of Contradiction last night's softball game concluded with a comedy of errors. True enough Corby's went out in two innings and whacked themselves nine runs in the fourth and then came back to bang out seven runs in the last inning of an abbreviated game.

However, it was "Ky" Kiser's big bat that really put Corby's into the winning column as he collected two three-base blows and satisfied himself with a single to drive in nine of the winning club's 17 runs.

Bill McGowan, American League umpire, was working a game recently in Philadelphia. Lester McCrabb was pitching for the A's. McGowan, who prides himself on his accuracy in callin' 'em, was annoyed when McCrabb started scuffing around the rubber and muttering about the visual defects of umpires in general and one Bill McGowan in particular.

As the game progressed, Lester's crabbing continued, in fact, it increased in volume. "The funny part of it is," related McGowan, "Frankie Hayes, the A's catcher, didn't even look around once. Finally, the explosion took place. Lester just missed the plate by inches. And I'll be truthful, I think I did blow the next one. I don't say I'm infallible, and I'll admit I did blow it.

"Anyway, Lester comes barging into home plate. I go out to meet him halfway. He yells, 'The trouble with you, McGowan, is you call your decisions too fast.'

"That stopped me. After 17 years of umpiring, I finally found out what was wrong with me. But it took a McCrabb to discover it."

Last summer a community softball group was operated in Belleville, one that provided a lot of fun, recreation and enjoyment to many young men and boys in the community. It was known as the Naborhood League. There was no large trophy awarded the ultimate winner, nor did the stars receive great press notices for their diamond prowess. However, something much more desirable than fame and name was enjoyed in good clean, healthful recreation and some good sport. Several of the players who enjoyed the privileges of out-door sport in the Naborhood League are anxious to re-organize for another season. One of those paramountly interested is Frank Follwell, who laboured long and hard in the interests of the league last season. Those who are desirous of the continuance of this community softball group another season, for recreational purposes only, are asked to contact Frank Follwell and providing sufficient show interest, the City Softball League executive will gladly co-operate in the matter of organization and operation.

During a fanning bee at Pittsburgh, Jocko Conlan, new National League umpire, was asked if there was such a thing as a "tie" when the ball and the runner's foot reached first base at the same time. "Sure," said Conlan, "but that just means the runner is safe, so you can throw the tie business out. A man is safe or out." When the umpire was asked "Why is he safe, if it's a tie?" he responded with the unbeatable statement: "He's safe because he isn't out."

Max Carey, who once stole 55 bases in 56 tries, is back in the National League with hopes of helping the Dodgers give Brooklyn fans a run for their money.

Carey, former Dodger outfielder and manager and one-time Pittsburgh star, joined the Dodgers to instruct them in the art of running bases. He is concentrating on Pee Wee Reese, Pete Reiser and Cooky Lavagetto, three speedy boys. Carey showed Reese how he used to swing his body and cross his leg over on the break for the next base. Most base-runners, including Reese, break with the leg near the desired base, but Carey always crossed over.

Carey showed Reiser how to sneak a big lead off base. Peter is faster than Reese, yet doesn't steal as many bases because he is slow in making his break.

Australian Troops Sent To Greece Were Fully Equipped

Sydney, May 17.—(AP)—Arthur W. Fadden, Acting Prime Minister of Australia, said Friday that Australian troops sent from Egypt and Libya to Greece were fully equipped in accordance with the modern scale and that the eventual result of the campaign in Greece was not associated in any degree with the extent with which the Australians were equipped.

Mr. Fadden said that before giving permission for the transfer of Australian troops to Greece the Australian Cabinet stipulated that Australians be given full equipment, and that the Cabinet subsequently was advised that the conditions had been fulfilled.

(In a statement earlier Navy Minister William Hughes said "our troops were beaten in Greece because they were not effectively equipped.)

Mr. Fadden said the result of the Greek campaign was due partially to the Germans' numerical superiority, gained when Yugoslavia collapsed and partially to the necessity of returning Empire troops to Egypt to meet a new and threatening situation there.

Three plants have been built in Sweden for making horse and cattle fodder from wood pulp that is said to equal oats in nutritive value although it does not contain protein.

Light enough for easy handling, a new tool can be used as a sander on level or curved surfaces, for several kinds of brushing and buffing, as a drill chuck and to mix paints.

HOW TO COMBAT Rheumatic Pains

Rheumatic pains are often caused by uric acid in the blood. This blood impurity should be extracted by the kidneys. If kidneys fail, and excess uric acid remains, it irritates the muscles and joints causing excruciating pains. Treat rheumatic pains by keeping your kidneys in good condition. Ferry Pilots Now Returning By Airplane

Montreal, May 17—(CP)—American-built aircraft are being flown to Britain "in increasing numbers without loss" and a system of returning their pilots to this side of the Atlantic by airplane has been started, it was announced here today.

A statement issued by Atfero, the organization set up by the British Ministry of Aircraft production to ferry planes to Britain by air, said "pilots who made the crossing several times laugh at stories circulated about the possibility of their meeting German planes".

The statement quoted one pilot as saying: "The Germans would have as much chance of finding us as of finding a needle in a haystack. We never give them a thought on the way over".

Declaring the system of returning pilots by air rather than by sea "has only recently been initiated", the statement said "some members of Atlantic crews have made the full round trip in five days. They left this side, flew to Britain, had two days rest in London, and returned within five days without incident".

Set Up New Record

One plane, the statement said, recently set up a new record for the westbound Atlantic crossing, taking 9 1-2 hours from land to land.

The only plane lost to date by the Ferry Service, Atfero said, was one which crashed in Newfoundland two months ago and caused the death of Sir Frederick Banting, distinguished Canadian scientist.

"Since then many more planes have set down in England with no incident to report during the trip", the statement added. "Returning pilots have reported that they find it a real thrill to take off from this side of the water, have a pleasant uneventful trip to Britain, then a couple of enjoyable days in London, then another easy flight that brings them back to this side of the ocean".

Elvia Allman and Jerry Colonna, both popular as radio funsters, as they appear in the new Republic picture, "Sis Hopkins," starring Judy Canova with the companion feature "Lucky Devils," starting Sunday midnight.

SERIOUS BUSINESS

Not playthings are these model aircraft being turned out in technical schools of Canada, for they have an importance in the serious business of war. They are used to teach student pilots of the Royal Canadian Air Force to identify readily all types of airplanes, both of the Allied forces and those of the enemy. They are designed also to reveal vulnerable spots so the pilot may learn to manoeuvre into the best position to protect himself or to attack opposing machines.

"PINCHED" AT WHITE HOUSE

Lieutenant - Colonel Horace B. Smith is shown leading a private soldier to the White House guard house after the colonel had taken an order to disperse from a spot near the White House where a number of soldiers had gathered to bait pickets of the American Peace Mobilizers who have been parading before the executive mansion. Col. Smith, a White House aide, sent the man back to his post at Fort Myer under arrest.

G. M. STRIKE IS AVERTED

Settlement Provides a Flat Wage Increase of 10 Cents an Hour

Washington, May 16 (AP) — A threatened strike against the General Motors Corporation, holder of $750,000,000 in defence contracts, was averted early today when the company accepted a National Mediation Board peace formula a few hours before the scheduled deadline for the walk-out.

The Mediation Board tentatively scratched another labor dispute off its books with word of union acceptance of terms to settle a strike at the Ex-Cell-O Corporation, Detroit die and tool plant.

The General Motors settlement provided a flat wage increase of 10 cents an hour for an estimated 250,000 workers in 89 plants, for no closed shop, union shop or maintenance-of-membership shop. Under a new contract to run on year from April 28, 1941, the company agreed not to lock out its employees and to give consideration to seniority in making promotions.

Adds 50 Millions to Payroll

The corporation estimated the wage increases would add $50,000,000 annually to its payroll. The present average wage before the raise, the management said, was approximately $1 an hour.

The C.I.O. United Automotive Workers originally had called a strike against 60 of the General Motors plants for 7 a.m. Thursday, but the union postponed the deadline for 24 hours at the Mediation Board's request.

Nevertheless, more than 35,000 G. M. employees walked from four G. M. plants at Flint and Saginaw, Mich., yesterday—a result, the union said, of a misunderstanding about the postponement. Union officials said "every effort" will be made to send the men back to work at once.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was on the living room floor on my stummick reading Paul Peppy In The Coastal Patrol and pop came home early on account of Sattiday, saying, What's all this, what's the idea of berrying yourself in musty print while the streets are full of your happy screaming hysterical little friends?

Ma doesn't want me to go out, I said, and pop said, The dooce she doesn't, it's a perfect afternoon, why doesn't she?

She's got one of her akes and I guess that's a way it makes her feel, I said, and pop said, Well, I know misery loves company, but your mother surely cant feel as miserable as all that. Suppose we go and have a talk with her, he said.

Well aw G, pop, it wont do any good, I said, and pop said, Why not, isn't this an age of arbitration when everybody is suppose to get a birdseye view of his own position by looking down from the other fellow's outlook?

Sure, pop, only I mean maybe I had something to do with her headake, I said. I mean it was starting anyways and just helped it along, I said, and pop said, I thought we'd be coming to that. Perhaps you could recollect enough details to help fill in the picture, he said.

Meaning what happened, and I said, Well cousin Artie came around and we started to play Blitskrigg, and we tied rags around our heads with red ink on them for blood and then we got some big paper bags and blew them up and smashed them for bombs, and ma was listening to the war news on the radio and she came running downstairs and saw us and her headake got worse before we had time to explain and that's why I have to stay in.

It goes to show that there is no such thing as war without reprisals, pop said. Consider yourself in protective custody and follow me, he said.

Wich I did for our reguler Sattiday walk, making me feel lucky.

650 EMPLOYEES WALK OUT

Cornwall, Ont., May 16 (CP) — Approximately 650 employees at the Canada Mill of Canadian Cottons, Ltd., walked out this morning in sympathy with about 50 workers in one department who yesterday failed to receive an expected revision of wage rates. No comments were available from plant heads or officials of the otton Workers Union, but it was learned the Union had sought intervention by the Federal Department of Labor.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 17 (CP)—Stocks finished the week with a moderately soft tone.

Lake Shore recorded the only wide decline, dropping two to 16 1-2. It closed at 16 3-4. The new dividend cut from 50 to 35 cents was the [illegible]eakening factor.

[illegible]ong with Lake Shore, Wright-[illegible]greaves, Preston and Malartic [illegible] fields lost ground while prices held a bit higher at Kerr-Addison, San Antonio. Central Porcupine firmed a cent or more to 20 1-2 and other firmer penny issues were Madsen, Bidgood-Kirkland and Sand River.

Noranda, Nickel and Smelters were down 1-4 to 3-8 and Sherritt lost a fraction to 69 1-2.

Loblaw B, Union Gas and Abitibi Common were down narrowly against minor gains for Consolidated Bakeries, Building Products and Beatty Pfd. A $10,000 block of the 2nd War Loan traded at 98 1-2, unchanged.

Revived Buying Helps Butter Price

The minimum level established last Tuesday cleared the air of uncertainty that had been overhanging the butter market for some time and a substantial volume of Ontario solids changed hands at prices 1-2 cent to 1 1-2 cents above the previous week's close. The rising market however, chilled buying ardor, checking any possible further advance during yesterday's session. No. 1 grade Ontario creamery solids sold Friday at 30 1-4 cents to 30 1-2 cents a pound, with offerings at the latter figure, which were not heavy, being difficult to move.

Trading improved as the week progressed on the egg market, resulting in slightly increased prices in the graded section. With export business still active, good inquiry developed for Government inspected lots for which a 1-2-cent-a-dozen premium was obtainable. Inspected shipments to Eastern points were normal but there was no demand from Northern Ontario. Breaking plants remained busy and local consumer demand continued fairly good.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, May 17.—Egg market prices here as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Eggs: Graded shipments in used free cases, selling at, A-large, 21 1-2c-22c; A-medium 20c-20 1-2c; B. grade, 20c-20 1-2c; C-grade, 17 1-2c-18c. Receipts 2,305 cases.

Market Prices Generally Firm

Threatening skies and rainy weather was responsible for attendance at the Belleville market to fall below normal with displays of transplanting stocks and perennials again being featured by vendors. Cabbage and tomato plants were plentiful and sold at 15c per box or at 50c per flat while Spanish onion sets were held at 25c and up to $1 per flat according to size. An imposing array of seasonal flowers of practically every known variety added color and had a cheering effect to a market dampened by threat of rain.

Prices on the inside market were essentially the same as asked for produce the week previous with eggs holding at the 25c mark for top grade and ranging down to 20c per dozen. Chicken also sold at the regular price of 25c per pound with several lots of well-finished broilers selling from 90c to $1.50 per pair. Others not so well finished sold at 60c. Butter in some cases was a trifle easier, with some vendors asking straight 35c per pound, although several still asked 75c for two pounds.

Asparagus was plentiful with prices ranging from 15c to 26c per pound bunches, according to grade. Radishes, rhubarb, lettuce and winter onions sold at the usual 5c per bunch. A few last year's carrots and parsnips were offered at 20c per basket. Potatoes sold at the usual price of $1 per bag.

Several vendors offered excellent grade of Delicious apples at $2 per hamper or at 50c to 60c per peck. No. 2 Delicious and No. 1 Spys sold at $1.75 per hamper with cooking apples being offered at $1 per bushel.

Variety of fish offered was lake trout selling at 25c per pound sliced, or 20c whole; mudcats at two pounds for 25c and whitefish 22c.

Young pigs seemed a trifle firmer in price with vendors asking from $5 up, according to size and age.

HALIFAX LIVES

Homes, entertainment centres, women. . . . The housing situation is severe, often squalid. Families have moved from big houses into single rooms. . . . People live in tents, trailers; many spent the winter in summer cottages. . . . The town is barren of anything resembling a night club. A fifth rate vaudeville show from the States played to packed houses in a downtown theatre for weeks, duping the populace by frequent revamping of the name. . . . As for women, gals long ago resigned to a life of stoic loneliness have been swept into the social swirl by a wave of uniformed males. . . . Young naval officers think nothing of doing the town for hours by taxi.

People:

Hilary Belloc, engineering son of Hilaire Belloc, the author, studied here to become skipper of a naval motor torpedo boat. He's a lieutenant. . . . Maureen O'Sullivan, the film flame, was a routine caller before her husband, Lieut. John Farrow, went to sea. . . . Earl Beatty, son of the great First Great War navy man, is no stranger, either. . . . The town literally abounds with big names at times.

Laughs:

Halifax papers spreading east coast Canadian port stories across their local pages. . . . The personal in the meticulous small town paper which reported "Miss Blank spent the week-end at an east coast port". . . . The drunken Scot who, burbling in his seat, fought a verbal argument with Robert Montgomery all through the film "Mr. and Mrs. Smith". . . .

JUSTICE MINISTER

"I am going to ask the Minister when we come to deal with the section relating to succession duties, to seek some accommodation from the provinces with respect to that matter of double and perhaps triple taxation.

"How can the Minister approach the provinces in this matter if he discriminates against them as compared with the Dominion. You are slapping them in the face and then going back and asking them for a favor. I suggest it is a poor way of approaching the provinces".

(One of the budget proposals is that the provinces withdraw from the personal and corporation income tax fields during the war, accepting in return compensation from the Federal Treasury.

Should Show No Discrimination

Mr. MacNicol said Ontario is the largest tax-paying province and ought not to be discriminated against.

John Diefenbaker (Con. Lake Centre) said he agreed the proposed arrangement was a discrimination against Provincial Securities in favor of Dominion Securities.

Mr. Ilsley said if there were discrimination he was not responsible. The former Conservative Government had imposed the tax first in 1933 and it was merely being increased.

A. M. Nicholson (C.C.F. Mackenzie) suggested foreign holders of Canadian securities should be willing to make a contribution to victory in order to protect their investment in Canada.

In answer to a question from M. J. Coldwell, Acting C.C.F. House Leader, Mr. Ilsley said he had been unable to find any fair way to get at the income of wealthy people who moved out of Canada to avoid taxation, except by the 15 per cent. withholding tax which was before the House.

"Whether the fact that a man had once lived here and perhaps made his money here would be sufficient reason for imposing a withholding tax of, say, 45 per cent, while a tax of 15 per cent was imposed against the person who never lived here is something I could not decide at the moment," said Mr. Ilsley.

"This would impose restrictions upon change of residence which I think would be incompatible with a person's freedom. I do not know that it could be done."

Mr. Coldwell replied:

"I certainly believe we should devise ways and means, if we can, of dealing with these people who made their money in Canada, who derive their income from the money they made in Canada and who have stepped outside the country deliberately in order to escape our taxation."

In order to equalize the proposed 22 1-2 percent tax on non-resident-owned investment corporations with the 15 per cent tax on income going to non-resident persons, Mr. Ilsley announced an amendment which would permit such corporations to deduct one-third of the interest received from Canadian debtors from their taxable income.

Decision Of Board Of Education Relating To Principalship Of B.C.I. Deferred Until Monday Afternoon

Motion To Revoke Decision Of Board And To Retain P. C. MacLaurin As Principal Is Left As Notice

After two hours' discussion over a letter from Principal P. C. MacLaurin of the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School, which had been addressed to Chairman H. B. Fetterly of the Board of Education, concerning the principalship, the Board on Friday evening decided to leave stand as a notice of motion the motion which had been introduced by the Rev. W. J. Walker, seconded by the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, to be dealt with at a special meeting on Monday, May 19th., at 5.15 p.m.

Rev. Mr. Walker was the member of the Board who moved the motion on April 28th., when the Board decided to declare the principalship vacant.

Mr. Walker's notice of motion, in which Rev. Mr. Payne collaborated, was as follows:

Notice of Motion

"That the motion with respect to Mr. P. C. MacLaurin's principalship made on April 28th., be revoked and that Mr. P. C. MacLaurin remain as principal of the Collegiate and Vocational School for the next year on probation and if satisfactory until he has completed the years necessary for him to gain the retiring allowance, his term of service to be subject to the jurisdiction of the Board of Education and his complete co-operation with the Board."

At the April meeting of the Board it had been decided to end the principalship of Mr. MacLaurin at the end of June, 1941, and it was in relation to this and the situation at the Collegiate and Vocational School that Mr. MacLaurin wrote the letter to the Board chairman, which was as follows:

Principal MacLaurin's Letter

"229 Dundas Street,
Belleville, Ontario,
May 16, 1941.

"Mr. H. B. Fetterly,
Chairman, Board of Education,
Belleville, Ontario.

"Dear Sir:

"I should like to have the opportunity of making this statement to you, as Chairman of the Board of Education, and to the others Members of your honourable Board, at your regular meeting on May 16, before the Board undertakes the regular agenda for the meeting.

"Because of inability to understand certain recommendations made to me by the Board, I have placed myself in an unfavorable position before you. It was my inability to understand, which caused this unfortunate controversy. I erred, however, not wilfully or deliberately.

"I regret any word or action on my part which may have appeared to you improper or defiant, and apologize for my apparent shortcomings. It has been always my sincere desire to cooperate with you, and always will be in order to promote the best interests of the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School.

"The changes which have taken place in our school during its development in twenty-five years are many. Twenty-five years ago the Principal of the school was the only Science Master and taught all the Science—Geography, Physics, Chemistry, Zoology, Botany and Mineralogy—to a student body of scarcely more than two hundred, with a teaching staff of six. At present the school has over nine hundred pupils and a staff of thirty-six. Furthermore, a purely academic school has become a composite school of Collegiate, Commercial and Vocational Departments. This development has naturally created many problems for the consideration of the Board and the Principal. The present Board of Education and former Boards have given much time and attention to solving these problems, and may, I think, justly feel proud of their achievements.

"With the complexities of the present Collegiate and Vocational School, you and some High School Inspectors have suggested separating the matter of administration from the matter of teaching so far as the Principal is concerned—a Principal without a teaching programme could give more attention to discipline and other matters of organization. With your wishes in this matter I am prepared to comply, and as long as I am in your employ I will do my utmost to cooperate in all things.

"I think I can still serve you faithfully and well as Principal of the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School, and am prepared to devote all my time and energy to the work of administration and refrain from teaching of any kind.

"Respectfully,

(Signed) P. C. MacLaurin."

The suggestion was made that the letter of Mr. MacLaurin be referred to the School Management Committee after the chairman had read it for the second time, at the request of the board.

On this Rev. W. J. Walker rose and said he was prepared to take his stand in regard to this letter and thought it should be dealt with by the board as a whole. He had been the mover of the original motion of April 28th.

Says Board Took Determined Action

"The board found that it could do no other than it did do—move that motion and carry that motion. Our boards in the past had nothing of a tangible nature to show they had taken determined action. This board has taken action. This board went so far with this action that we have something definite.

"If we reconsidered that motion, if we revoked the motion I moved on the 28th of April, you say, it would put us back in the same position as we were before. But not so.

"No Ulterior Motive"

"This letter contains matter in full on the question. I think Mr. MacLaurin appreciates the position of the board as never before. He appreciates the fact that the board was considerate and had no ulterior motive. So I think the board should consider it as a whole and determine now whether to let the motion stand or revoke it. Determine it now."

Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne said one thing struck him in the letter—Mr. MacLaurin had acknowledged that he had erred and that "he offers his apology to this body. I think that the first thing we can do is to accept Mr. MacLaurin's apology. That is the most outstanding thing that has been read. If so I would be glad to move that the board receive Mr. MacLaurin's apology."

Col. E. A. Geen declared that the board had gone into the matter for four months and decided that in the best interests of the school a change should be made. "I for one would not change my opinion one way or another," he said.

Trustee Carl Crosby in the chair, asked if anyone would like to hear the letter reread and Mr. Legate requested the rereading of the principal's letter.

Committee Chairman Crosby: "Am I to understand that you are to reconsider your decision or assume that that phase of the business has been completed?"

Ready to Reconsider

Rev. Mr. Walker said he was prepared to reconsider his position. "As I grew older I have learned that at some time all have failed. Unless a man comes against a discipline in life, he is likely to fail as life goes on.

"Judging charitably, Mr. MacLaurin has faced a crisis in his life. I have faced a crisis. Many a night I could not sleep over this. Because of my experience in my calling I find that it is wise to consider not only the past but the future. Here is a man who has offered completely to co-operate. He has acknowldeged his error. In the last few weeks I understand Mr. MacLaurin has been administering the collegiate as well as any man could do.

"He has to reorganize his whole outlook now on the staff and his students, when he has the principalship solely.

Larger View

"We are apt to lose the larger view in the smaller. It has come now that if he is retained as principal he has to take the larger view. He has to seek a new approchement to his teachers and his job—a tremendous task. In the face of that I am prepared to move that my former motion be revoked and that Mr. MacLaurin be asked to continue as principal and promise to co-operate and be under the control of this board until he comes to the age when he can enter into the full measure of his retirement allowance."

Mr. B. C. Sisler said that he had been slow to support the original motion as to the principalship. He struggled with the question for three days, he stated, and the practical side won out against the more sentimental. "I do not know that I am ready yet to withdraw it now anyway," he remarked.

Says Board 'Deeply Wronged'

Rev. Mr. Walker stated that he took the action he was now taking on the understanding that this question be given the fullest publicity "for I consider that the Board has been deeply wronged by the staff of the Collegiate and in the eyes of the public. I move this reconsideration on the understanding that it is to be rectified."

"I think that I should state in fairness to the Board, one thing that has not been given publicity," said the Rev. A Beauchamp Payne. "I believe in being fair to all concerned. While perhaps for some reason of sentiment, this Board was very loath to come to its decision, what the Board had to contend with was this: the long years of service given by one man, who had brought about the very high academic position of the school and the short term to his retirement—put these in one scale and in the other the potentialities of nearly 1000 students.

"And if discipline of the school was not the best, if there was a definite attitude in regard to the orders of the Board, then the importance of nine hundred to one thousand students weighed down the scale.

Why Board Acted

"That is what I think brought this Board to its decision. These were the things that established this in our minds. Mr. MacLaurin has confessed to the fact that he has erred, that he did not understand. I think, Mr. MacLaurin, no one could have made it more clearly and now Mr. MacLaurin has come and made a clean breast of it and made his apology to the Board.

"I am going to make a suggestion. If Mr. Walker will include this in his motion, I will second it. I don't think Mr. MacLaurin will object. If Mr. Walker will add this: "that this question be reviewed at the end of next year."

Call it Probation, if You Will

Mr. Payne stated that recently he came into the school and hardly knew it as the same school. "I saw order there," he said, "which I had never seen before. You may say that is only a small thing. But that was administration. There may be other things, I have not been through the school.

"Call the suggestion what you like, probation if you will."

Mr. Walker agreed to incorporate this and he and Mr. Payne collaborated in the motion.

Board Chairman H. B. Fetterly declared "I have been considering this from many angles. A great deal of criticism has been directed against me. I care not for that if I feel that I am in the right."

Mr. Fetterly Complains of Ridicule

Mr. Fetterly said that the Board had been held up to ridicule and he stated that he felt that the interest of the school would be jeopardized if the action taken was not followed.

"The best I would go would be probation at the end of this year," Mr. Fetterly said.

Mr. Walker thereupon moved the revision of his motion.

"Are you afraid there won't be any men here to rise up if the promises are not kept?" Mr. Walker asked the Board.

Mr. Fetterly's Amendment

Mr. Fetterly: "I move an amendment that the probationary period end by the end of June 1941."

Rev. W. J. Walker: "The action of probation for seventeen days. The most ridiculous thing I ever heard; It will take six months to put the school on the new basis I think it necessary to give Mr. MacLaurin time to accomplish that. If we brought in another principal we would have to give him a year anyway."

Mr. Legate's Complaint

Mr. Legate asked, "Does Mr. MacLaurin accept full responsibility for interpreting the attitude of the Board of Education to the pupils and teachers.

"Most of the members of the Board came on the Board for the first time this year. All we want to do is the best for everyone here, including the principal of the school. When we came offering to give Mr. MacLaurin the opportunity of taking a load off his shoulders I think we were doing him a good turn in taking off half his load. As far as the teachers go we have been very fair. We are not in close touch with the nature of their work. Our aims were to work for the interest of all. We came along after four months and we find every student and every teacher against the Board, ninety-nine per cent or ninety-eight, why? That is what I hold Mr. MacLaurin responsible for. I want him to run the school. But this is too much to swallow—the attitude of the scholars, teachers and public.

Mr. Legate expressed the opinion "I don't think Mr. MacLaurin and Mr. Fetterly can work together. There is no use beating about the bush. Mr. Fetterly has had a lot of abuse to stand up against and a lot of unfair criticism.

Advises Something Be Done

"If this motion goes through, I think something ought to be done about the situation lest we get into such a mess again. I did not come here ready to vote. I did not make up my mind in a few minutes though I will make my mind up tonight if it is necessary.

"Mr. Legate voices my opinion," affirmed William Harrison. "I think we should have an understanding with the teachers for Mr. MacLaurin may try to do something he cannot do. I think this should be settled."

Principal Speaks

For the first time Principal MacLaurin spoke in answer to this question. "I thought wise to keep out of the controversy. I have nothing to do with what the teachers have done." He said he had advised the students to be careful about the public meeting.

"I withdrew from public discussion. I wanted to be in a position so that I could not be blamed for stirring up feelings in my own behalf," Mr. MacLaurin stated.

Says Teachers Pledge Co-operation

Rev. Mr. Walker remarked that the teachers had pledged their co-operation with Mr. MacLaurin if the matter were reconsidered. He said that some one had asked him what the Board would do if Mr. MacLaurin came to the board as he has done. Mr. Walker stated he had been thinking of that himself before the suggestion was made. Mr. Walker said he thought this would be a happy solution as he praised the discipline such as seen in the last few days.

Mr. Fetterly: "There has been nothing on my part of any antagonism between Mr. MacLaurin and myself. Is that right Mr. MacLaurin?"

Mr. MacLaurin: "I would not like to express myself at the present time. There has been very little contact between us."

Denies Any Antagonism to Principal

Mr. Fetterly: "When I came on the Board I did so to try to be of assistance to Belleville. As far as I am concerned I am not antagonistic to Mr. MacLaurin. If he does the work I expect I will back him up. A school of 900 to 1000 students and 36 teachers you cannot run without co-operation.

Rev. Mr. Payne: "Mr. MacLaurin is already principal for this year. Therefore you can judge whether it is ridiculous to suggest that the probation end at the close of this year." The speaker said he thought it ridiculous.

Mr. Payne went on: "Perhaps it is just as well that the only two clergymen on the board should be the mover and seconder of this motion. If you find you have erred and lay bare the whole situation, what would you want? Therefore he (Mr. MacLaurin) has come to the board with a written statement. This is the last I have to say on the subject."

Col. E. A. Geen: "I thought that a lot of the misleading statements and propaganda could have been stopped by one man. I am of the same opinion yet."

Mr. Legate to Mr. MacLaurin

Mr. Legate to Mr. MacLaurin: "Will you hold yourself responsible and see the wishes of the board are conveyed to the teachers and pupils?"

Mr. MacLaurin: "I certainly will. I never had any other notion."

Mr. Legate: "That is what I feel must be settled."

Mr. McGuire: "I feel like Mr. Legate. He has hit the nail on the head. I am surprised that the teachers took the attitude against the board which they did. I think the teachers sould be told about teir actions."

Mr. Walker: "Did not the teachers in the preamble to their statement admit and ask forgiveness?"

Mr. McGuire: "I think some one has fallen down as far as the teachers are concerned. I feel they should turn a right-about face."

Mr. Harrison said he had visited the school twice this week and referred to "black looks" from teachers he saw in the halls.

Continuity Affected

Mr. Frank Cushing said that he thought Mr. Walker's motion would settle the criticism which had been directed at the board. "I appreciate the incident has interrupted the continuity at the school and some allowance must be made to teachers and scholars until the end of the present term.

"I feel it will be some little time before the little details are adjusted to the satisfaction of the board.

"Assuming the present motion is carried, there should not be any misunderstanding."

Mr. Cushing was solicitous as to the scholars trying university examinations and he thought that even if Mr. MacLaurin had to teach in order to prepare them for their examinations, something should be done.

He was informed that this had all been arranged with teachers.

Mr. Cushing: "With a little patience we can restore conditions."

Mr. Sisler, referring to what he called the "severe criticism" said: "I do not blame the children. I do blame the teachers. I say to Mr. MacLaurin, I don't think we have ever had a board so anxious to co-operate and how the teachers and pupils could get the distorted view of the board they had, I don't know."

Mr. Walker stated that he would overlook things said in a psychopathic state of excitement.

All of us are verging in that line. And he added, that "Mr. MacLaurin can point out to the staff the attitude of the Board. Members of the Board may blame Mr. MacLaurin for not trying to curb this attitude towards the Board, but sometimes it is wise to 'get it out of the blood'.

Col. Geen—"After all the consideration we have given this I don't feel like turning around in an hour and changing my mind".

Question of Rules

Mr. Fetterly said that he understood that to change the motion it would have to come in the form of a notice of motion to a future meeting.

Mr. Crosby thought it was splitting hairs though this might be legal to ask for a notice of motion. The Board had studiously dealt with the question and had at all meetings been considerate. Certain events had precipitated the motion which had been carried at the April meeting. Then Mr. Crosby spoke of the "unbearable" mysterious phone calls and anonymous letters which had been received by members of the Board as a result of the recent decision

"My observations were based over a period of several years. But even the best or worst of us can err".

Mr. MacLaurin's letter of apology he thought satisfactory and thought the letter and apology should be accepted.

"I don't see the importance of Mr. MacLaurin explaining everything in detail to the students, but I do feel it is essential with regard to the staff. I feel they (the teachers) should be able to clarify it in their own minds that the Board has not been persecuting Mr. MacLaurin".

Mr. Crosby stated that he did feel that the Board should receive consideration.

Mr. Fetterly pointed out that if the Board agreed to forego notice unanimously this was possible. He said he had just been pointing out the rules and was not quibbling.

Mr. Legate thought the Board should be as unanimous as nearly as possible and so advised a few days delay in voting. Others concurred in this view.

At this juncture the chairman of the committee, of the whole Mr. Crosby moved that the feeling of the meeting of the Board was that there would have to be notice of motion and it was unanimously so decided. Later the Board set the meeting for 5.15 p.m on Monday and Mr. Walker gave notice of motion.

INTENSIFICATION

In East Africa, Imperial forces were tightening their grip on Fascist positions held by some 35,000 Italian troops around Amba Alaji, Ethiopia. The Italians, led by the Duke of Aosta, were described as being holed in for a final stand.

There was no confirmation in London of a Reuters dispatch from Vichy, which quoted the Iraq rebel premier, Rashid Ali Al Gailani, as stating his troops were attacking British positions at Basra, Iraq, and that a battle was developing.

Quiet on Persian Gulf

Military sources said their latest information was that all was quiet in that sector, on the Persian Gulf.

British preoccupation with the Syrian situation reflected the government's grave view of affairs there. Nazi penetration of that French mandate was considered most serious because of the threat to the oil pipeline from Iraq to Haifa, Palestine, main source of the Mediterranean fleet's fuel supply.

Penetration of Syria also would bring the Axis to within 250 miles of the Suez Canal.

The R.A.F. advantage in Syria, informed sources said, stems from the fact that there are virtually no German fighter planes there now. They said no Nazi fighters could go into operation until a considerable ground staff is built up—a job requiring several weeks.

Nazi planes now in Syria, numbering about 30, were believed to be bombers and troop-carriers flown from Greece, 1,000 miles away, an impossible distance for fighters, or perhaps from the Italian Dodecanese Islands, 450 miles away, these sources added.

Papers Advocate Bombing

Suggestions that the R.A.F. subject Syrian air fields to all-out attack were advanced by The Daily Telegraph, which declared:—

"Our air effort failed in Greece because the Germans put our air fields out of action. We should follow that example in Syria.

"The time has gone when we can pick and choose between German planes and Syrian airdromes. Syrian authorities, with the connivance of Vichy, are giving aid to our enemies. We should send them an ultimatum with a short time limit, telling them that unless they countermand the orders of the Petain Government at once we shall bomb Aleppo and Beirut."

The general tone of morning paper editorials was bitterly critical of France. The Times lashed at what it called "Vichy's act of betrayal" in permitting Nazi planes to enter Syria and commended President Roosevelt for his plea to the French to reject collaboration with Germany.

British Advance Lines

London, May 17 (CP)—An authoritative source said today the British garrison at Tobruk has advanced its lines around that Libyan port.

In Ethiopia, this source said, British troops have arrived at Dola, 50 miles north of Neghelli, and found there 80 men reported to have deserted the Italian forces.

(This dispatch made no mention of the situation along the Libyan-Egyptian border where the Germans claimed today they had recaptured Salum Egyptian town British forces had taken a day before.)

FOUR NARROWLY

Accident Described

Describing the accident Mr. Warner stated that he was not sure just what had happened after the impact it all happened so fast. "I know the car swerved and then plunged down the embankment" he said. "I think the car turned completely over and landed on its wheels in the river. In some manner Fred Lusk opened the rear door of the car and we all climbed out the door."

The car had rested on the bottom of the river with only about an inch of the top sticking out above the water. The occupants of the car were able to climb on top of the car and await help.

Motorists passing the scene procured a rope and it was thrown out to the car. The rope was tied to the door post of the car and the four were able to get ashore.

Chief Constable W. Bain who rushed to the scene took the occupants to the police station where they were placed in a taxi and taken to Belleville. According to reports, the occupants of the car suffered nothing more than a ducking and shock.

Constable J. Hatch investigated the accident.

"DAUGHTER OF DESTINY"

By ELEANOR ATTERBURY COLTON

CHAPTER XXIV

In the dingy safety of her own room again, Devona paced the floor nervously. Still frightened by her close brush with the danger she knew hovered behind Macia's thinly veiled threat, she tried to sort out her thoughts. She'd have to decide right now which way to turn.

Knees trembling, she sagged into a little heap on the bed. If she could play the game for just another 24 hours, maybe she could discover something Dale needed to know. As it was now, her suspicions were—just suspicions. And no one was in so good a position to find grounds for those suspicions as she was.

Slowly, a plan formed in her mind. First, she must call Talbot, exact of him a promise not to return to El Moxicano. Trembling, she reached for the phone, gave the number.

"But why not?" Tal demanded immediately, his voice sharp with concern.

"I—can't explain now. But please take my word for it. It's dangerous—for you," she said, her voice lowered as if she half-expected that Macias stood listening at her elbow right now. I'll see you Saturday evening after the show."

Future Looks Dark

"Look here. I don't like this——"

"Please Tal. It's all right. But Macias has taken a dislike to you for some silly reason and it—it would just save me embarrassment if you didn't come back for a while. It's silly, I know. But I promise to see you Saturday."

"Promise?"

"Yes—yes. I promise."

"Until then——"

Until Saturday. Trembling as if with a chill, Devona replaced the receiver, sat staring at the cold lump of metal blindly. Forty-eight hours until Saturday. What could happen before that! And why was she risking all this? Why not run now while she had the chance?

Because, instinct told her, the man she loved was in danger. Serious danger. And this might be a way to save his life. The man she loved——

Dropping onto the bed again she lay quivering like some hunted animal — too distraught to find comfort in tears, too weary to fight her way free of the despair that pressed against her heart. Life was such a mess!

She Has a Plan

Fog hovered just outside the window the next morning when she finally roused from dreams and came back to her problem. And by the time she'd dressed, swallowed scalding black coffee in the dreary dining room downstairs, she had a plan. Or at least the beginning of one.

Manuel was surprised to see her arrive at the club so early.

"Well—how come you honor our rehearsal with the sunshine of your smile, sister?" he grinned as she crossed the empty dining room to the platform.

The Troubadours rehearsed for a couple of hours, usually, before Devona joined them. But today she unrolled some new music, set it on the rack.

"I'm tired of the little ditties we've been doing lately and I heard these last night. How do you like them?" she fabricated quickly.

And then while Manuel and the Troubadours were trying out the new songs, fitting parts in harmony, making a cacophony of sound even over the scraping of chairs and the sloshing of mops as the scrubwomen cleaned the room around them, Devona kept her eye on the door to Macias' office.

"The boss here yet?" she asked, casually.

Manuel nodded. "He'll be along, though. Why?"

"Nothing. Just wondered."

Behind Closed Door

Carefully she covered her wandering away from the platform by pulling off her hat and jacket, pretending to start for her own dressing room. Then, when one of the charwomen inserted a passkey into the lock of the gray-paneled door, Dovoa smiled at her brightly.

"Going to give the boss' domain a little polishing?"

"Sure, Miss, and you should see it when I get through," the old Irish woman grinned toothlessly.

And while Devona was still wondering how she could manage it, the woman turned, picked up her pail, added,

"There now. I've gone and left my brushes down in the kitchen. Must be losing my head."

And still grumbling to herself, the cleaning woman closed the door again, set down her pail, ambled off down the hall.

What a stroke of good luck. Devona drew a deep breath, glanced quickly up the hall. If by any chance, the door latch had not been re-locked!

Fingers like ice, she tried it. The door was unlocked!

The Safe Opens

The next instant she was inside. Macias' dark eyes seemed actually to be staring at her from the portrait as her fingers stumbled around the elaborately carved gold frame, searching for the little, hidden button. And when the picture swung back against the wall, her memory dictated to her numb fingers—around three times, back twice, around again, back half way—as she spun the dial.

Her heart seemed to stop as the heavy door swung open. She'd done it! Then her eyes widened. Except for the fan and mantilla and carved, jewelled comb she'd seen Macias put in there only last evening, the safe was now—empty!

A footstep in the hall outside jarred her back to her senses. The cleaning woman would be back. It would be hard to explain why she had invaded the forbidden ground. No employee was allowed in Macias' office without good reason. Every one knew that.

She closed the door quickly, replaced the picture. Then, as she turned back to the door, terror took real hold of her. The voice outside was—Macias'.

For a moment, she stood as if poured into a mold. Was she caught—already! Then she remembered the secret panel. Crossing the deep-carpeted room, pressing the little panel aside, closing it again—it was a matter of a moment. And she'd scarcely stepped into the little passageway beyond when she heard the door outside open, Macias saying.

"Never mind now, Nora. I'm busy. You can clean here later."

Then the sound of the door closing, the key turning in the latch. Scarcely daring to breathe for fear she'd betray her hiding place, Devona pressed against the wall, motionless. She heard Macias cross the room, scrape back a chair. A moment later, he gave a telephone number—his voice lowered so that she had to strain to hear.

What She Heard

"Hello. Hello! That you, Joe? Listen. I delivered the stuff all right, but the cops are getting wise. Now get this straight!

"Tell Sam I'll pick up the new batch myself. Tell him to call me direct as soon as it's in. Get that?"

Devona waited until she heard him hang up, begin opening and closing desk drawers, moving restlessly around the room before she stole silently down the narrow corridor to the outside door. It it were locked from the inside as well as—

Her breath escaped in a little sigh. It wasn't. Carefully, she opened it, glanced up and down the alley, closed it noiselessly behind her. She'd made the first hurdle, she congratulated herself as she sped down the alley toward the club's rear entrance. And made a beginning, too, in her search for evidence. That message Macias would be expecting sometime Saturday, that "new stuff"—if she could find out something about that——

Head down against the stiff wind that had sprung up, she hurried around the corner. Bumped squarely into some one.

"Hello!"

It was Joe—Macias' chauffeur.

"Oh—hello." And tried to laugh around her guilty confusion "Fancy meeting you here."

He glanced over her shoulder, down the length of the deserted alley. "What's up?"

Desperately, Devona called out her wits. What a stupid blunder. What reason could she give him for her being in the alley at 11 in the morning when he knew as well as she that she didn't even go on duty until afternoon. Smiling, she shrugged.

"Came down for extra-early rehearsal. Foul morning, isn't it?"

And, ignoring his puzzled glance at her, and perfectly aware that being hatless and coatless didn't help her story any, she ran on into the side entrance. Once safely inside again, she slipped through the busy kitchens, down the steps to her own dressing room.

Had she bungled that hopelessly, she wondered frantically as she slipped out of street clothes into a costume. What if Joe went right to Macias, mentioned, either accidentally or purposely, having found her racing along the alley at this hour! What if, later, Joe happened to remember seeing her there!

Facing Macias

Shrugging the ruffled satin into place, Devona dropped down before her dressing table, began applying the rouge, the eyeshadow, the heavy powder that was part of her mask. Probably Joe wouldn't think of it again. She tried to believe that. Just a casual meeting—she was oversensitive, too apprehensive. Anyway — and she tried to shrug aside mounting fears—she had to take a chance.

She nodded, skirted the stacks of chairs, tables, went quickly to the platform. But not so quickly but that she met Macias.

Scowling, he looked at her. "What are you doing down here at this hour—and all dressed?"

She shrugged a smile at him. "Some new songs to rehearse. I thought I might as well get ready while I was waiting for Manuel."

Her heart hammered so loudly against her throat she thought surely he must hear it, detect the tremor in her voice. But, apparently he didn't. He only nodded, his scowl still deep.

Body construction is of laminated strips of scrap lumber. Sides can be built heavier to boost weight total, or can be cut down to lighten weight if needed. The champion's car depended for weight largely on a heavy, solid floor, made of two 2x12 planks. DUKE OF AOSTA SURRENDERS TO BRITISH TERMS

British Trap Duke And Italian Army Near Amba Alaji

Surrender Will Release British Forces For Fighting Elsewhere

TERMS NOT DISCLOSED

London, May 19. — (CP) — The Duke of Aosta has accepted Britain's terms for the surrender of Amba Alaji and its garrison in Ethiopia, it was stated today.

British forces which trapped the Duke and his army 280 miles north east of Addis Ababa are expected to enter the Amba Alaji Mountain stronghold today.

The British terms were not disclosed and it was not known immediately whether the Duke himself would become a prisoner of war.

The force under the Duke was regarded here as the most important which had maintained resistance in Ethiopia. The surrender will release some British troops for fighting elsewhere.

7,000 Italians Trapped

Troops at Amba Alaji were reported to include 7,000 Italians.

(British estimates said Colonial troops with the Italians brought the total to 35,000 to 37,000.)

It was believed here that Fascist forces holding out in the vicinity of Gondar and Jimma would go on fighting independent of their viceroy's action.

Senior Meds May Return To Fall Classes Weeks Earlier

Toronto, May 19.—(CP)—Dr. E. Stanley Ryerson, assistant dean of the Faculty of Medicine in the University of Toronto, announced today that fifth and sixth-year medical students may return to classes in the Fall several weeks earlier than usual. A meeting of the medical faculty will be held Thursday to discuss probable date for reopening.

Dr. Ryerson said reopening of the classes earlier was necessitated in order to speed up courses to fill the demand for medical men for the army, navy and air force.

Ottawa (CP)—Army medical authorities and Deans of the Faculties of Medicine at a number of Canadian Universities have held discussions looking toward keeping up the supply of medical men for the armed services, it was learned at Defence Headquarters today.

Discussion centred round a plan whereby medical schools would be kept open through the summer, but no decision has yet been reached.

The deans are expected to give further consideration to plans among themselves and probably will make announcements regarding decisions reached, the Defence Department said.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, May 19. — (CP)—The weather has been generally fair in the western provinces with a few light scattered showers in Saskatchewan. Fair weather with moderate temperature has prevailed in Ontario.

Retired Physician Dies At Marmora

Marmora, (Special)—The body of Dr. D. Thomson, retired medical practitioner of Marmora, was recovered from the waters of Beaver Creek about a mile north of Marmora about three p.m. on Sunday by E. C. Prentice and N. Mumby, members of a search party which under Provincial Constable Art Dymond of Madoc, and Village Constable William Lavender had been searching in that vicinity for the missing doctor since dusk on Saturday, when the doctor's prolonged absence caused alarm. The doctor had been in the habit recently of taking constitutional walks up the old railroad track which leads to Cordova and where rails are being taken up. A bridge which spanned Beaver Creek has been removed. Tracks believed to have been made by the doctor's shoes were seen to lead to the bank of Beaver Creek where formerly was the Marmora end of the bridge. No tracks could be seen to suggest that the person causing them had retraced steps. The theory that the doctor had fallen into the creek was acted upon and its waters dragged. When the body was recovered it was about one hundred feet west of where the bridge had been. Dr. H. Crawford was called to the scene and Coroner Dr. S. R. Beatty of Madoc, notified. The latter decided that an inquest was unnecessary. The body was later removed to the undertaking parlours of F. N. Marett and Company. The deceased doctor was highly respected in this district because of his many fine qualities and the profound sympathy of the community is extended to his widow and family in their bereavement. The children are Jean of New York and James, who has recently been living in St. Catharines.

REMANDED WITHOUT PLEA

London, Ont., May 19 —(CP)—Accused of robbery with violence of a civilian Saturday night, two active army soldiers were remanded to Wednesday, without plea, in city court today. They are Gnr. Marvin Cooper, 25, with an anti-aircraft battery training at Woodstock, and Gnr. Harold Mason, 38, of a Petawawa artillery unit.

They were arrested soon after John Floyd Graham, 43, London, told police he was attacked by two soldiers in the yard at the rear of a Dundas Street East hotel.

A cigaret lighter and $9 in cash were taken from his pockets.

ROYAL AIR FORCE CARRIES BRUNT OF ATTACKS IN IRAQ

British Circles Regard Nazi Occupation Of Mosul Air Base As Particularly Serious

WATCH DEVELOPMENTS

Cairo, Egypt, May 19 (AP)—British planes have made renewed attacks on German aircraft on Syrian airdromes, the Royal Air Force Middle East Command announced today.

The Italian capitulation at their last major stronghold in Northeast Ethiopia came after the Italians were allowed one full day in which to collect their wounded, a communique said.

The provision that Aosta, accompanied by General Trezzani and all the Duke's personal staff, surrender at noon tomorrow was made in compliance with his urgent request, it was said.

On the North African front two Axis columns which crossed the Egyptian frontier with the support of numerous tanks were forced to withdraw when they were engaged by British mechanized forces.

No change was reported in the situation at Tobruk.

London, May 19 (CP)—The Royal Air Force bore the brunt of Britain's Iraq campaign during the week-end as British bombers battled Nazi Messerschmitts, bombed Nazi-used airports and attacked transport vehicles.

Well-informed British circles regarded the Nazi occupation of the Mosul air base, in oil-rich northern Iraq, as particularly serious.

Developments in Syria also were watched closely for indications that the war in the Middle East might bring hostilities in that French-mandated territory where British planes last week bombed three airports being used by Nazi aircraft.

AUSTRALIAN TRADE

Melbourne (CP) — Australia's overseas trade in 1940 was valued at £245,219,000 ($865,623,000) compared with £194,691,000 in 1939, an increase of £50,528,000.

Hull Says U.S. "Will Find A Way" To Guarantee Delivery Of Supplies

Washington, May 19 —(AP)—State Secretary Cordell Hull, defining the position of the United States in the world today as one of mortal danger, told the nation last night "we will find a way" to guarantee delivery of adequate supplies to Britain.

He repeated his belief that Britain's successful defence was vital to United States security and in a radio address put forward the five peace points which the administration feels should guide any post-war settlement.

Hull spoke of no peace now, however.

"First," he emphasized, "the tide of force must be turned back."

Hull said that until a system of open trade is firmly established, "there will never be peace in any real sense of the term." The occasion for his address was the observance of foreign trade week.

Five Peace Points

His peace points:—

"1. Extreme nationalism must not again be permitted to express itself in excessive trade restrictions.

"2. Nondiscrimination in international trade may grow and prosper.

"3. Raw material supplies must be available to all nations without discrimination.

"4. International agreements regulating the supply of commodities must be so handled as to protect the interests of the consuming countries and their people

"5. The institutions and arrangements of international finance must be so set up that they lend aid to the essential enterprises and the continuous development of all countries, and permit the payment through process of trade consonant with the welfare of all countries."

Predatories Policies

Against this program he set the "predatory policies and methods of the totalitarians" which he characterized as a system of "economic spoliation," rather than of economic co-operation.

Speaking of aid to Britain, Hull mentioned no specific methods for assuring safe delivery of supplies, but he emphasized that whatever was necessary must be done.

"We will find a way to insure that the weapons pouring in ever increasing volume from our factories will reach the hands which eagerly await them," he said.

He charged that the goal of the Axis is to obtain control of the seas, to further its program of "world domination."

United States Gov't Takes Over Control Of All Nickel Supplies

Washington, May 19 (AP)— The United States government took over complete control today of all nickel supplies in an action designed to curtail sharply the amount of metal being used for civilian purposes.

Almost all of the United States' supply of nickel comes from Canada, which produces 85 per cent of the world's supply.

Nickel is in great demand for the defence program, principal for use in production of alloy steels.

E. R. Stettinius, Jr., Defence Director of Priorities, announced the new plan for allocation of nickel and said that it would take the place of the system of issuing priorities, or preference ratings, which has been in effect since March.

The Priorities Division of the Office of Production Management hereafter will make allocations each month of all available supplies of nickel.

Stettinius said that the new procedure did not include any schedule of preference ratings for civilian uses, but that some allocations would be made for them "on a restricted basis" in order to prevent serious dislocations in established manufacturing plants and to prevent sudden unemployment.

"However, it is apparent that supplies of nickel flowing to civilian channels will have to be drastically curtailed," Stettinius said in a statement.

During May, about 15,500,000 pounds will be available in this country—the largest amount ever supplied to American industry in one month. Estimates indicate however, that the total demand, if it could be filled, would approximate 21,000,000 pounds.

Officials estimate that the shortage for all civilian and military needs during 1941 probably will amount to 45,000,000 pounds.

SYRIAN GOVERNOR CALLSUPONPEOPLE TO RESIST BRITAIN

In Radio Speech Says That England Again Sheds French Blood

WILL DEFEND COUNTRY

Beirut, Lebanon, May 19—(CP)—Gen. Henri Dentz, Vichy's High Commissioner in French-mandated Syria and Lebanon, issued a proclamation today calling upon the people to resist what he described as "criminal aggressions" by Britain.

The High Commissioner in a radio broadcast asserted that "once again after Mers-El-Kebir and Dakar England sheds French blood".

This was in reference to the British Fleet's attacks last July on units of the French fleet.

At the same time that Marshal Petain was broadcasting "the French desire for peace" last week General Dentz claimed, Britain started "attacking our airdromes without warning".

(Aidromes in Syria, neighboring Iraq, are being used by Axis planes flying to the aid of the Iraq rebels, and accordingly have been attacked by the Royal Air Force.)

Dentz said that, according to Britain, the French "should have repulsed by force German planes which flew over Syria and which occasionally landed".

"Nothing justifies that position," the High Commissioner declared.

"Marshal Petain said that France has no aggressive intentions against England or her Empire".

German landings in Syria, he said, were the result of application of the armistice, and he asserted the British position was "nothing but invention and outrageous calumny".

"You will resist any aggression", Dentz told the people. "I have been ordered to defend the sky and the land of the Levant States. That mission I will carry out inflexibly".

14 CARS DERAILED BY BROKEN WHEEL IN C.N.R. WRECK

Accident Occurs Six Miles West of Belleville Early Saturday Morning

TRAFFIC DISRUPTED

Many thousands of bushels of Canadian wheat en route to an eastern port were strewn along the right-of-way of the Canadian National Railways near the Bayside siding, six miles west of here on Saturday when fourteen loaded box cars were derailed and traffic on the mainline of the C.N.R. disrupted for many hours following the derailment of a freight train. After minute investigations Canadian National Railways' authorities stated the wreck was presumably caused by a broken box car wheel, the result of sticky or a tightened brake band. No person was injured during the wreck, but fourteen box cars were derailed and several hundred feet of railway track near Bayside was left a twisted mass of steel ribbon rails as traffic on both east and west bound tracks was affected.

Railroad Workers In United States To Demand Increase

Chicago, May 19 (AP)—Representatives of the five big United States railroad operating unions, representing 350,000 workers, announced today they had decided to launch a concerted, national campaign for a 30 per cent. increase in all basic rates of pay.

Following a conference which began last Friday, they announced they would demand wage increases which would amount to not less than $1.80 a day.

Their demands will be served on the railroads June 10 pursuant to provisions of the National Railway Mediation Board.

Unions represented at the conference were the Brotherhoods of Locomotive Engineers, Locomotive Firemen and Engine Men, and Railroad Trainmen, the Switchmen's Union and the Order of Railway Conductors of America.

Port Of Emden And Cherbourg Attacked By Planes Of Fleet Air Arm

RAILWAYS DAMAGED

London, May 19 (CP)—Royal Air Force Bombers inflicted "further damage" on shipbuilding yards at the Nazi naval base at Kiel last night and also raided the Port of Emden, the Air Ministry announced today.

Docks at Cherbourg in Nazi-occupied France also were attacked by planes of the fleet air arm. All aircraft returned safely.

Saturday night the R.A.F. blasted the Rhineland city of Cologne with a "constant rain of bombs" for the second night in a row. Many fires were started.

(Nazi sources acknowledged damage to railway facilities and destruction of buildings in the Saturday raid; and said many persons were killed.)

There was little activity over the British Isles last night and early today, aside from sporadic raids on parts of the Channel Coast. Two Nazi raiders were shot down.

The streets of one English town were machine-gunned and some bombs were dropped at two south-west coast towns.

A Nazi bomber was shot down into the sea off an east coast town today by anti-aircraft fire while make a dive attack.

3 British Hospital Ships Escape Nazi Bombers In Mediterranean

Alexandria, May 19 (AP)—Three British hospital ships in Middle Eastern waters were attacked heavily by Nazi dive bombers but all three escaped, British authorities said last night.

Two hospital ships at Tobruk, Libya, and one near Crete, all of which were marked clearly with huge Red Crosses, were made targets of the Nazi raiders.

The Vita was shaken by near misses in Tobruk harbor but managed to carry out her job of carrying wounded from that British-held port. The Karapura suffered a hit in the engine room but there were no casualties.

The Aba, reported attacked 120 miles south of Crete, summoned a nearby destroyer patrol which hurried up, fired an "umbrella barrage" and drove off the dive bombers.

Aside from the bare Alexandria announcement that the ship had gone to the bottom after leaving Recife (Pernambuco) Brazil, on April 9 for Cape Town, Union of South Africa, her next stop, there was no definite word of what happened to the 32-year-old ship.

Canadians on board were reported to include twelve members of the Oblate order and five brothers of the Sacred Heart Brotherhood.

TWO PEDESTRIANS HIT BY MOTOR CARS

Two cases of pedestrians being knocked down by motor cars on city streets were reported to Belleville police over the week-end, no serious injuries resulting in either incident.

Miss Bessie McDonald, Cannifton Road, was knocked down on Station Street, Saturday when she stepped into the path of a motor car driven by John Moon, 100 Cannifton Road. Miss McDonald assured the driver the only injury sustained was a slight abrasion of the leg.

Donald Orr, 51 Cannifton Road, told police he had knocked down a man opposite the old No. 1 fire hall as he drove past on Sunday afternoon. The man stepped out from behind a parked car directly into the side of the moving vehicle, but arose and walked away assuring the driver no serious injuries had resulted. As a protection, however, both motorists reported their facts of their respective accidents to the police.

SNEAK THIEVES ENTER LUMBER OFFICE

Sneak thieves broke and entered the premises of the Houston Lumber Company, St. Paul Street, sometime early Sunday and stole cash from the soft drink slot machine, chocolate bars and several bottles of soft drinks.

The robbery was discovered by employees late Sunday, Constables Ellis and Wright investigating. The officers found that entrance had been made through an east window. The culprits entered the premises and employing a hammer broke open the cash container of the company soft drink dispenser and removed the money.

THREE WOMEN HURT IN ACCIDENT

Sideswiping the rear end of a large motor transport two miles west of Belleville on Highway No. 2, a motor car driven by Flight-Sergeant G. E. White, R.C.A.F., turned completely over into the ditch early Monday morning. Three young lady passengers in the vehicle sustained lacerations as the result of flying glass, while Ollis Allen, also of the R.C.A.F., escaped with slight abrasions as did the driver.

Motorcycle Patrolman J. H. Hatch investigated the crash, which occurred shortly after 4.00 a.m. Monday morning and was told by James Parkhurst, Belleville and driver of the large transport, that the motor car diven by White had sideswiped the extreme rear end of the transport, which he was driving westerly. After the impact the automobile turned completely over into the south ditch.

ONLY TEN PRISONERS IN COUNTY JAIL

It may be the advent of warmer weather, and the appeal of sunshine and fresh air, or again, it may be a depreciation of crime in the district, but the fact remains that only ten inmates, the lowest during the tenure of office of Jail-Governor G. H. French, are now in the Hastings County jail.

EARLY PLANTING OF TOMATO PLANTS

What is said by some growers to be the earliest planting in a number of years, tomatoes are making their appearance in fields of the district. Lack of ordinary spring rains has hastened the preparations for planting, and this is said to be one of the main contributing factors to the early planting. Plants are said to have attained a sturdy growth and the fact that planting will have a head start on other years, augurs well for the seasonal crop, barring adverse weather conditions within the next six weeks.

WEED CONTROL GROUPS TO HOLD MEETINGS

In an effort to remind farmers of Hastings County of the seriousness of weed control, meetings have been arranged by representatives of the Ontario Department of Agriculture at which preventative and remedial measures will be discussed, according to Agricultural Representative H. L. Fair, of Stirling. Meetings will be held in the near future at Shire Hall, Belleville and in Madoc.

SUDDEN IMPACT FRACTURES LEG

Canadian National Railway brakeman of Cobourg, William H. Savage, sustained a fractured leg while attending his duties in the Belleville C.N.R. yards over the week-end. Mr. Savage was standing in the caboose of a freight train, that had stopped to take on coal at the Belleville coal chutes, when the sudden taking up of the slack by the train resulted in his being thrown off balance and to the floor of the caboose. The fracture of a leg was the result of the sudden impact.

MEMBERS OF O.E.S. ATTEND SERVICE

Mrs. G. E. Deroche And Nephew Robt. McCulloch Return After Being Missing Over Night On Bay

Were Making Boat Trip From Cole's Landing to City When Engine Stops in Big Bay

STAY IN FARMHOUSE

Little the worse for their nine-hour experience on Big Bay on Sunday afternoon and night, where they battled heavy seas before successfully effecting a landing on Big Island, Mrs. G. E. Deroche, wife of Judge G. E. Deroche, Campbell Street, and a nephew, Robert J. McCulloch, young barrister of this city, arrived home shortly after ten o'clock today, after being reported missing for about seventeen hours.

The story of how the large motor boat drifted about the waters of the bay after its motor had been forced out of action by large waves that swept intermittently over the craft; how its drenched occupants rigged a temporary sail from a piece of tarpaulin and a heavy stick and guided the boat in this manner to the safety of the shoreline of the island, was told today by Judge G. E. Deroche. "Mrs. Deroche," the judge smiled, when approached by a newspaperman, "is a grand little sport. She is none the worse for her experience, but is feeling a slight reaction to the excitement."

The couple clambered ashore shortly after midnight from the boat and secured a night's lodging in the residence of an unidentified Big Island farmer. They awakened this morning and after a country breakfast proceeded on their way to Belleville. They were sighted shortly after 7.30 a.m. by Royal Canadian Air Force planes, enlisted early today by Judge Deasche to assist in the search for the missing couple, as they chugged their way up the bay to home and safety.

Search Parties Out All Night

Search parties swept the bay all night and early today after Mrs. Deroche and McCulloch had been reported missing. Provincial Police under the direction of Inspector Gardner were divided into two parties early today and swept the reaches of the bay from Belleville eastward and Deseronto westward.

The couple was last seen yesterday at Cole's Landing, Prince Edward County, where McCulloch had taken over a motor fish boat he had purchased recently. Judge Deroche, with his wife, had driven the young lawyer to the scene and later Mrs. Deroche and McCulloch decided to return to the city in the craft. Judge Deroche returned by automobile. His last sight of the voyagers occurred when they were about three miles out in the bay, headed for home and apparently doing well.

The boat was reported to have been seen by Mr. P. H. Wills, of Northport, who stated that it appeared to be under way satisfactorily. About 4.45, residents of Deseronto stated that the boat had been sighted in the bay off that point and appeared to be having motor trouble.

Failing to put in an appearance at eleven o'clock Sunday night after being on the water several hours, Mrs. Deroche and Mr. McCulloch were reported missing and a three-man search party, consisting of Floyd Martin, Greer Roberts, son-in-law of Judge Deroche, and Bud Haines scoured the waters of the bay in Martin's speedboat until five o'clock this morning.

Shoreline Searched

Farmers searched the shoreline on the north side of the bay from the point where the Salmon River enters the body of water, to Deseronto and Point Anne in a futile attempt to locate the missing people. Boats put out from the opposite shore and scoured the southern shore.

According to Mrs. Deroche, who related her adventures to her husband after her arrival at home, all went well with the journey until the boat chugged into Big Bay. Heavy winds struck suddenly across the bay lashing the water into white-caps. Spray washed over the craft drenching the occupants. Pounded by the waves, the boat started a leak, and suddenly the motor "conked" out.

Rigged Up Sail

Realizing the fact that if their course was not diverted, they would be driven directly down the bay, McCulloch and Mrs. Deroche rigged up an improvised sail from an old tarpaulin and a stick and holding on to their strange sail with all their strength, managed to steer the boat to the safety of the northwest corner of Big Island.

Here the boat grounded, and the occupants were forced to wade through water to reach the shore. Clambering up a steep bank, they made their way through the darkness until they saw the shadow of a house loom in front of them. Efforts to rouse the occupants revealed the place to be empty, so they resumed their journey. Eventually they came to another farmhouse, where they were taken in for the night. The home, it was related, had no telephone, nor was there one available for miles.

McCulloch had little or no effort in starting the boat's motor this morning and the couple proceeded homeward, later being seen by searching aircraft.

Thug Attacks Local Service Station Attendant

Attacked by a stranger, who wielded a motor truck fire extinguisher as a weapon of attack, William Williamson, 302 Bleecker Avenue, and night attendant at the Goodrich Service Station, Dundas Street, successfully protected himself from being beaten into submission and after disarming his assailant, the stranger ran from the building and north on Ann Street, shortly before 6.00 a.m. Monday morning.

Williamson was employed as night attendant at the service station and was inside the premises when a stranger entered the building with one hand secreted behind his back. Before Williamson could realize the intentions of his assailant, the man suddenly commenced to swing a fire extinguisher which he had secured from a parked truck outside. Williamson battled his assailant and finally disarmed him, the would-be robber then taking to his heels. Somewhat exhausted as a result of the tussle, Mr. Williamson finally managed to telephone the city police. Constables Taylor and Arnott hastened to the scene, but in spite of an intense search of the immediate vicinity, no signs of the man were in evidence.

He was described as being a young man about 18 to 20 years of age, light complexion, blonde hair and standing five feet nine or ten inches tall and weighing about 150 pounds, Mr. Williamson thought.

"He mumbled something about hand over that money, as he jumped towards me swinging the fire extinguisher in the direction of my head. I ducked and fought him off," was the only comment Mr. Williamson had to make today. Belleville police later learned that a man answering the same description was seen loitering in the vicinity of two other Dundas Street service stations earlier Sunday morning.

Large Bible Presented For Chapel Of Hospital By Bible Society

Rev. Dr. McNicol for Upper Canada Society Makes Presentation — Local Branch Holds Annual Meeting

A large Bible for use in the chapel of the Belleville General Hospital, which was some time ago presented and dedicated by the local Ministerial Association, was presented last evening by the Upper Canada branch of the British and Foreign Bible Society to the Ministerial Association at a meeting in Christ Church parish hall. The gift was made at the annual meeting of the local branch of the Bible Society by Rev. Dr. John McNicol, former president of the Upper Canada branch and principal of the Toronto Bible College.

Rev. C. V. Freeman, president of the Ministerial Association, accepted the gift.

Rev. Dr. James Semple introduced Dr. McNicol who he said had been head of the Toronto Bible College for 39 years. Dr. McNicol stated that he felt it was very fitting to have opened a chapel in the hospital in these days of trials for the hospital stands as one of the great humanitarian agencies.

A Consolation and Hope

Rev. Mr. Freeman said it would be placed in the chapel where he knew it would be a consolation, comfort, hope and light, to those using the chapel. He asked Dr. McNicol to express to the Bible Society the gratitude of the association.

Mr. Gordon Barclay, acting administrator of the hospital, remarked, 'If you had seen people going into the chapel which the Ministerial Association dedicated you would see how people are finding comfort." On behalf of the W.C.A. and the Hospital Board he expressed thanks to the Bible Society in furnishing this beautiful copy of the Scriptures.

The Bible bears the inscription, "Presented to the Ministerial Association of Belleville for the chapel of the General Hospital of Belleville by the Upper Canada Bible Society, Toronto, Ontario, May 3, 1941, F. B. Allnutt, district secretary, Holding forth the Word of Life, Phillippians 2-16."

Rev. Mr. Wright, occupied the chair at the meeting of the local branch of the Society.

Local Officers Reelected

On motion of Rev. James Semple, officers were reelected for the coming year. Among officers are William M. Leslie, president; Vernon Weir, vice president; Rev. L. S. Wight, secretary, and Dr. N. Edwards, treasurer.

Rev. Dr. F. B. Allnutt, showed several reels of motion pictures, illustrating the arrival of Stanley in the late Nyanza country, the reception of the Gospel in Algiers and the story of how the translator works. The views were very interesting and illustrated the story of the work of the British and Foreign Bible Society. One film showed the presentation of copies of the New Testament to the Canadian soldiers. Bibles are presented to all serving Canada in the various services.

Dr. Allnutt paid a tribute to the memory of the late Rev. Albert L. Geen. "I am thinking of Rev. Mr. Geen," he said. "I cannot recall any man anywhere who loved the Word of God and worked harder for its cause than the Rev. Mr. Geen. He gave hundreds of dollars to the Society for life memberships. The Upper Canada Bible Society does not forget his great work."

At the close of the meeting, Mr. V. Weir moved a hearty vote of thanks to Rev. G. G. Wright for the use of the hall for the annual meeting.

Work of the Bible Society was presented in a number of the churches yesterday by Rev. Principal John McNicol of the Toronto Bible College and Rev. F. B. Allnutt, district secretary of the Upper Canada Bible Society. The former spoke at Bridge Street Church and the Alliance Tabernacle and the latter at St. Andrew's and at Holloway Street churches.

Parallel Parking On One Side Front St. Suggested

L. McDougal Believes it Would Reduce Minor Motor Accidents and Would Keep Down Insurance Rates

As a means to help reduce the number of minor motor accidents occurring on Front Street during hours of traffic congestion, the Belleille Chamber of Commerce has been asked to get behind the recent movement of the city council to inaugurate a new system of parking calling for part angle and part parallel parking of cars along the main thoroughfare.

During the course of a discussion of the parking problem at a recent directors' meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, it was suggested by Mr. Lorne McDougal, local insurance agent, that the number of accidents would be substantially reduced should the new parking system be adopted. Under the present system of angle parking on both sides of the street, the width of the street thus left for vehicular traffic was entirely to narrow, he said, and adoption of parallel parking on one side should help reduce accidents.

Mr. McDougal felt that with the development of the proposed Riverside Drive, parking problems would be greatly alleviated in the city and the loss of parking space occasioned by return to parrallel parking would be more than offset. A reduction of motor accidents in the city might prevent Belleville being placed in the category of Kingston and Oshawa, where higher rates for automobile insurance prevail, stated Mr. McDougal.

Firecracker Explodes, Nearly Blinds Girl

What was intended to be a prank nearly proved a serious piece of business late Saturday night, when a firecracker, exploding in the hands of a member of the R.C.A.F., nearly blinded a young lady in a downtown restaurant. The young woman, Miss Armada Jones, 1 Starling Street, was taken to the Belleville General Hospital where she was attended by Dr. G. S. Cronk. Fortunately the sight of the eyes was not affected, although Miss Jones' clothing was burned as the result of the prank.

Air Force Service police observed Harry Neal, A.C.2 of the R.C.A.F., igniting firecrackers inside the London Lunch premises and cautioned Neal against such practice. Later it is alleged Neal lighted another firecracker and held it in his hand while the firecracker exploded. Particles of the exploding powder ignited Miss Jones' clothing as the flash struck her in the face. Crying she was unable to see, the girl was rushed to the hospital where subsequent examinations proved her eyesight had not been impaired.

Neal was taken into custody by the R.C.A.F. service police and delivered into the keeping of the city police.

Later he was returned to the Trenton air base under escort and charges are pending, Chief Kidd revealed today.

Relief Vouchers To Be Paid In Cash By Kingston Office

The social welfare committee of the city of Kingston will for a trial period pay all relief vouchers in cash, it was announced following a special meeting held on Friday afternoon to decide upon the question. The meeting had been called as the result of a suggestion of the Ontario Government that certain relief offices throughout the province, of which Kingston was one, pay relief in cash.

That Belleville had not been included among the centres advised to pay relief vouchers in cash has been suggested by the fact that Miss Helena Lynch, local relief administrator, has received no communication from provincial authorities regarding the issue. It is understood that the change from the present system to the payment of relief in cash would relieve the clerks in welfare departments of a great deal of work and would cut down administration.

POLICE COURT

Police were called to the intersection of Victoria Ave. and Ann St. on Sunday afternoon where a ball game was in progress in the centre of the intersection. The names of the participants were taken and the boys were warned to refrain from such proceedings in the future.

"Playing ball in the centre of the street is not only a dangerous practice for children but hazardous to motorists, who might come upon the unsuspecting lads without warning," P. C. Wm. Evans added as a note of warning to parents following the investigating of yesterday's complaint.

Trenton police reported the theft of a 1938 model Chevrolet coach stolen in that town late Sunday. The vehicle was taken from the premises of Graham's garage and is believed to have been equipped with Ontario licence plate numbers 424J2.

Given Three Months

Fred Clapper, Belleville, was sentenced to serve three months in the county jail after he pleaded guilty to a charge of intoxication when arraigned before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., on Monday morning. It was a third intoxication offence registered against the accused man inside the period of twelve months, which left the court no alternative than the extended jail sentence.

Elementary School for Fliers at Vancouver Trains Students From Other Parts of Dominion

By FRED MURPHY

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Vancouver (CP) — The job of turning out advanced pupils for the Royal Canadian Air Force is rolling along in high gear at the No. 8 Elementary Air Training School and the school is ahead of schedule. Leslie J. Martin, British Columbia director of the British Empire Air Traning plan under which the school operates, disclosed that 20-odd classes have been advanced into senior training since the school opened 10 months ago. The number of students is secret.

Like its record of production, the school's record of pupils successful in passing examinations and tests is high and Mr. Martin revealed that prospective pilots sent on to advanced training schools from "No. 8" are among the best prepared in Canada. Students come from all parts of the Dominion with a liberal sprinkling of volunteers from the United States.

Come From East

After four weeks at an initial training school in eastern Canada, student fliers are given a seven-weeks course at schools such as Number 8, situated at the Vancouver civic airport on Sea Island, about eight miles from the centre of Vancouver. Their training here consists of courses in airmanship, navigation, flight theory, armaments, aeronautical engineering, administration and equipment supervision, and 50 to 65 hours flying time.

Into the seven weeks is packed many hours of lectures, instruction and practice, and the time passes quickly for most of the students. Flying time seems particularly short to the average embryo pilot. "You'd be surprised how fast an hour passes in the air," said one young flier who had just brought his yellow Tiger Moth training plane down on the busy landing field after an hour of acrobatics and practice forced landings.

Among dozens of training planes used at the school are 13 purchased by the city of Vancouver at a "air-supremacy" drive held here a year ago. The school is operated on a seven-day week, with students allowed leave until midnight on alternate nights and on Sunday mornings to attend church services if they so wish.

Eager To Train

Captain Terrance H. Finney, chief ground instructor at the school, said little advantage is taken of the few hours freedom at night, however — students being too anxious to continue their studies.

Each student must put in 25 to 30 hours solo flying, five hours acrobatics and five hours instrument. In addition to this he must spend 10 hours in the Link trainer, a hooded device containing airplane instruments and controls which instructors have found a valuable aid in teaching "blind" or instrument flying.

The student sits in the Link trainer operating the controls while an electric "crab" traces his course before an instructor sitting at a desk nearby. Should the student get off his course the instructor can give him necessary corrections' through use of a microphone and earphones.

Previous flying experience is not necessarily considered an advantage to the recruit, and often is looked on as a handicap. "Many recruits who have had a few hours in the air before enlisting believe this experience gives them an advantage over raw recruits," Captain Finney said.

Another step in increasing the output of pilots in Canada was the recent opening of Elementary Air Training School No. 18, at Boundary Bay, B.C., about 20 miles south of here. It is one of the largest elementary schools operating in Canada at the present time.

Laying Foundation For New Social Order

London, May 19 (CP)—Colonial Undersecretary George Hall said yesterday in a speech reported by the British Broadcasting Corporation that Britain is laying the foundation for "new social order" in the Empire despite her preoccupation with the war.

"Since the outbreak of war," Hall said, "the watch on the interests of working people throughout the Empire has increased four-fold.

"Hundreds of laws and regulations dealing with labor conditions have been passed and 160 Colonial trade unions now are registered under the Colonial Trade Union Law."

Hall admitted that some colonies had "grievances" but added:—

"There are no fugitives, and there are hundreds of thousands waiting to come within the protection of the empire."

CANADA CALLS

Canada has reason to count her blessings in these days of trial.

Canada is three thousand miles away from the sound of guns which are devastating Europe.

The broad Atlantic Ocean rolls between us and the ruthless savagery of the German armies.

The strongest fleets in the world—British, American and Canadian—patrol the sea between us and the enemy.

We have a great friendly nation, probably the richest and most powerful in the world, at our side.

CANADA CAN AFFORD HER SACRIFICES

This war is a mechanized war.

We have the nickel ... copper ... lead ... zinc and other metals the war industries need. We have access to the iron. We can make the steel.

We have the organized industries to fabricate these metals and make the trucks, and tanks, and guns, and planes, and the ships.

We have skilled workers and the plants for mass production.

Canada has the wheat and the food supplies.

Let us count our blessings, and tighten our belts.

Canada is rich—one of the richest countries per head of population in the world. Let us lend our strength to the utmost of our power. Our national future depends upon Victory.

We must win to live.

THERE WILL BE FURTHER CALLS

There have been many calls upon the people of this country for money since Canada entered the war at the side of Great Britain.

There will be further calls.

Let us face the future unafraid.

Canada can carry the load.

This is the most critical hour in our history. Let the future historians say of Canada, as they will say of our Mother Country: "This was their finest hour."

EXIT DUCE'S E. AFRICAN EMPIRE

Britain has made a short story of Italy's Ethiopian Empire. Today the Duke of Aosta, Italian commander in Ethiopia, accepted terms of surrender for which he asked the British at the weekend. With this collapse of Italian resistance there has been written finis to Italy's hold on Ethiopia. The terms were not yet made public early today.

The force with the Duke numbers, it is estimated, about 38,000 men, of whom 7,000 were said in early reports to be Italians and the rest native troops.

The Duke's forlorn resistance was blocked by the British who surrounded the enemy on the Ethiopian mountain, Alama Alazi, 280 miles north of Addis Ababa.

So falls the curtain for Mussolini's East African Empire. Events have moved swiftly since the banner of the Emperor, Haile Selassie, was raised and British and Empire troops with the help of Haile Selassie's warriors started to eject the intruder Italians who had been less than five years in occupation of the territory the Fascist aggressors had seized in a brutal quarrel picked by Mussolini with the Ethiopian ruler.

In all Italy's history no empire crumbled so fast as the lands seized by Mussolini. The ancient Romans built an empire which lasted for centuries. The earlier days of Rome had not been easy for it took three Punic wars for her to destroy the power of Carthage, in what is now Tunis in North Africa, and these wars were stretched over a period from 264 B.C. to 146 B. C. In the first war she seized Sicily, in the second, Spain, and in the last she completely destroyed the Carthaginian state. In the second of these wars Carthage had the great Hannibal as leader, one of the greatest of military geniuses of all time. In the century before the birth of Christ Rome extended her empire greatly in the east and in the west Julius Caesar added territory. Julius Caesar expanded conquests. Then came the assassination of Caesar in a conspiracy and the struggle for control of the state between Antony and Octavius. The rise of the absolute monarchy under the guise of a republic came when Octavius as Augustus was given supreme power for life. In the reign of Trajan the Roman empire reached its widest boundaries and his successor, Hadrian, relinquished Trajan's conquests to consolidate the empire which he feared had expanded too greatly. In the days of Commodus decline began and it was quite steady until Rome actually became a province of the Byzantine Empire, in 476 A.D. The old Roman empire was never democratic in the modern sense.

The Empire that Italy set up in North Africa was a mushroom growth and had not been consolidated for Italy had sowed for herself nothing but the seeds of trouble with the conquest of Ethiopia. Events of the years of occupation strengthened the resolve of the Ethiopians and their dethroned Emperor until the time came to strike with British aid against the Italians. The progress of the recovery of Haile Selassie's empire through the advance of British, Empire and native troops has been steady. Recently the Emperor returned to his capital and throne.

The surrender of the Duke of Aosta and the Italan forces will release, it is said, British and Empire forces for service in the northern part of Africa.

Italy has shown herself entirely lacking in the genius for colonization, one of the qualities for which the British people have shown themselves to be paramount. No other race has shown itself to possess this gift in the highest degree as the British.

SNUBBING THE NAZIS

Hamilton Spectator tells of an instance which shows how the Norwegians take especial delight in making the Germans wince. "A German theatrical troupe recently played at Trondheim and hundreds of tickets were eagerly purchased, but when the performance was given there was an audience of only about twenty persons. This was a subtle snub and Norwegian patriots derived pleasure from inflicting it upon their oppressors."

Justice consists in doing no injury to men; decency in giving them no offence.—Cicero.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

ALL OR NOTHING

"I am the spirit of Canadian conscience. "Old Face-the-Facts," they call me, speaking to each one of you who has a financial stake in the Dominion of Canada.

I have known you more intimately than any living being. Wherever you have gone, I have gone. Nothing that you have done has escaped my attention. I have followed your every thought and your every action just as closely as I once followed the curious-eyed explorer as he tramped through the wilderness of Canada years ago. I have travelled with you in your heated trains and planes and motor cars as I travelled with your forefathers on a roughly-hewn wagon drawn along rutted trails by oxen.

I trudged north with the United Empire Loyalists, with those men and women who gave up new homes for rough shacks and unending toil in order that they might stay under the flag of their forefathers. I was with bearded statesmen who planned Confederation and staked the course of freedom for generations of Canadians to come. I went out West with adventurous, courageous pioneers who braved scorching heat and intense cold to break the rolling prairies into wheat fields. I accompanied the trapper and the prospector into the North. I flew in flimsy crates with the first airmen over northern Alberta.

As Canadians toiled and sweated to build up a national prosperity, I tagged along. Always I have been close to those in every generation of Canadians who have sought to temper prosperity with an economic justice for all the citizens of the country.

I know you as I knew your father, your grandfather and those before him. I know exactly what price you have paid for a community which neither stifles individualism nor tramps on the masses. I know this community of Canada to be outstanding in the whole world, as a happy home for a free man.

I know something else. I know that you know that the very existence of this community is threatened. I know that a horde of millions, like a great pack of hungry wolves, would swarm over this country—if they could. I know that they will, if Canadians hold back even partially in the great common effort to set up a barrier against the pack.

I know—and you know—that Canadians are engaged in a struggle of life or death that allows no lukewarm, half-way measures. And death would not be for the youngsters in uniform alone, but for Canadian business, the Canadian home, Canadian freedom, Canadian happiness.

Don't stick your head in the sand. Get into the thick of the fight. Turn over your dollars to your country in your own selfish interest. Turn them over for the sake of your family, your friends, for the protection of everything that has contributed to your present freedom. Make your subscription to the War Loan so big that the signing of your cheque constitutes a hardship. Canada was built on hardships and it cannot be kept away from the ravaging hands of dictators by her present protectors without hardships.

Make sure that you are doing everything you can to build and maintain the indomitable fighting machine which democracy must have to survive.

The challenge to Canadians to-day is emphatic. Each member of the community must be prepared to lend all he can, lest the pack gets through and shall leave him with nothing.

You can't fool me. I am your conscience, the conscience of every one of your fellow citizens. You fully understand this situation in 1941, and understanding it, you are not going to try to fool yourself and hold back dollars which much be forthcoming if your community is to survive."

—War Finance Committee.

When a bomb blew an automobile off a London street the blast landed the car in the upstairs bedroom of the house in front of which it was parked. Bombings are responsibile for many freak situations, but how the car managed to get through the comparatively small aperture in the wall without much damage to itself was regarded as remarkable.

The British Empire covers nearly one-fourth of the total land surface of the earth.

SAD EXAMPLE

The youngster knew him; knew his fame,
Knew his triumph, knew his name,
Touched his hat and asked his aid.
Harsh the answer that he made,
And with arrogance and pride
Roughly thrust the boy aside.

Sorry that a boy should see
Fame ungracious so to be!
Sorry that a boy should find
Greatness being so unkind,
And should learn how commonplace
Greatness can be, face to face!

Sorry that a boy should see
Just how selfish skill can be!
Sorry that a boy should find
Splendor's coat so poorly lined,
And should leave him to relate
Just how small can be the great!

Wish he'd let the youngster see
Just how generous fame can be,
And what understanding lies
Back of being worldly-wise.
No! He gave a boy his first
View of greatness at its worst!

MILITARISTS SAY FEW AXIS TROOPS NOW IN EGYPT

Barbed-Wire Barrier Along Frontier Built by Mussolini is Now Front Line

TOBRUK TOO TOUGH

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

With British Desert Forces in North Africa, May 19 (AP) — A barbed-wire barrier stretched along the Egyptian-Libyan frontier several years ago on Mussolini's order to keep Libyan tribesmen from crossing into Egypt again has become the front line in the desert battle for North Africa.

Few Nazi or Italian soldiers are left on Egyptian soil, British authorities said, and the Axis commanders are concentrating their advance forces around Fort Capuzzo, which has changed hands six times since the war began.

The little Egyptian village of Salum, just east of the frontier, is in No Man's Land—but Hell Fire Pass leading to it and the heights overlooking it are held by British troops

Eighty miles west of the frontier, the British garrison at the partly-encircled Libyan port of Tobruk has taken the initiative with repeated sorties against the Axis flank

After several fruitless efforts to recapture Tobruk, the Axis forces apparently have abandoned the idea, at least for the present, and have moved most of their mechanized equipment outside the port of Capuzzo.

Friday was the biggest day so far for the fliers on this assignment. They reported destroying 200 vehicles. Saturday they knocked out 80 more, and reported that the Germans no longer are using the coastal road as a main supply route but are keeping to desert trails 30 miles inland.

The R.A.F. also is keeping after Axis warplanes and their bases, reporting the destruction of four or five planes on an average day after day

Reports on the whole scale of the R.A.F.'s activties, summed up in Cairo communiques yesterday, listed 22 Axis aircraft destroyed and at least 20 others damaged in Friday's operations over Iraq, Greece, Crete, the Suez Canal and East Africa

These reports said the R.A.F. attacked German bases at Hassani, Argos, Malaoi, and Menidi, Greece; attacked airdromes and downed two Nazi Messerschmitts near Baghdad and Mosul, Iraq, shot down eight Nazi planes attacking Crete and three more raiding the Suez area; and struck Axis bases and supply routes across Libya from the frontier to Bengasi.

Although the Germans are reported to have a great many planes in Libya, they have not been especially active against the British forces here. This, British sources believe, is due mainly to a shortage of gasoline supplies.

Because of the hazards of bringing supplies by sea convoys and desert transport columns, the Nazis appear to be relying more and more on big transport planes to carry fuel for the fighters and bombers. The method is costly because each trip to and from their destination the huge transports use up almost half as much fuel as they deliver.

R.A.F. circles here said that if the Nazis attempt to use Iraq more extensively they will run into much the same thing, for while Iraq is rich in petroleum it has no big stores of refined oil, ready for use, and few remaining facilities.

British sources said that United States manufactured planes, described as having been extremely slow in showing up for use at the desert front bases, now are coming in a slightly larger trickle. The South African Air Force has taken over one batch of Glenn Martin bombers.

SALVAGE WINCHES FROM SUNKEN TUG

"Florence" Went Down Mile Off Point Traverse in November, 1933

Point Traverse, May 19.—Salvaging operations of winches and machinery from the sunken tug Florence which went down off Timber Island on Nov. 14th, 1933, will be commenced shortly it is understood.

Crew members of the salvage tug Salvage Prince under command of Captain Grant Pyke, Kingston, located the tug which lies in about fifty feet of water.

In 1934 the spar from the 100 ft. vessel was removed, and October 1935 salvaging operations were carried out to remove deck machinery, etc., but unfavorable weather halted operations for the time being.

The Florence of Dominion Tankers Ltd., under command of Capt. Charles Willard, Kingston, and five crew members, was on her way to Toronto for the winter, when she suddenly sprang a leak and went down about one mile off here.

"Crash" Boat Arrives

The 35 ft. cabined cruiser Glen Fruin, No. 197, Royal Canadian Air Force, has arrived here for patrol duty, and will be stationed here for the duration of the season. She is manned by four members of the R.A.F.

Fish Catches Light

Catches of both lake trout and whitefish are very light at the present, and only fair prices for these fish make it possible for fishermen to operate. Lifts of deep water ciscoes are fair.

All fish being taken in at the Main Duck fishing colony will be transported to Bath, where Mr. R. E. Sexsmith, local buyer, has contracted the total catch of the season.

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

More About Hess

The Hess affair has disappeared from the front pages of the newspapers, but not yet from this column. For it is not unimportant, but enlightening. On re-reading my Friday's column, I wish I had stopped before the last paragraph. I should have stuck to asking myself clear and answerable questions and refrain from minor and inadequately considered conclusions.

On September 3, 1939, the day of the declaration of war, I said in a broadcast: "No human mind can foresee the course of the next months. Forces have been started that will take on a life of their own and assume unpredictable shapes."

In April of last year, in an article on Foreign Affairs, I wrote: "For a long time the western world has made the mistake of believing there was no possible synthesis between the Russian and German revolutions. The possibility of synthesis was implicit from the beginning."

This synthesis I believe is now at hand. The Nazi war and revolution have been dynamism, not ideology. The forces let loose have taken on a life of their own, impelled not by the desire to be consistent with uttered principles, but to be successful in conquest.

Both the Nazi and Communist revolutions are being progressively liquidated. The day that Hitler sits down with Stalin will see the merger of both into the new revolution that has been gathering force in the last months out of events and not out of ideologies.

This, I think, is the true explanation of Hess' flight to Britain. Hess is really a Nazi, who took Nazi principles seriously. And the Nazi revolution is over. It is interned in England.

This, that I began to see in writing the last column, led me, however, to a probably false bit of speculation concerning the effect of this on Hitler's position and the internal situation in Germany.

I made the probable error, unsupported by any evidence, of presuming that Hitler's position is tied up with Nazi ideology. Actually there is no evidence to indicate that Hitler has any ideology. He rides whatever waves impel him towards the goal of world-wide power, and throws principles overboard whenever events overtake them.

It is entirely possible that some time or other he will prove useless, or even an impediment to the forces really in the saddle. If so he will disappear. But the forces will not thereby disappear. And he is much more likely to put himself at the head of them, again, as he has done before.

What was Nazism? It was the original "unchangeable" twenty-five points of the Nazi credo plus Mein Kampf. It was the folk-state; intense racial nationalism; Nordic supremacy; economic populism; anti-monopolism; anti-communism and the war against Versailles.

Not a trace remains of these dogmas except anti-Semitism, which is merely a useful brute-cry for spreading unrest among superstitious masses. Anti-Semitism as racialism is completely discarded. Actually, the new revolution is engineering an uprising of the Arab world, racially a much purer Semitic world than that of the westernized Jews whose Semitism has been diluted for generations. Anti-Semitism will be used in Arabia as a rallying cry against the Jews, not as Semites, but as outposts of Britain in Palestine.

What remains of Communism, of Leninism, of the society of, by and for the masses, of the dictatorship of the proletariat?

Nothing remains of the original idea except the concept of international world - wide revolution. This has been handed on to Germany, which is liquidating nationalism in Europe and has become the war-making spearhead of the world revolution, and not a revolution on behalf of the "working masses."

What is the new revolution—the synthesis emerging out of the marriage of the pair whose first encounter was the glare of hate?

It is a union of huge, industrial state-capitalistic management with vast armed forces, despotically run by an "elite" of industrialists, technicians and officers. It is the revolution of efficiency and power for the sake of efficiency and power, in disregard of nationality, sentiment, common sense, reason, or the longings and happiness of the people. It is the advanced paranoia of the machine age. I say "paranoia," for the paranoiac is he who mobilizes the most exquisite logic and the most formidable unity and efficiency in support of a perfectly insane idea. It is perfectly insane, because it conceives that men exist for efficiency and not efficiency for men. The final human product does not concern it. It is the revolution for slavery.

Incidentally, it is the Lindbergh revolution and it is being systematically organized in the United States.

It is with this revolution that the aged Marshal Petain has allied his Catholic-conservative France, without, I am sure, the remotest idea of what he is doing. It is with this revolution that Franco is asked to ally himself, in the most supreme of ironies.

Hess is apparently well aware of what is happening, and entertained the hope that it might be stopped by a return to original Nazism with the aid of the British and a quick peace. But it certainly could not be stopped by a return to Mr. Hess' Nazism, which has turned out to be one of the shortest-lived ideas in history. Nor can it be stopped by arms alone.

It can only be stopped, or rather changed, by its conflict with other ideas, and by the emergence of still another synthesis, still another revolution—the revolution of civilization and humanity, based on real human desires, real human needs, and real human freedom, all finding new expression in a complete human world—material, mental and spiritual.

TONNAGE OF SHIPS

Many people are confused by the different meanings of the word tonnage as used in connection with ships.

Tonnage may refer to either the capacity or the weight of a vessel.

The term tonnage itself is derived from "tun," a large cask or barrel in which wine, ale and other liquids were formerly transported.

Back in the 15th and 16th centuries "tunnage" or "tonnage" was the number of "tuns" or casks of wine a merchant ship could carry.

Later tonnage was estimated by measurements which gave approximately the actual cubit content of the vessel.

As now applied to British and American merchant ships tonnage is classified under "space" or "statutory" tons or "weight" tons.

A space of statutory ton is 100 cubic feet of space.

Gross tonnage, used in reference to the measurement of ships sunk in the war, is the capacity of the spaces within the frames or ceiling of the hull and the capacity of the closed-in spaces above the deck available for cargo, stores, passengers, crew and so forth.

Net or registered tonnage is what remains after the spaces occupied by the propelling machinery, fuel supply, crew quarters, master's cabin and navigation spaces have been deducted from the gross tonnage.

This latter is the usual basis for tonnage taxes and port charges on merchant ships.

The dead-weight tonnage of a vessel, as applied to merchant ships, is the weight in avoirdupois tons of 2,240 pounds required to depress it from the light water line, when only machinery and equipment are on board, to the load line.

It is, therefore the weight in tons of the cargo, fuel, stores, water, crew and so on, which the vessel is designed to carry with safety.

For instance when we say that the new battleship U.S.S. North Carolina has a tonnage of 35,000 we mean that the vessel displaces 35,000 long tons of water, a long ton being 2,240 pounds.

British War Victims To Be Assisted By Kiwanis Tag Day

Members of the Belleville Kiwanis Club are enthusiastically behind the Tag Day on May 24th., when residents of the City and district will be asked to contribute to the British War Victims' Fund, sponsored by the Toronto Telegram. The Chairman of Ways and Means, Jack McVeigh, with his energetic committee agreed on this project believing that the club as a body should assist the bombed victims of Britain seeing that we in this fine Dominion did not have to face such hardships, these hardships being borne most cheerfully by the British people. The chairman of Publicity, Al Reynolds and his committee have worked hard to get the facts before the public and everything is set for the Tag Day.

The Kiwanis Queens have also decided to help the men in their project and will be out in full force to do the tagging. Members of the Club will be stationed with the ladies at the various tagging stations throughout the city, dressed in their berets and wearing identifying badges. These men are willing to give time from their business on a Saturday to help this worthy cause and will realize nothing from the task but a job "well done". The Kiwanis Club will not receive one cent from this project and all the monies received will be turned over to The Telegram Fund. The club is bearing the expenses in connection with raising the money and it is to be hoped a large sum will be realized.

The Kiwanis Club is very much interested in a number of projects chiefly the V.O.N. because they have the interest of children at heart and this work will enable little children, bombed from their homes by the wicked Hun, a chance to enjoy life far from the bombed areas in quiet England. Don't say no when the tagger approaches you on Saturday.

THE EIGHTH DECENNIAL
Census of Canada
June 2, 1941

THE Census is the stock-taking of the nation — of its men, women, and children; its agriculture, trade, and industry; its housing, and general social condition. By it, all Governments, — Dominion, Provincial and Municipal—are enabled to work more effectively and economically in the interest of every resident of the Dominion.

IN these days of increasing Government responsibilities, no Government can give the best service unless it has detailed and accurate knowledge of the people and their varying circumstances. That is why we request the co-operation of all Canadian citizens in the taking of the Census. When the Government's Enumerator calls at your door, receive him courteously and give him all the information for which he asks.

Remember that he is in your service. Accuracy and despatch in your replies will promote good administration in your country, now under stress of war and facing crucial post-war reconstruction.

ALL INFORMATION SUPPLIED HELD STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL

You can place absolute trust in the official Enumerator, who is sworn to secrecy. All the information which you provide will be held in strictest confidence both by him and the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, and can never be used against you by any tax-collecting, military, or other agency, or in any court of law.

It is compulsory by law to answer the questions, but you will be assisting your Government in these difficult times by giving the information readily and accurately in the spirit of good citizenship.

Issued by authority of The Honourable JAMES A. MacKINNON, M.P., Minister.

Parlor Meeting Of W. C. T. U. Most Inspiring

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union held this meeting at the home of Mrs. (Dr.) Baker, Queen Street, on Thursday, May 15 with the County President, Mrs. (Rev.) Farnsworth in the chair.

Friends and neighbors contributed generously of flowers and refreshments and offering and these with a very impressive duet by Miss Forman and Mrs. Doolittle, a stirring address delivered by Rev. Mr. Dilts a fair attendance and the gracious welcome of the hostess all contributed to making the meeting both interesting and profitable.

The cash receipts will help in the purchase of a mobile canteen to supply as many as possible of the troops with suitable food and drink.

Some of the many facts the speaker sought to impress were:

1.—There never was more need for a temperance organization.

2.— That while temperance workers were by the majority, considered a despised minority that some day, some glad day, that majority would meet with defeat. All great reforms have started with a minority.

Today we live in a generation that worships majorities.

3.—A righteous home is surely a great blessing but even its influence can be offset by environment and loss of ideals. This he illustrated by referring to a friend reared as he was but later on yielded to the temptation to indulge in wines and strong drink.

4.—The large sum of $200,000,000 besides illegal sales was spent in Canada last year on liquor. This far exceeded the amount spent on bread or clothing or butter and cheese. Only meat exceeded this.

5.—Liquor is the poorest national investment. It curtails purchasing power and the power to give. Our best institutions are handicapped. It decreases efficiency and increases crimes and accidents.

6.—Those who frequent the beverage rooms and liquor stores are not all from the lower strata of society, by any means.

7.—In almost every case the first drink taken by a man or woman, boy or girl, (both sexes are in it now), has been offered them and rather than be different and show courage they start on the downward course.

8.—The social glass and the mixing of drinks is far too common in what otherwise would be respectable homes.

9.—In the last war Our King after having learned that the choice of victory or defeat lay between the free use of liquor or prohibition declared for the latter and that he would lead in the temperance issue. The speaker urged that we pray that along with the excellent virtues possessed by our present beloved king and queen that they had a great movement whereby alcoholic products will not be allowed as beverages among our soldiers, many of whom never indulged before. One chap of seventeen remarked that they nearly all drink. How can they be efficient soldiers?

10.—The subtle ways of advertising liquor of various brands, it being unlawful here, magazines are imported. The pictures show most attractive environment, handsome men and women, very happy always as they are represented recommending the use of those drinks and cigarettes. One may notice that a picture of a woman actually smoking is never shown.

We are advised not to have such coming in our home. Illustrations from "Life" were shown and disapproved of. Many other magazines carry the same, but a few are clean and healthy.

In concluding his remarks, Mr. Dilts congratulated the ladies for carrying on a W.C.T.U. and urged them to voice their convictions and not to be too critical of governments as they are the people we elect.

Only as we live in communion with and under the guidance of the Holy Spirit can we hope to rid this world of these social and national evils and bring about the kingdom of love and peace as is found in our great example even Jesus Christ.

Mrs. Farnsworth led in earnest prayer for our homes and nation. "God Save the King".

For Tuesday, May 20

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

SPLENDID opportunities for advancing upon ambitious objectives should be indicated by this days astral influences. It may be a time for seeking power, growth, expansion of interests, credit and finances with the assurance of surprising support from those in prestige and authority. There may be various angles of the unexpected in this direction, with new projects under excellent prospect of cooperation and approbation. But be wary as to schemes, deception and intrigues of a dubious nature. Work for public or community advantage. Unlooked-for changes are imminent. Exercise prudence and thrift with funds.

Those whose birthday it is may be confronted by a year of exceptional opportunities for reaching high goals of power ambition and perhaps public or social recognition or preferment. Such may involve unforeseen changes, but in all ventures beware of fraud, subtlety, intrigues and other glamorous or seductive schemes or entanglements. Also be conservative with investments; avoid a lavish use of funds either in business or personal indulgences.

A child born on this day should hae much originality, independence and broad ambitions, with a generout, kindly and cordial nature, perhaps easily duped or imposed upon.

Operated by a one-fourth horsepower air compressor, a sand blasting pistol small enough to be held with a container for sand in one hand has been invented for etching letters and small designs on numerous materials.

Three Airmen Turn Amphibian Plane Into Sailboat When Forced Down

London, May 19.— (CP)—Three young airmen made a forced landing in their amphibian plane in the Atlantic 100 miles off the coast of Africa. . . They turned their machine into a sailboat using parachutes for sails . . . .They paddled more than twenty-four hours in their rubber dinghy . . . Finally they were picked up by a fishing boat.

Here is their story:

The cruiser Birmingham was off the African coast when her walrus amphibian aircraft was catapulted off for a dawn patrol. Aboard it were a pilot, observer and air gunner.

The observer described what happened. After completing their patrol, they were unable to find the Birmingham and wireless signals were not acknowledged.

"We were then some hundreds of miles from land and decided to get as close as possible before our petrol ran out," he said. "We made a good landing about 100 miles from the coast.

"All we knew was that Africa was somewhere to the east. There seemed nothing we could do about getting there.

"Later in the day we had a brainwave. We got out our parachutes and rigged them as sails We took it in turn to keep watch with field glasses. The pilot was incapacitated by seasickness. We had only seven cigarettes among the three of us."

Next day they sighted land, but the wind changed and started driving them offshore.

"We downed sail and tried towing a bucket as a drogue (a buoy at the end of a harpoon line) but could not check our way. In the end we decided to take to the rubber dinghy.

"We loaded it with distress flares, emergency flying rations, three pints of water, an axe, and floor boards from the plane as paddles. Then we opened the camera hatch of the walrus to make it sink.

"All day and night we paddled on, steering by compass. During the night we became very sleepy. First I feel asleep and lost my paddle, then Port Side fell asleep. Bows woke up and announced we were 180 degrees off our course. That happened again and again".

Next morning, he continued, they saw land seven miles away, but the dinghy began to lose buoyancy and "after four or five hours we were up to our knees in water".

Suddeunly we sighted something which looked like a destroyer so we fired distress signals. It sheered away and we realized it was really a native fishing boat. Then another fishing boat came from the shore and picked us up".

The Negroes aboard said they were British. One, Richard Graham, promised to take the airmen to Freetown.

First they gave us water to wash the salt off our bodies. Then they cooked fish on a brazier in the boat and we ate that with rice. Then Richard Graham went ashore and got provisions for the voyage to Freetown".

Asked what they wanted as a reward, the leader said he wished to have a certificate to show he had helped in the war.

"We wrote out a certificate, and also gave them canvas for new sails, rope and £20, a small fortune for them", said the observer.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—lie awake and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleeplessness, headache, backache often follow. If you don't sleep well, try Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy. 103

35,000 TROOPS IN MANOEUVRES

Leave California to Take Part in War Games Early in June

By JACK B. BEARDWOOD
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Fort Lewis, Wash., May 19 (AP)—The United States army's biggest manoeuvres since First World War days got underway today. The first of more than 35,000 troops left here for California and war games next month that will be the prelude to larger military movements throughout the summer.

Truck loaded with fighting men and towing field artillery weapons and anti-tank guns began moving out of this Pacific northwest major military post at dawn for King City, Calif., midway between San Francisco and Los Angeles on the fringe of the Hunter Liggett military reservation.

It was the start of the second biggest military migration in American history and the largest the far west has ever seen. It involves the 3rd and 41st divisions and special troops of the 9th army corps area.

Guided by low flying observation planes, whose pilots reported by radio on traffic conditions ahead, the trucks travelled 60 yards apart to allow civilian traffic to make its way more easily past the olive-green vehicles.

The California games will also involve the 7th division, based at Fort Ord, Calif., and special units of the fourth army commanded by Lieut. General John L. DeWitt. Throughout June approximately 65,000 men will split into two armies and fight mock wars, complete in virtually every detail.

Trenton and District

Trenton, May 19—In the interests of the campaign for the war loan asked by the Canadian Government of the people of Canada, the huge four-motored bombing plane bearing the symbolic torch of Canada to Premier Churchill will visit Trenton on June 9.

The bomber carrying the torch will leave Victoria, B.C., May 24, and visit all important centres in its flight across the Dominion.

The torch will be taken from the Trenton Airport to Belleville Fair Grounds where the ceremony will be held. Thousands of people from Trenton and district are expected to be in attendance and will make the pledge on the occasion of a Torch Day program, which is planned in connection with the forthcoming victory Loan.

Trenton Port to be Used

The Royal Canadian Air Force station at Trenton will be one of the Air Stations to be photographed according to Hal Wallis, executive producer, who recently completed arrangements with the Department of National Defence.

The pictures will be used in the film "Shadow of Their Wings" which is based on the Royal Canadian Air Force. The film will cost $2,000,000.

Toronto, Ottawa and Trenton will be the scenes of all the shooting in the Dominion. The picture from all reports will be one of the biggest ever produced by the studio.

Squadron-Leader Owen Cathcart-Jones of the R.C.A.F. has been designated as officer in charge during the filming of the picture. He will work with Wallis and Associate Producer Robert Lord and will collaborate on the script with Arthur Horman. The aviator arrived in Hollywood two weeks ago from Ottawa.

Although George Brent and Dennis Morgan have been mentioned for the leading parts, efforts are being made to land Gary Cooper in the top slot.

Between 25 and 30 members of the cast besides a squad of technical advisers and other workers, will be transported to Ontario for the initial shooting. At least six weeks of filming are slated in the Dominion according to Wallis.

Squadron-Leader Cathcart-Jones, who has recently written his "Aviation Memoirs", is holder of a number of air records, including a 72-minute flight from London to Paris and a 26,000 mile round trip between London and Melbourne.

Lady Kittermaster, Beaconsfield, England, was a guest at Firhurst Manor, over the week-end.

MAJ. J. B. GLUBB, 'KING OF DESERT' NOW IN HOSPITAL

Dispatch From Amman Says British Officer Wounded in Severe Fighting

2 BRITONS KILLED

Beirut, Lebanon, May 19 (AP—Iraq rebel headquarters claimed in a communique received today from Baghdad that Maj. J. B. Glubb, known in the Arab world as Abu Heneik, was killed in action recently in an engagement with Iraq constabulary.

A dispatch from Amman, Trans-Jordan, to the French information office at Beirut reported, however, that Glubb is in a hospital at Amman for treatment of two bullet wounds suffered in an engagement with Iraq forces under Fauzi Kawaji. The dispatch said a Major Ludger and another Briton were killed in the same engagement and buried at Amman.

The growing battle for control of Iraq's oil apparently has cost Britain an extraordinary fighter wise in the way of the desert.

Musty London air office records list him colorlessly as Major John Bagot Glubb, 44. To the Bedouin warriors in the Arab legion's desert patrol he is "king of the desert."

Brought Peace Among Bedouins

Maj. Glubb, who brought peace among the nomadic Beoduins in Trans-Jordan and Iraq after more than two decades among them, is commander of the patrol of hand-picked Arabs, each of whom has pledged his life to him.

The patrol, organized in 1930, consists almost entirely of Bedouins and, like the French Foreign Legion it asked no questions.

Cut-throats, bandits, smugglers and thieves have found refuge in it. But the price is unswerving loyalty.

As part of the Arab legion with headquarters at Amman, the patrol has manifold duties, but its chief ones now are to keep a sharp desert intelligence service and guard the 1,000 miles of iron tubing which is the pipeline from the oil fields of Kirkuk to Britain's refineries on the Mediterranean shore.

Dodgers Blow Game to Chicago While Cards Beat Phillies To Draw Within One Game of Lead

Giants Run Winning Streak to Four Games by Defeating Pirates

DETROIT NOW THIRD

By BILL BONI

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Leo Durocher and his Brooklyn Dodgers are discovering this isn't going to be the kind of National League race where you can take anything for granted.

The Brooks, who never do things in anything less than bunches, looked fine while reeling off that winning streak of seven straight which hoisted them into first place. Then came an 11-inning defeat in Pittsburgh, and Durocher decided it was a good time to break up his combination.

In Chicago yesterday he stuck Pete Reiser back in the lineup in place of Jimmy Wasdell, who had been leading the club with a .370 average; benched Dixie Walker in favor of right-handed hitting Joe Vosmik, and—the Dodgers blew a 7-4 decision to the Cubs, with St. Louis Cardinals meanwhile shading the Phillies 6-5, that left Brooklyn only a game in front of the Redbirds.

Whitlow Wyatt, who had won seven straight was knocked out in the seventh.

Jimmy Brown Big Hitter

For the Cards Jimmy Brown was the big hitter with three singles and a double off the Phils' Lefty Lee Grissom. But it was Johnny Mize's single with the bases loaded in the ninth that scored the winning run.

Back in third place New York Giants ran their winning streak to four straight by beating Pittsburgh Pirates, 5-4.

Meanwhile Paul Derringer, getting his third victory of the year, hauled Cincinnati Reds out of their longest losing streak in more than 300 games. Two handy singles by Rookie Chuck Aleno dove-tailed with Derringer's seven-hit, nine-strikeout pitching for a 4-3 defeat of Boston Braves after six losses.

Most of the day's heavy hitting, and all of the day's homers, occurred in the American League. The lowly Philadelphia Athletics set the keynote by clubbing rookie Preacher Dorsett and two Cleveland relief pitchers for 16 hits and a 10-3 verdict. That ended the tribe's victory string at five straight.

Yanks Finally Win

The second-place Chicago White Sox and New York Yankees also got 16 safeties apiece. The Sox, with Taft Wright setting the pace, got four runs in the first and five in the last three innings to rout Washington Senators, 10-5. All of the Yankees hit safely, Joe Gordon clouting a three-run homer, to back up Lefty Gomez's six-hit pitching for a 12-2 thumping of St. Louis Browns. Even Gomez got two hits.

Detroit Tigers, who seem to be recovering from Hank Greenberg's departure, won their fourth in a row, though they had to go 11 innings to do it. Two unearned runs were the margin of a 6-5 triumph over Boston Red Sox.

With Johnny Rigney pitching a five-hitter, Chicago White Sox triumped 3-2 over the Yankees Saturday. In other American League games, Washington's Senators found the Browns easy pickings, 12-7, Cleveland beat Boston 12-9 and Detroit beat Philadelphia 8-5. In the National League, New York Giants shut out Chicago 9-0, Boston beat the Cardinals 6-3 and the Phillies edged out Cincinnati 2-1. Brooklyn-Pittsburgh were rained out.

TOMMY HOLMES

To crash into the New York Yankee lineup one has to be good. Thomas Francis Holmes, outfielder, expects to crack the Yankee lineup. He was one of the top players in the International League.

Holmes, purchased from Newark, led the league with 126 runs and 211 hits in 1940.

A lefthander, he batted .317 in 162 games with the Bears. Only 23 years old, Holmes began his career as a high school player in Brooklyn. He then played semi-pro baseball and then moved in to Norfolk. He has a good throwing arm.

Budpath roaring past the judges' stand to take the King's guineas with Gidding's Undisturbed, the favorite, a length or two back.

BUDPATH EASILY WINS PLATE FOR HARRY C. HATCH

Watson Takes Horse First Out of the Stalls and Never Headed

Toronto, May 19—(CP)—Horsemen and race followers in Ontario today were beginning to forget about the King's Plate in concentrating upon the seasonal task of determining an Ontario three-year-old champion. The first strong piece of evidence to work on was Budpath's stirring victory before 25,000 people in the 82nd running of the Plate Saturday at Woodbine Park on the Ontario racing season's opening day.

The H. C. Hatch-owned colt, by Buddy Bauer out of Luress, won $8,000 added, nine furlings event drawing away after shaking off Harry Giddins' Undisturbed in a tense riding battle around the last two turns.

Budpath's time was not good, at 1:56 4-5, but it was good enough to beat Undisturbed by two and one-half lengths.

J. Heffering's Attrisius was third, another three and one-half lengths back and Taffrail, from the Waterloo stable of J. Prowde Seagram, was fourth by half a length.

Budpath was the horse to beat from the beginning, when he bounded out of the outside slot on the Puett starting gate and cut across the track to the rail. As the field went by the grandstand the first time, Budpath was in front, running easily, with G. M. Hendrie's Passa Grille second and Undisturbed third.

In the backstretch, Undisturbed started his bid, overhauling Passa Grille easily. Budpath had a one-length lead on Undisturbed at that point, then Charlie Smith gave the big Giddings gelding the whip. He responded, going into the second-last turn, and caught Budpath for an instant. Budpath raced head-and-head with Undisturbed for a few strides, then pulled ahead under slight urging by the veteran rider, Bobby Watson, and drew away to win handily.

The race, open only to Ontario-born three-year-olds which previously had not won a three-year-old event, was worth $6,670 and the King's 50 guineas to the winner and $500 to Hatch as breeder of the winner. Giddings received $1,200 for Undisturbed's second place; third was worth $700 and fourth $100.

Seven-Point Lead Gained By St. Kitts For Basketball Title

Fredericton, May 19 (CP) — A seven-point lead gained on a strange floor left the United Church team from St. Catharines, Ont., confident today of winning the Canadian Junior Basketball championship.

St. Catharines trimmed Fredericton Hi-Y 26-19 Saturday night. The second and deciding contest of the two-game total-point series will be played tonight.

After matching the speed and skill of the Ontario-Quebec champions until near the end of the opening game, Fredericton held hope of making up the seven-point deficit.

The lead alternated several times and the outcome was in doubt until the visitors staged a scoring drive in the last five minutes of play.

With the count tied 13-13 Harding Cambray put St. Catharines into the lead 15-13, as the first half ended. At one time in the second half Fredericton led 19-17 but their scoring ended at this stage and the Ontario players took command long enough to put the game away.

Both teams were off in shooting. Unfamiliarity with the large floor in the Lady Beaverbrook gymnasium at University of New Brunswick handicapped the visitors. Play roughened toward the end of the first half and 10 fouls were called during the session.

High scoring honors went to Eddie Nickowsky, Ontario forward, who gathered nine points. He was closely followed by Ken Davis, Fredericton centre, with eight.

The winner, Harry Hatch's Budpath, in the enclosure after finishing the race.

NEWARK BEARS SETTING PACE IN INT. LEAGUE

Toronto Maple Leafs Beaten Twice by Buffalo Bisons

ROYALS LOSE TWO

Youth, as usual, is clamoring to be serve in the International League, what with the young Newark Bears setting the pace and the rookie-laden Buffalo squad threatening Montreal's hold on second place. But there's always room for a word or two about the circuit's seemingly-ageless old-timer, William Milton Harris of Jersey City Giants.

Harris, who will be 41 next month, is serving his 21st season in organized baseball. To win his 99th International League victory, Harris had to outpitch Newark's young Hank Borowy for 12 long innings yesterday to win 4-3. He was touched for 11 hits, but didn't walk a man and fanned seven.

The second game went to Newark 9-4 after the Jerseys had belted Russ Christopher out and scored all their runs in the first inning.

Another veteran though somewhat younger than Harris, paced Buffalo to a twin triumph over Toronto Leafs 11-3 and 5-4 that left the Bisons only a half game behind Montreal. The second-place Royals lost a pair to Rochester, 8-7 and 2-1. This twin triumph kept the Red Wings in the first division, a game and a half up on Syracuse Chiefs who trimmed Baltimore twice 5-2, and 7-6.

Smacked Two Homers

Thirty-three-year-old Jim Levey, who was up with St. Louis Browns ten years ago smacked two homers in Buffalo's first triumph and another in the second. Another Bison oldster Ollie Carnegie, and young Dixie Parsons also hit first-game homers to jack up Hal White's three-hit pitching while Dutch Meyer won the second clash with a four-bagger with one aboard in the fifth.

George Fallon paced Rochester to its two triumphs. He scored the winning run in the eighth inning of the opener and then singled to start the winning rally in the second game.

Syracuse came from behind twice to beat Baltimore with the aid of a four-hit hurling job by Tom Sunkel in the opener. The Orioles hammered out a five-run second inning against Red Kleinhans in the second game but couldn't hold their lead as Lin Storti and Goody Rosen both hit two-run homers. Rosen's was his second of the day.

GOSSIP NEWS COMMENT

Veteran lovers of aquatics, more especially the thrills of the old-fashioned sailing races, still gather around the Wharf Street Debating Club and talk of the days when an America's Cup challenger was built right here in the Belleville harbor reaches. In the latter part of the 19th century the craft Atlanta was built in Belleville and later raced for the America's Cup, recognized as the richest prize for sailing craft. Sailing flourished in Belleville early in the present century, when sailing craft of various styles and classes came to Belleville and the Bay of Quinte from all parts of Lake Ontario and the upper St. Lawrence River valley district. Three-day sailing meets were not uncommon and events provided for every class of craft to sail before the breeze. In the reckless 30's the Lake Yacht Racing Association held sailing races in Muscote Bay, but of a more recent date sailing has fallen upon lean days, despite the fact we see a goodly number of sailing craft anchored locally even today.

A close scrutiny of the various types of sailing craft now anchored in the harbor and along the reaches of the Bay of Quinte would indicate that more than a passing interest is still taken in this ancient and honourable sport. Unfortunately, however, there seems to be a lack of leadership or influence to stimulate enough interest to provide an occasional sailing contest. The Belleville Yacht Club endeavoured to carry out a program of sailing races on the bay, but confined their efforts to the punt class, thus discouraging the larger craft from entering common competition. Harry Whalen, a veteran sailor before the mast, thinks sailing races could be revived by setting up handicaps for smaller types of craft and include all sizes, makes and designs of sailing boats. Harry contends that the more boats in the races, it would naturally follow there would be more interested spectators, which is good logic. Such a program could include the larger sloops, dinghys, punts and all other sailing vessels.

For veteran yachtsmen it should be simple enough to scale out a system of handicapping, whereby every sailing craft owned in Belleville could be included in a handicap race, staged every other Sunday afternoon off Victoria Park. Perhaps the best system would be to permit the handicapped boats to get under canvas, according to their time of handicap, thus the finish of the race would be more thrilling with the contesting crews endeavouring to out-manoeuvre their opponents on the last leg of the course directly before the eyes of the spectators. No doubt if such sailing craft owners as El Wickerson, Dr. Locke, Cy Bassingthwaighte, Harold Seldon, Frank Green, Maurice Callaghan, Harry Whalen and a few more of the interested sailors would convene, something more concrete than what we could suggest would result and a summer's fun and sport entertainment result. How about it fellows?

Softball made its earliest appearance in local history last week when Men's City loop pried off the lid and surprises galore. Red Townsend's Esquire Juniors played a sterling brand of ball in the initial game of the season to beat the Reliance Aircraft 7 to 1, then Gerald Barriage's galaxy of stars were forced to the limit to beat Point Anne 17 to 16, scoring seven runs in their last turn at bat to win under the cover of darkness. Another new entry into the softball realm will make its appearance this evening when the Stephens-Adamson Company nine parade before the fans versus the Reliance. Already the Corby's A.C. have suffered considerable hard luck, even before the season really got under way. Skipper Bawden had counted on Alfie Rowbotham to take care of the Corby's catching department, but Alfie tossed his lot in with the Reliance. Then Art Cole announced his vacating the city, leaving the first base slot of Corby's open at the last minute.

"Doll" Pointer was induced to come out of retirement and was doing a swell chore catching Connie Harris' slants during Corby's opener, when Pointer sustained a broken finger and he was forced to the sidelines with "Handyman Jack" Moon turning the first-basing over to Johnnie Bawden and moving in behind the bat for Corby's. "We can't have very much more bad luck in one season, but I'm keeping my fingers crossed and hoping for the best in the future," lamented Manager Gerald Barriage, as he viewed a riddled team over the week-end.

Other softball to open this week includes the three classes of local Ki-Y softball in the Juvenile, Bantam and Midget series, while the local girls' loop opens at the Armouries on Friday night with Vikings clashing with the Mets and softball is now on its way.

Do you remember when Sunday baseball was inaugurated at Washington 23 years ago today? More than 15,000 persons turned out to see the Senators snatch a 12-inning 1-0 victory over Cleveland, American League entry. Despite the tightness of the game, each team made six errors.

Harry Hatch's Budpath, ridden by Jockey Bobby Watson went out in front of the field in the 82nd running of the King's Plate Saturday in the first furlong and was never headed and once again the Hatch colors took the King's Plate and the covetted honors. The Hatch stables won the Plate with Goldlure in 1937 and Monsweep in 1936. Plus the gift of fifty guineas from His Majesty the King, Budpath won something like $6,670.00 for the owner. Budpath shook off all bids to overcome him, especially the one made by the favourite, Undisturbed, as they moved into the stretch at picturesque Woodbine Park Saturday.

HOW TO RELIEVE PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY AND EASILY

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any druggist and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results, your druggist will gladly return your money.

Outlook Brighter For Britain In The Atlantic

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.)

Washington, May 19 (AP).—The menace to Britain in the Middle East from Vichy's surrender to German pressure for "collaboration" is so grave that it has diverted attention momentarily from developments of the Anglo-German war front in the Atlantic.

Yet there are definitely favorable offsets there for Britain to the ominous developments in Vichy, in Iraq and in Syria. Nor should it be overlooked, in attempting to assess the trends of the war, that British, American and even German judgment agrees that it is in the Atlantic that victory or defeat must come.

He who emerges from this war as master of the Atlantic will shape the destinies of Europe and profoundly influence those of the best of the world.

Emphasized by Hess Flight.

Even the Hess incident emphasizes the German conclusion that it is in the Atlantic, where it began with the sinking of the British liner Athenia off the Hebrides Sept. 3, 1939, that the war must end.

Whatever his Hitler-assigned or self-imposed "peace" mission to Britain (if such it is), Hess, once first among Hitler henchmen and now a voluntary prisoner of war in Britain, reflects that fundamental war conception. Obviously he could not see in Nazi victories on the Continent the means of fulfilment of the Nazi dream. For he made his bid for fame, whatever its true motive, at a time when German prestige, military and diplomatic, was at a new peak.

Balkan war triumphs has swept British arms off the continent except at Gibraltar. Impending subjugation of already conquered France was unquestionably known to him. Yet he fled to Scotland. And almost certainly, if he made his flight in hope of somehow inducing a negotiated peace, it must have been in dread that continued war must end either in ultimate Nazi defeat or in the utter crash of European civilization.

Shipping Loss Down.

Dark as is the outlook eastward for Britain, matters are taking for the moment a brighter turn in the Atlantic. More than two months — two crucial months by Hitler's own word—of the Nazi spring drive to crush Britain have gone by and she still stands. British shipping losses in the Atlantic in recent weeks have gone down rather than up, according to London Admiralty accounting.

There are definite indications that British bombers and naval craft are exacting an increasingly heavy price from their foes for damage wrought by bomb or torpedo at sea. The deadly menace of two Nazi battleships at large in Atlantic sea lanes has been parried, if not conclusively ended.

British air fighters rule the daylight at home; their night-fighting comrades are an increasing protection against after-dark raiders.

And to cap these favorable developments, United States help for Britain is expanding, its full measure or method yet to be revealed. But it already has insured both American sea scouting to help keep the Atlantic open and added merchant shipping space to keep Britain going in the Atlantic through this crucial summer, fall and winter.

AT THE CAPITOL

"SIS HOPKINS"

Nobody knows exactly who "Yehudi" is, but it's pretty certain that Yehudi's best friend is Jerry Colonna, the walrus-moustached comedian whose hilarious wit has long been convulsing listeners to the Bob Hope program. Jerry, or "The Professor" as he is often called, has an important comedy role in "Sis Hopkins," the laugh-packed comedy hit opened Sunday midnight at the Capitol Theatre.

Definitely the gayest, maddest piece of fun to come out of Hollywood this season, "Sis Hopkins" is a lavishly mounted laughter and music show which has had audiences practically hysterical at every performance.

The added attraction "Lucky Devils," featuring Richard Arlen and Andy Devine packs plenty of action and thrills that will keep you on edge throughout. The short subejct "Stranger Than Fiction" completes this swell double feature bill.

Coming tomorrow night only in person Ken Soble in his famous Toronto radio show "Did I Say That?".

Little Benny's Note Book

I was on my way home for supper and I got there the same time pop did, and a delivery boy jumped off a bysickel and handed pop a long white box, saying Flowers for Junkheim, and quick got back on his bike and rode away again, pop saying, Who the dooce is Junkhein and what am I doing with flowers for him?

Maybe it's a mistake, pop, I said. Wich it was on account of some other address being on the tag, and just then ma opened the front door, saying, I thought I heard familiar voices. Why Willyum, you've brought me flowers. Isn't that wonderful, isn't that lovely. I've been on the verge of a blue feeling all afternoon and now this changes everything like a magic wand. Willyum you couldn't of picked a more timely moment you must of been inspired by a kind of a six cents. What kind are they I, cant wait to see them, she said.

You dont have to wait, just rip the box open, they're all yours, pop said.

And he quick pulled the tag off and handed ma the box and she took it right in and opened it, saying, My favorite of favorites, white roses.

Darn if they're not, pop said, and ma said, Well, you've even put a card inside.

I'll take that, pop said, and ma said, Dont be silly, I want to read what it says.

Wich she did out loud, saying, To the fairest flower of all, from her admiring thorn. What a cute thought, ma said, and pop said, I must of been having one of my sentimental days. What do you think you'll do, put them in water? he said.

Well naturally, ma said.

Wich she did, and the doorbell rang while we were eating supper and pop jumped up saying, I'll take that, the exercize will do me good.

And he went to open the door and I heard money drop on the vestibule floor, proving pop was paying the dellervy boy for the flowers instead of giving them back, and he came in and sat down again, saying, Wrong address.

Being the truth.

Barkentine 'Bear' Back From Arctic, To Join Patrol

Boston, May 19 (AP)—The 70-year-old Barkentine "Bear" flagship of the prematurely ended United States Antarctic expedition, prepared today for new adventures as a defence vessel. She docked yesterday at the end of a voyage from the Antarctic, bringing home 22 explorers, including 11 of 28 evacuated in a makeshift airplane from the expedition's ice-locked east base.

The Navy would not disclose the nature of the vessel's new mission, but reports said she would be used in patrolling Greenland waters.

British Forces Still Hold Salum

London, May 19 (CP)—British forces still hold Salum, Egyptian village just east of the Libyan frontier, an official source said today.

(The Nazis has claimed recapturing the village after once giving way before British forces.)

DUTCHMAN TALKS BETTER BRITAIN AS NAZIS BLITZ

and the U. S.

New Constitutional Order Wants One King but More Parliaments in Proposed New Social Order

London (CP) — Creation of a better Britain is the aim of the New Constitutional Order mounded in the house in Hampstead where the painter Romney lived. "N.C.O." dates back to Armistice Day, 1918. Spokesman for the movement is Brig. I. M. Conway Poole, D.S.O., who retired from the army in 1932.

A manifesto to followers of N.C.O. announced recently discovery of "a benevolent Leader—One Man who, with unique detachment, can extricate us from the seemingly hopeless quagmire into which irresponsible statesmanship has plunged the world."

A reporter who visited Romney House was introduced to a monocled, middle-aged man. He was born in Holland 43 years ago, named James John Van Ryswyk. Now he is a British subject, called simply James John.

Canadian Inspiration

John said he had been working out his plan for 16 years. "I began the practical side of it in Montreal in 1935," he added. "We have worked out a democratic constitution. This is no arm-raising or saluting movement, but one based on religious and philosophic principles." John has been in turn a seafarer, a laborer, a miner, a doctor, a shopkeeper, a manufacturer and a lepercolony worker.

N.C.O. aims at retention of the monarchy, with several parliaments and councils elected on a occupational basis. Highest authorities would be a People's Congress and a Supreme Court elected on a territorial basis.

Some Proposals

Its proposed new social order includes.

National minimum wages; minimum old age pensions of £2 ($8.90) weekly for one person and £3 ($13.35) for a married couple; free state medical service.

Low taxation with compulsory national savings; public ownership of transport, banking, insurance, gas, electricity, water, posts and telegraphs.

A state organization of social workers; foreign trade on an organized barter basis; limited profit-making; land-ownership for use only; compulsory civic service for two years from 18.

The world-famous Big Ben atop the Westminster Tower had a narrow escape when a bomb shattered the stonework above it during the German air raid on the night of May 10. The raiders scattered bombs across the parliament district scoring hits on Westminster Abbey, the House of Commons and the House of Lords.

WALL STREET

New York, May 19—(AP)—The Stock Market maintained a fairly even keel today but, except for scattered favorites, progress was negligible.

Among stocks a shade higher occasionally—some eventually slipped — were Anaconda, Kennecott, Phelps Dodge, U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Baltimore & Ohio, American Telephone, Standard Oil (N.J.) General Motors, Glenn Martin and Montgomery Ward.

Except for Lake Shore, which lost 5-8, Canadian issues were unchanged. In the Bond Market, Canada 4s were unchanged.

Supported in the curb were Calamba Sugar, American Gas, Creole Petroleum, N.J. Zinc and Sunray Oil.

Recent softness of Power and Light Company stocks brought out data from trade observers regarding earnings in this field. First quarter gross for 14 of these corporations was placed at an average of 5.4 per cent above the like 1940 period but heavier taxes and operating costs cut net to about 1 per cent under the same quarter last year.

Question marks cited in Wall St. included: A possible nearby crisis in the Middle-East conflict; chances of the French fleet being used against Great Britain; President Roosevelt's "Fireside Chat," scheduled for May 27; a threatened breach between the United States and France leading to force against Martinique; further strike threats, tax burdens and governmental price restrictions.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 19 (CP)—Industrials displayed a stronger note on Toronto Exchange today. Mines and western oils were quiet and a bit heavy. Volume was heavy at 103,000 shares traded.

The utility and miscellaneous issues recorded gains and other industrials were steady. Imperial Oil, Bell Telephone, C.P.R. and Dominion Willens Pfd. were among the strong spots.

Weakness of Lake Shore featured the golds. It sold off more than a point to 15 1-8, its lowest price in about 12 years. Wright-Hargreaves was down 10 cents at 5.10. Kerr-Addison firmed 10 to $4 and Sylvanite, East Malartic and Chesterville were other gainers.

Noranda, selling ex-dividend $1, was a point down at 49 1-2. Nickel held a minor gain.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, May 19—(CP)—Dressedweight were down 20 cents at Barrie and up 10 cents at London in bacon-hog markets reporting today. Other markets were unchanged.

Liveweight: Chatham $8.40.

Dressedweight: Barrie $11.65, Brantford $11.50 plus transportation, Hull $11.70 plus transportation, Kitchener $11.25 plus transportation, London $11.70 delivered, Stratford $11.25 plus transportation.

Proceedure To Obtain Hog Subsidy

The purpose of this article is to outline the procedure to obtain the provincial hog subsidy.

In the first place the farmer must obtain an application form from either the drover or agricultural representative, and fill the information as requested.

Secondly he must attach the grading certificate of the hogs. These certificates are the settlement forms or the grade release certificates issued by the Live Stock Products Grader at the point where the hogs are slaughtered. When a farmer sells his hogs on the dressed weight and grade basis the certificate comes with the settlement, but in cases where a drover handles the hogs the grading certificates are returned to the drover and it is his responsibility to distribute them to the farmers when making the final grade settlement on the lot of hogs. Farmers may assist in the distribution by calling at the shipping stations on shipping days.

Thirdly mail the application form to the Hog Subsidy Division, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, Ont., within two months of the date of shipment. When marketing several small lots of hogs the farmers are requested to hold their certificates and make one application for the entire lot.

Some good lots of hogs marketed out of the Belleville district during the week of May 16th, 1941 are as follows:

NAZIS EYE CRETE

Berlin, May 19 (AP)—Possibility that the Island of Crete in the Eastern Mediterranean will be the next objective of a concentrated German-Italian offensive was suggested today in latest Nazi military reports.

One military commentator said that through Axis occupation of the Aegean Islands the war approached within sight of Crete, where King George of Greece and his government established themselves when they left Athens.

With this Archipelago in Axis hands, it was said the conflict in the Eastern Mediterranean reached "a new stage, the effects of which will soon become noticeable."

STORY IS DENIED

New York, May 19 (AP)—The German radio today denied that large numbers of political arrests have been made in Germany in the case of Rudolf Hess or that Hess' wife has been arrested.

(It was reported in Stockholm yesterday that "hundreds" of prominent Nazis had been arrested.)

BRITISH TRAP DUKE

British sources made no estimates how long it might take to wipe out the last two centres of resistance, but it was said the efforts would be hampered by the rainy season —hard campaigning time in Ethiopia —which already is on.

A British Communique issued in Cairo during the week-end credited the Indian and South African forces with "brilliant operations", aided by the Royal Air Force, in cornering the Duke who, as an air corps officer helped subdue the Ethiopian Kingdom of which he was made his King's representative in 1937.

(An Italian communique yesterday prepared the Italian people for the surrender of the Amba Alaji stronghold by acknowledging that the situation for the Duke's forces was "becoming more difficult from hour to hour".)

Italians Admit Capture

Rome, May 19—(AP)—The Duke of Aosta, Viceroy of Ethiopia, has surrendered himself and his troops to the British army at Amba Alaji in Ethiopia, the Italian High Command announced today.

The war bulletin said the capitulation of the 9,000-foot mountain fortress, 280 miles northeast of Addis Ababa, was made necessary because the Fascist forces ran out of food and water.

"After having resisted beyond all limits," the communique asserted, the Amba Alaji defenders were reduced "to the material impossibility of taking care of the wounded and had orders to cease fighting."

The High Command claimed the British command, in tribute to the gallantry of the Italian troops, allowed the Fascist officers to retain their pistols and will render military honors to the garrison when it files from the fortress in a parade past the British detachments.

The Duke, it added, is sharing the lot of his troops.

Italian resistance is continuing in two regions of Ethiopia, Jimma in the south and Gondar in the northwest, the High Command said.

No Hope of Victory

Italians said the Amba Alaji garrison held out gallantly in the 40-day fight, despite many wounded who lay on the summit without shelter or treatment, because it had been ordered to resist as long as possible to keep the British command from sending its forces to other fronts.

The British forces first attacked the fortress April 3. The position was strong because of its brush-covered mountainous terrain, it was explained, but was vulnerable from above due to shortage of anti-aircraft defences.

"Resistance therefore was made without hope of victory," the Italians added, "for the sole purpose of maintaining military honor and holding out so as to engage enemy troops as long as possible and prevent them from being sent to other war fronts."

800 Taken in Africa

Nairobi, Kenya Colony, May 19 (CP)—Eight hundred Italians were captured when British and Imperial forces occupied Dalle, an important road junction 35 miles south of Sciascmiamanna, Friday, a communique said today.

Staff officers, two guns and two armored cars also were taken, the communique said.

As a result of the fall of Dalle, the communique said, two Italian divisions, "if they escape at all, can do so only by taking to the bush."

ROYAL AIR FORCE

(Nazi circles in Turkey, where the German and Russian ambassadors conferred yesterday, declared Russian "volunteers" are in Iraq, and expressed satisfaction at alleged prospects of joint Soviet-Axis intervention in Iraq. Earlier reports that Russian volunteers were in Iraq were declared last Friday by Tass, Soviet news agency, to be "fabrications."

(Turkish newspapers declared Britain should occupy Syria to prevent the Axis from using it as a gateway to the Iraq war front.

(The British Broadcasting Corporation quoted a Rumanian broadcast as reporting Germany was transporting infantry through the Bosporous presumably bound for Syria and Iraq.)

There were no reports yesterday of any outbreaks of land fighting in Iraq either by British forces or Premier Rashid Ali Al Gailani's rebel forces.

A communique from the R.A.F. Middle East command said two Nazi Messerschmitts were shot down near Baghdad by British fighters, which then machine-gunned motor transports and supply roads. One large plane was reported set afire in a British bomb attack on Mosul, where Nazi planes are based. An airfield near Baghdad also was bombed.

14 CARS DERAILED

All Escaped Injury

The train was in charge of Conductor Wm. McGhee and Engineer J. Clarke, both of Belleville and all members of the crew escaped without injury. Many of the freight cars to be derailed were reduced to matchwood as the first car to leave the tracks owing to a broken wheel, turned over and when the couplings were broken the automatic air brakes were immediately applied, but the speed of the train saw 13 trailing box cars piled car upon car as the mass of hurtling debris ripped the east bound tracks for many feet and also deranged the west bound tracks of the double track C.N.R. right-of-way, which resulted in all traffic on the road being diverted via the Canadian Pacific Railway from Belleville westerly until the tracks were cleared early Sunday. Auxiliaries from Belleville and Toronto were soon at the scene and an emergency dual set of tracks were laid and traffic resumed as usual on Sunday. The damaged box cars, many reduced to kindling, came to rest on the south side of the rails, the few hurtling over the north tracks causing sufficient rail damage to disrupt traffic on both lines, however.

Effort Made to Salvage Wheat

Neither Engineer Clarke or Conductor McGhee could throw any light upon the accident, as the first indication of trouble came when the air brakes were automatically applied as the first box car left the tracks. "It was really all over before we could get out and see exactly what had happened," one member of the crew reported as officials continued their investigations late Saturday.

Efforts to salvage the greater part of the many tons of grain strewn along the tracks for several hundred feet were commenced by Canadian National extra gangs from Belleville and Toronto, as workmen were busied on Sunday shovelling the loose grain into new box cars, which had been placed on adjacent sidings. The bulk of the grain was undamaged and has been reloaded into grain cars and continued to its destination where it will be cleaned, was the opinion of officials.

BRITISH PRESS BEATS BOMBINGS

Newspaper Industry Foresaw Problems of Blitz and Insured Continuity

London (CP)—Britain's newspaper industry, anticipating heavy German air attacks, foresaw all practical problems which would hinder production and planned effective steps to obviate them, said J. B. Brebner, director of the news division of the Ministry of Information at an Authors Club luncheon.

He paid tribute to reporters and photographers who risked their lives so people should "know the truth with which to combat hearsay." But for the newspapers fifth columnists would quickly become active causing despondency and confusion, he declared.

During last November's Coventry raid the newspaper offices were wrecked but publication was arranged at Birmingham. Plymouth papers had been printed at Exeter, Southampton newspapers at Bournemouth and so on.

Foresight of the industry had insured continuity of newspapers — despite failure of gas and electricity during the fire of London, national newspapers appeared as usual the next morning.

Brebner said the press was one of the largest of British manufacturing industries—greater than both shipbuilding and steel and iron. Its total value, including receipts from sales and advertisements, was approximately $238,000,000.

"The public has confidence in the press," he said, "since it knows that it is free, that it is animated by the same purpose as themselves—to win the war. We have seen what happens to a nation which loses the freedom of its press—that freedom which we are fighting to preserve."

German Communique

Berlin, May 19—(AP)—The German High Command claimed today destruction of four merchant ships and a tanker, bomb hits on a British cruiser and two destroyers and severe damage to seven other ships.

A communique said the ships claimed as destroyed yesterday and last night were two merchantmen totalling 12,000 tons which were bombed in St. George's Channel, a 10,000-ton tanker bombed in the North Atlantic and two small merchantmen in Suda Bay, Island of Crete.

Combat planes and dive bombers were claimed to have scored hits on a cruiser of the York class and two destroyers in Suda Bay and damaged six large merchantmen, including a tanker, so badly that their loss "can be reckoned."

8,299-TON

Alexandria, May 19 (AP) — The fate of 201 passengers—included 120 Americans—aboard the Egyptian steamship Zamzam, which sank in the South Atlantic while en route from New York to Alexandria, remained unknown today. Date of the sinking was not disclosed.

Authorities likewise were silent on the cause which sent the 8,299-ton passenger liner to the bottom somewhere between Recife (Pernambuco), Brazil, and Cape Town, South Africa.

The Alexandria Navigation Company received a cable from London advising that the Zamzam's master, Captain William Gray Smith, a veteran of 37 years at sea, was missing but there were no other details.

The United States consul general here said the 120 Americans aboard the vessel included Protestant and Catholic missionaries en route to posts in various sections of Central Africa, and en route to service with British and Free French forces in Egypt.

She also carried a cargo of fertilizer, trucks, automobiles and machinery of various types and was said to have been marked plainly with the flags of a non-belligerent Egypt.

Extensive Passenger Service

(When the Zamzam arrived in New York last February before her last run back, Capt. Smith reported she had made the entire trip blacked out and with radio silent, commenting that although Egypt was not at war she was "considered a non-belligerent ally of Great Britain and we could not take any chances.")

The Zamzan, built in 1909 at Belfast and first christened the Leicestershire, was one of the principal links between the Middle East, South America and New York after Italy entered the war last June.

She had carried hundreds of United States citizens home since that time.

The Zamzam which had a top speed of 14 knots, served as a troop transport in the first Great War. Later named the British Exhibitor, she plied between England and Burma before being taken over by Egyptian interests. A twin-screw motorship, she was 467 feet long.

For several years she carried Mohammedan pilgrims from Suez to Jidda, port of Mecca, and had a mosque built in her hold to accommodate 600 pilgrims.

The ship twice had been in danger from war action, reports from abroad said, once when splattered by splinters from a bomb dropped by an Italian plane in Alexandria harbor and once when strafed by Nazi planes in the same harbor.

William Ruxton, President of the British-American Ambulance Corps and organizer of the group of American drivers abroad, said in New York that insurance underwriters had sought in vain to find possible survivors of the Zamzam.

New York shipping circles expressed the possibility that the passengers and crew might be aboard a German raider. Since the Zamzam was said to have disappeared without a trace, these quarters said it indicated the work of a surface raider.

If she had been the victim of a submarine, it was believed by these informants that survivors would have been located in lifeboats and that some, in all probability, would have been picked up by now.

Ruxton, whose office had known for days that the ship was overdue, said he would ask the state department to investigate.

Actor's Son Aboard

New York (AP)—Philip Faversham, 33 year old son of the late William Faversham, actor, was among 24 United States ambulance drivers aboard the Egyptian steamship Zamzam, reported sunk in the South Atlantic, the British-American ambulance Corps announced today.

Others in the list included:

John W. Ryan, 21, Newton, Mass., son of George Ryan, an editor of The Boston Herald.

Arthur Kirda, Jr., 26, South Kent, Conn., who eloped to Gordonsville, Va., two days before sailing, with Georgette De Vilaine, a script writer, of Westport, Conn.

Charles A. McCarthy, 29, Weston, Mass., awarded the Croix De Guerre while serving with the American Volunteer Ambulance Corps in France last summer.

Toronto reported four Canadians believed aboard as follows: Mrs. K N Strachan and Miss Doreen Turner of Toronto, and Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Henderson, Winnipeg.

Another Canadian reported aboard is James S. Russell, a member of a missionary party of the Seventh Day Adventist Church. His home town in Canada was not known. Others in this party were:

Mrs. Russell and a child.

Miss Helen Hyatt, South Africa; Mrs. Violet Hankins, South Africa; Mr and Mrs. Stanley Johnson, Walla Walla, Wash.; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jefferson Jenkins, graduates of Emanuel Mission, Berrien Springs, Mich.

Six of the passengers reported missing are from Philadelphia, according to friends in that city

They were listed as Mr. and Mrs Roy F. Brill, en route to the Belgian Congo with their four children to serve as missionaries. They represented the African Inland Mission, with headquarters in Brooklyn, N.Y.

The children are: Roy F., 8; Fay Carol, 5; Edith, three; and David, two Another missionary on board was James P. MacKnight, of Allentown, Pa., a representative of the United Presbyterian Church. MacKnight was to have disembarked at Mombassa, relatives at Allentown reported.

A young New Jersey couple, married less than a month, Dr. and Mrs Arthur Barnett, of Ridgewood, N.J., were given a farewell party at the pier as the ship sailed.

Dr. Barnett, staff physician at Hackensack, N.J., hospital, and his wife, the former Miss Margaret Stevenson of Ridgewood, N.J., were sponsored by the African Inland Mission.

Mr. and Mrs Fred J. Young, of Gastonia, N.C., en route to Nairobi, East Africa, as missionaries, were aboard. Mrs. Young was Doris Warren of Detroit, Mich., before marriage

20 Ambulances Shipped

New York (AP)—Twenty ambulances valued at $1,350 each were among the equipment which the British American Ambulance Corps shipped on the Egyptian steamer Zamzam, reported sunk in the South Atlantic.

They were to be used by the 24 drivers who were en route to join Gen. Charles De Gaulle's Free French forces in the Lake Chad region of French Equatorial Africa, corps headquarters here said today.

The men also took with them one repair truck, one mobile kitchen and a staff car.

Members of the corps volunteered to serve for six months to a year. Their return passage already had been paid.

Leader of the group was Francis J. Vicovari, 29, New York, to whom the dangers of the present war were well known.

For his bravery while serving with the American Volunteer Ambulance Corps behind the Maginot Line, France awarded him the Croix de Guerre. At the fall of France he was captured by the Nazis and held in a concentration camp for two months.

The other officers of the unit were William A. Wydenbruck-Loe, 50, New York, and Frederick W. Hoenig, 33, New York.

Wydenbruck-Loe served in the first Great War as a captain in the Hungarian army. He came to the United States in 1924 and became a citizen 7½ years ago. Hoenig was a Harvard history instructor on leave of absence.

Two of the drivers, Philip N. Faversham, 33, Concord, N.H., and Ray Colcord, Jr., New York, gave up stage careers to join the unit.

Faversham, son of William Faversham, the great matinee idol, had played with Cornelia Otis Skinner in "Candide" and with Clifton Webb in the Chicago Company of "The Man Who Came to Dinner."

Colcord, a graduate of Missouri Military Academy, and former University of Missouri student, attended the American Academy of Dramatic Arts from 1937 to 1939. He had appeared in "Swinging the Dream" and "Schoolhouse at the Lot."

Four Canadians Believed Aboard

Toronto (CP)—Four Canadians are believed to have been among the 201 passengers of the Egyptian motorship Zamzam, reported to have been sunk somewhere between Pernwmbuco and Cape Town.

Friends and relatives here said Mrs. K. N. Strachan and Miss Doreen Turner of Toronto and Dr. and Mrs. A. C. Henderson, Winnipeg medical missionaries, were aboard the Zamzam.

Mrs. Strachan was said to be on her way to join her husband in Arabia. Miss Turner was going to South Africa for her marriage to a member of the Royal Air Force stationed there.

Winnipeg Couple on Way to Belgian Congo

Winnipeg —(CP)— Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Henderson, Winnipeg medical missionaries said to have been aboard the Egyptian motorship Zamzam, reported sunk somewhere between Pernambuco and Cape Town, were on their way to first foreign mission post at Monieka, Belgian Congo, relatives said here today.

The couple were representatives of the United Christian Missionary Society of Indianapolis and the Church of Christ Disciples. They were known to have sailed from New York aboard the Zamzam and wrote their families here from a Brazilian port at which the vessel stopped.

Mrs. Henderson, 28, is the former Allison Jamieson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. N. Jamieson, while Dr. Henderson, also 28, is the son of Mrs. A. G. Henderson.

Both Dr. and Mrs. Henderson recently completed courses in tropical medicine at Tulane University but received their early education here.

Mrs. Henderson was a graduate of Wesley College, University of Manitoba affiliate here, and of the Winnipeg General Hospital. Her husband graduated from Manitoba Medical College in 1938 and practiced for a year at Steinbach, Man.

Port Hope Man Aboard

Port Hope, Ont. —(CP)— James S. Russell, reported by the headquarters of the Seventh Day Adventists Church in New York to be one of a party of nine Seventh Day Adventist missionaries aboard the missing Egyptian steamship Zamzam, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Russell of Port Hope.

Mr. Russell, with his wife and infant daughter, Jent, were en route to Ikuzi, Tanganyika Territory, where he was to assume charge of a mission post. He was born in Toronto and his wife was from Albany, N.Y. Their daughter was born in the United States.

On Way to North Rhodesia

Toronto —(CP)— Mrs. A. E. Jagger of suburban Mimico said today her sister-in-law, Mrs. T. D. Guernsey, formerly of Vancouver, had been aboard the Egyptian motorship Zamzam, missing with more than 300 passengers and crew in the South Atlantic.

Mrs. Jagger said Mrs. Guernsey was on her way back to Northern Rhodesia, where she has lived with her husband for four years, after a nine-months' holiday in Canada.

She left Canada early in March and was known to have been aboard the Zamzam, Mrs. Jagger said.

Granby, Que., May 19 —(CP)— Superior of the Mont Sacre Couer College, Mother House of the Sacred Heart Brotherhood in the Province of Quebec, said today five Brothers belonging to the Order were passengers of the missing Egyptian steamship Zamzam.

The Superior listed the Brothers on board the ship as Brothers George Aime, Herman, Andre, Mathias and Joseph Henri, but did not identify them further.

All five were en route to the Order's college at Roma, Basutoland, South Africa.

Germany Agrees To Return 100,000 French Prisoners

Vichy, May 19 (AP)—Germany has agreed to return immediately approximately 100,000 French prisoners of war as one of the first results of Vichy-Nazi negotiations, the Vichy government announced today.

A communique containing the announcement said: "French negotiations are proceeding favourably" and declared the "first result" would be the return of all French non-commissioned officers and soldiers now held prisoner who fought in the war.

These were estimated unofficially at 100,000.

A methodical plan for returning this group is being studied, the communique said.

In all there are 1,800,000 French prisoners in Nazi hands.

It was said a plan is under consideration to permit French officials at the head of industrial and agricultural enterprises to have free access to the reserved zone of northern and eastern France.

As a result of this, sources here believed, this zone might be re-attached to France for administrative purposes. At present some sections are attached to Belgium and Germany for administration.

GOOD NEWS FOR SOLDIER'S FRIENDS

Brantford, Ont., May 19 (CP) — Military colleagues of a Brantford soldier RMS. Mike May, 31, now in England, recently heard that he had been killed during an air raid and they were preparing to attend his funeral when they discovered that instead of being a corpse he had just been promoted to the rank of Regimental Sergeant Major and was very much alive.

RSM. May told the story in a letter received by his mother, Mrs. H. H. May.

BLAST CAP CASUALTIES

Ottawa (CP)—Twenty-five persons were killed and 590 injured in Canada in 19 years while playing with blasting caps. Seventy per cent of the casualties were children.

THE WAR TODAY

By DON GILBERT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Syria may become a centre of hostilities in the Middle East. The Turkish press calls upon Britain to follow up her bombing of Nazi-used Syrian airfields with full occupation of the French-mandated country. Vichy's high commissioner issued an inflammatory manifesto against Britain.

Fighting in Iraq, neighboring Syria on the east, has yet to become general, and if it is true that the Germans are not yet strong enough in Iraq to challenge Britain in a big way, it follows that Syria will have to be used to a much greater extent as the route for German reinforcements. And Syria would be a much better spot for the British forces to get to grips with the enemy, without waiting for his forces to reach Iraq.

The provocative language of Gen. Henri Dentz, the high commissioner in Syria, recalling the most offensive of the utterances of Laval, Darlan, De Brinan and the other German tools in France, may be regarded as a challenge to Britain.

Turkey is believed to have long been in favor of Britain taking over Syria. The French officers and troops are said to be divided in their allegiance between Marshal Petain and Gen. Charles De Gaulle's Free French movement.

The native population is violently anti-French, but on the other hand is not pro-British. But their eagerness to get rid of the French might nullify anti-British sentiment if Britain were to act now, before the Germans, whose propaganda has been strong, can get there first in force.

As soon as fighting develops on the eastern shore of the Mediterranean, the German Africa corps on the Egyptian frontier can be depended on to increase its pressure on the army of the Nile. Here the question arises whether Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell's Middle East command, which has half a million men spread thinly over the vast territory stretching from Ethiopia to Syria and from Libya to Iraq, can afford to undertake an offensive against the Levant states.

"DAUGHTER OF DESTINY"

By ELEANOR ATTERBURY COLTON

CHAPTER XXV

Talbot kept his promise not to appear at the El Mexicano again, but Devona wasn't so sure she could keep her's to attend the performance of "Fools in Paradise." By 7 o'clock Saturday she still hadn't thought of a convincing excuse—hadn't thought of any excuse as a matter of fact. Her whole mind had been absorbed with the problem of locating that strange shipment of "new stuff."

And so far, she thought wryly, she'd gotten exactly nowhere. Macias, apparently terribly busy, came and went from his private office in hurried flights. Obviously, something important was in the air. But even though she watched diligently for any opportunity to slip again into that private office, she didn't succeed.

She had almost given up hope when, between numbers once, she saw Macias greet some stranger warmly, escort him into the bar lounge, saw the bartender put drinks before them. Then, as she stepped down from the platform, she heard the phone ringing in Macias' office.

Answering the Phone

Instantly alert to this rare chance, she said, carefully casual—

"I'll get it, Elsie," just as the hat-check girl prepared to duck under her counter.

Elsie, who often acted as secretary or telephone clerk and general handy girl grinned. Thanks, pal."

"Club El Mexicano," she clipped, imitating Elsie's routine cheerfulness.

"May I speak to Mr. Macias. At once, please."

Every instinct came to quick attention. That clipped, English-accented voice! Where had she heard that before!

"He isn't here just now," she stalled. Could I take a message?"

This must be it—the call—

"Who is speaking?"

"Elsie," she hesitated, her heart in her mouth.

The line buzzed a moment. Then, "Tell him there's been a delay. Tell him to make it Tuesday any time after midnight," that familiar voice went on. "He can pick everything up then."

Wong's Voice

That voice was, she was sure now, Wong's. Fighting to keep excitement out of her own voice, "And where should he call?"

"He knows."

Her rising hopes fell again abruptly.

"No. Tell him number 47 instead?"

"Number—47?"

"Yes'l — irritably, "he knows. Front St."

"Of course. Thanks. I'll tell him."

A dull click as the wire went dead. No. 47 Front St. any time after midnight Tuesday. Now she was getting somewhere, she exulted.

A second click. This time, behind her as the door from the lobby opened. Macias. And the telephone receiver still in her hands. She hesitated only a fraction of a second.

"Sorry," she said sweetly into the mouthpiece. "You have the wrong number." Calmly she replaced the phone, turned as if she'd just then heard him.

"Yes," she nodded carelessly. "Calling somebody's bakery."

For a moment, his searching glance almost unnerved her. What excuse could she give now for——

"Jose," she began, and to distract him, sank wearily into a chair. "I wonder if I could go home now?"

"Home? What for?"

Disbelieving

It was easy to summon tears. Her very real fright did that for her. "I feel—ill. Headache. Cold coming on I guess. Anyway, I don't think I can sing any more this evening."

Macias came around the desk to lay his hand heavily against her forehead, touch her cheeks. "Sick, nuh?"

More than because of the touch of his hand, Devona shuddered under the fierce probing of those dark eyes. Sometimes, it was almost as if he could see into her mind, read her thoughts, divine her sensations. If he were reading her mind right now——

"I'll take you home," he said dryly.

No escape that way! Moistening her lips, Devona felt surely she must look feverish. Excitement pounded at her pulses and fear sapped her usual energy until she trembled visibly.

In Flight Again

And it wasn't until Macias had actually released her at the door of the Brownstone and she'd fled through the dingy lobby into the elevator that she really felt she was getting away with it.

He hadn't suspected anything, she assured herself as she ran down the narrow, ill-lighted hallway to her room. Or at least he hadn't seemed to. Although, if he didn't believe her, she reasoned cooly enough, he'd have hid it and be waiting to catch her red-handed later.. She couldn't be sure.

But—she shrugged as she locked the door behind her, pulled off the shabby blue jacket — she couldn't turn back now, either. Not that Macias wouldn't catch up with her sooner or later if she played this risky game long enough. No one could hope to put anything over on him indefinitely. All she could hope for was that he wouldn't overtake her until "any time after midnight on Tuesday."

Finger racing, Devona stripped off her street clothes, started her bath. The hot water, fresh, dainty underthings and, finally, the beloved red velvet dress did things for her courage. It was going to be exciting, anyway, she told the bright-eyed girl in her mirror. And she still looked recognizably like the girl who'd landed at a San Pedro pier, was it only six months ago! And since then, she smiled slowly, how many rosy hopes she'd traded for dull gray experience, dreams for realities.

Watching for Shadow

And all because, as that uncannily gifted seer had promised, a "great sorrow anda great love had "great sorrow and a great love had been more cruel than the sorrow."

Turning, resolute now, Devona caught up long white gloves, more souvenirs of that extravagant shopping day in Shanghai, a tiny evening bag. Would she know a "shadow" if she saw one, she wondered as the creaking elevator lowered her complainingly to the lobby. That, she knew, would be Macias' way of reassuring himself that she wasn't "up to some mischief." Some one "tailing" her, reporting her every move.

If there were some one—the elevator clanked open, and she stepped into the lobby, glanced quickly around her—surely he would "pick up her trail" right here.

With a step as steady as her heart was tremulous, she crossed the lobby, hesitated at the door. No one there. Apparently, no one loitering just outside. No shadowy form in the doorway across the street.

Devona turned back to the desk.

"Will you call a taxi for me, please," she said carelessly and busied herself drawing on the long white gloves.

"Sure." The clerk grinned with easy familiarity. "All laid away, aren't you. Must be a heavy date."

It wouldn't do any harm to plant a few false clues just in case——

At the Playhouse

The Playhouse was near enough the concert hall to mislead any "tailing" car, she thought a little later as her cab bore her swiftly through downtown traffic, out onto the broad, blazingly lighted Wilshire Blvd. That is, assuming that any one actually could follow their darting, zig-zag trail through the swarms of cars and cabs and trucks.

Under the Playhouse marquee, brilliantly lighted, Devona stood a moment pretending to study the bills posted on huge signboards, the photographs of lovely Vara Vadne, of Evans Hughes, her leading man, of the rest of the smiling, and unknown, cast.

A smartly dressed crowd of theatregoers pushed past and around her—lovely ermine capes, sables, fashionable pinch-waisted brass-buttoned coachmen's coats. Beautiful women carefully cared for by tall, dress-suited escorts. A smart, discerning crowd, Devona recognized at once. And a critical audience. It would go hard with Vara Vadne and her cast if they failed to please.

Thoughts of Vara

A wry little smile curved her lips. Vara who never failed to please her public. Still — Devona stopped that unworthy little hope right on the threshold of her mind. She couldn't wish Vara failure without dooming Talbot. And through him—Dale.

Covering a searching glance about her with studied carelessness, Devona tried to make sure no one had noticed her arrival. No one, she decided, had veered suddenly as she turned, no one waited just outside the fringe of the gay crowd. At least, no one that she could see.

She Sees Dale

Relaxing a little against the deep - cushioned seat, Devona glanced toward the ornate boxes. Tal would be there, probably, and with him—her heart leaped—Dale.

But not yet. She searched every face. Only one box, the lower left, was empty. That must be reserved for the playwright and his brother. It was. Just as the houselights began to fade out, she saw them come in. Talbot first—his face tight with reserve. And behind him, so terribly good-looking in his dress clothes—Dale.

Devona caught herself clenching her program into a hard ball, breathing as fast as if she'd just run a race from somewhere. So much depended on tonight. She could see it in Tal's tense, drawn face right now. And in Dale's quiet poise.

The house was darkened now, the curtain rose with slow, provoking suspense. Oh, please God, let it be a great success, Devona prayed almost unconsciously. A success that would rescue Tal from the particular hell on earth he was suffering right now. A success that would lift Vara to new heights and —she bit her lips against a little sob—take Dale farther than ever from herself.

CHAPTER XXVI

Long before the curtain went down on the first act, Devona realised that the enthusiasm with which the smartly fashionable audience had first greeted Vara Vadne, was not extending to the play itself. Good dialogue, a beautiful set, stunning gowns, even Vara's unmistakable glamor, her complete mastery of the situation wouldn't hide the fact that the play's theme was obscure, confused.

"What's it all about, have you discovered?" Devona heard a masculine voice behind her ask irritably.

His companion murmured, "Vadne's slipping definitely, isn't she?"

Pity for Tal

As long as she dominated the scene, they listened, spellbound, while she lifted the dull play to life. But after her exits, a murmur rustled over the crowded theatre like wind in Autumn leaves. Programs fluttered, people coughed, moved restlessly. And the action unfolding against the brilliant drawing-room background sagged wearily.

Poor Tal, Devona grieved compassionately. He must be suffering torments of damned souls. So keenly sensitive, no one would need to tell him after tonight that the play was inherently weak. Well-written, even brilliantly written in spots, still the whole vehicle was confused — a too-serious problem touched lightly, cynically, in brilliantly sophisticated dialogue until you believed none of it. Talbot's own inconsistencies dramatized, his deep awareness of tragedy masquerading as cynicism.

Hours of Torture

Twisting her gloves torturously, Devona dreaded the moment when the curtain would descend, the house lights dispell the kindly darkness.

When the intermission did come, she searched Tal's face anxiously. Achingly sorry for him, she watched him press his lips together, his face white as his shirt front, and crumple the program booklet into a tight wad. Did he realize what was happening? Could he hear the comments scattered carelessly by this fastidious crowd?

The second act dragged to a close even more unhappily than the first. Agonized, Devona doubled her own applause in a vain effort to make up for the frosty silence around her. But it was no use. Vara took two curtain calls. Vara, who'd been known to make as many as 40 curtseys to a clamorous audience!

The house lights went up again and Devona's eyes turned instantly to the left-hand lower box. Dale was rising, saying something to Tal. He nodded once toward the stage and then left the box. Going backstage to congratulate Vara, Devona guessed at once. And wondered if she'd have time during his absence to slip into that chair beside the white-faced Talbot, say something to help ease the hurt that must be stabbing at him so painfully.

But before she could gather courage to risk Dale's meeting her there, having to speak to him, she saw Talbot pull himself out of his chair suddenly, leave the box.

Searching for Tal

Excusing herself hastily, Devona slipped out along the row of seats, fled up the aisle to the lobby, hazy now with blue smoke and high-pitched laughter. But Tal wasn't there. Heart quickening, she pushed through the crowd, searching for him. He must be here somewhere. He wouldn't just disappear.

Then she saw him. At the checkroom. He was jamming his hat under his arm, fairly snatching his topcoat as he flung a coin toward the startled clerk. Another instant and he was pushing past an obsequious usher, through an opened doorway, out into the street. As he went she caught one glimpse of that grim, tight-lipped agony written in his pallid face.

Only a glimpse, but enough to draw her after him, out onto the sidewalk just in time to see him plunge headlong into a taxi, roar off.

"Taxi, please." Impulse, instinct, intuition—something took charge of Devona. "Follow that cab ahead. Quick."

"Yes, ma'am."

Following Him

Eyes riveted to the dodging, darting cab ahead, she clung to the edge of the slippery leather seat and prayed silently, Please, God, don't let us lose track of him.

Actually, she was less than half a block behind when Tal's cab stopped in front of a handsome, though old-fashioned house in one of the older residential districts that had spelled wealth and prestige when Los Angeles was younger.

She saw him dismiss the car with a gesture, race up the broad steps to the door.

"Thanks. You needn't wait," she told her own driver as she thrust a bill into his hand and, heart hammering, raced up the steps after Tal.

The door had already slammed shut, but she flung herself against it, pounded savagely with a knocker. A moment later an astonished old butler opened it again.

"Excuse me. I must see Mr. Brasher," she gasped, and ignoring the old servant's obvious distress, ruhed past him into the hall.

"Where is he?" she turned to the gaping butler.

Then she heard him. It might have been a sob—in the drawing room. He was lying, face down, on the long sofa, head buried in his arms.

She ran to him, dropped to her knees beside the sofa, pulled his head against her shoulder.

"Tal, don't. You mustn't."

Bitter Moments

Startled, he pulled himself free, sat up, his eyes dry, his face haggard. "Mustn't what? And what the devil are you doing here?" he snapped fiercely. "Why aren't you seeing that last act of that wonderful play of mine? FOOLS IN PARADISE, you know. Fools!" He laughed—a horrible sound that tore at Devona's heart. "Fools! Hell! I'm the biggest damned fool of them all. Me—writing a play. Me! Look at me, Devona. Look at me. The biggest damned fool failure anybody's ever seen. At least I make a magnificent success of that!"

"Tal!" Still on her knees, Devona caught his hands — cold, trembling hands that tore wildly at his collar, rumpled his hair. "Please don't say things like that. It's not true. You'll do another play some day and——"

"Never!" Flinging himself off the sofa, he tramped wildly across the room, tore open the blinds, flung them shut again. "I'll never write another word. Never. I'm a failure. Hear me? Failure. Worthless. Good for nothing."

Stumbling to her feet, she faced him, checked her own terror at the wild despair she saw in his dark eyes. "Don't be silly, Tal," she tried to say calmly, soothingly. "A play as beautifully written as that one isn't a complete failure."

"I tell you I'll never put another word on paper," he shouted, the pulse at his temple throbing dangerously. "Never another word. Do you hear?"

"Yes, you will," Devona said quietly. "You'll have to."

He looked up at her, staring, his face drawn, a tight, hard mask.

Then, because he seemed waiting for her to go on: "We all have to take what life hands us and make the best of it. You can't cry out and have it do any good."

"No—I suppose not——" almost reluctantly.

Encouraged, Devona talked on—reasonably, quietly. Just common sense things her dad would have said about keeping one's chin up, learning to take it bravely, think clearly, act honestly.

"So you see," she finished calmly. "You don't have to accept failure."

"No—I don't," he agreed, slowly. as if he had arrived at some calming decision. "And—I won't, what's more."

With that, he plunged out of the chair, strode toward her, drew her to her feet. "Now—I won't, Devona, my darling. I needn't and—I won't. I see it now. I'll fix all that."

Still a little baffled by the wild excitement in his eyes, Devona mustered a smile. "That's better, Tal. I knew you'd see——"

In Tal's Arms

But suddenly he was gathering her into his arms, kissing her, stormily, passionately, almost cruelly.

"Better!" he cried, it's the best thing that could have happened. I know that now. Thanks, sweetheart." And then, stepping away from her. "Now good night. You were swell to come. Abbot will drive you home."

Devona hesitated. "You're sure you are —all right?"

"Well—good night, then."

"Good-bye."

Reluctantly, she moved toward the front hall.

"Bring the car around, Abbot," Tal directed, hands shoved deep into his pockets, he lounged in the doorway, a smile curving his still-white lips.

"Yes, sir." The old servant shuffled off down the hall, disappeared.

A moment later, Devona stepped into the automobile outside, Tal slammed the door behind her.

"Good-by, my sweet," he called as Abbot cautiously guided the car out of the drive.

What Will She Find?

Good-by. The word snagged in the tangle of worries still tormenting her. Good night, he'd meant. Or had he!

God in Heaven, that meant—not that—good-by!

"Wait!" she cried instantly. "Take me back. Quick."

"Back—to the house, miss?"

"Yes. Hurry. I've — forgotten something."

He turned the car, obediently. As it rolled to a stop, she leapt out. "Give me a key. Quick."

"Yes, miss" — fumbling in his pocket.

Then up the steps, the key in the lock, the door finally opened. she might be—too—late.

Down the hall. The drawing room — deserted! Dining room—empty, too. A single slit of light under a door at the end of the hall. Her heels like castanets on the polished floor, muffled again in thick-piled rugs. Trembling, she flung open that door.

Talbot, standing at the window, whirled to face her. On his lips that same mirthless little smile, in his eyes dark despair. In his hand —Devona's heart stopped—an ugly little snub-nosed automatic

BAY OF QUINTE W. I.

The Bay of Quinte Institute met at the home of Mrs. Glencoe Meyers on Wednesday last. Mrs. Fred Wilson, President, opened the meeting with the singing of the National Anthem and the Opening Ode. The Lord's Prayer was repeated in unison. Favorable reports were given from the Red Cross Secretary and Cemetery Secretary. Many other points of business were discussed. The delegates for district annual to be held at Chatterton were appointed. The directors, Mrs. Yateman, Mrs. Bonisteel, Mrs. Megginson, Mrs. R. Ketcheson were appointed to attend the annual.

The topic for the month being Canadian Industries. The roll call was answered by industries of Trenton and Belleville. After some letters of correspondence were read by the secretary, Mrs. F. Carr. The last Tuesday of each month was voted to be used for a sewing day for Red Cross work. Mrs. Walter Jones opening her home for that day in May. At this point Mrs. Wilson handed over the program to the convener, Mrs. Bruce Hogle

Mrs. Hogle mentioned several of the industries of Trenton and Belleville and gave some points on the number of employees and the work that was being turned out at these factories.

The other topic for the month being agriculture, Mrs. Hogle gave very interesting papers on the apple industry of Canada, whilst it has been held responsible for man's downfall in ages past, it has brought much pleasure and profit to him in recent years. The first cultivation in Canada was made by the early French settlers.

It is known that apple trees were planted in Nova Scotia earlier than 1633 and only one variety was then known which was the fameuse or snow apple. The first export of apples was made by packet from Nova Soctia to England in 1849. A large shipment was made in 1861 but this did not turn out so well. It was fully another 20 years before the export of fruit became of any importance, between 1880 and 1890 there was a steady growth of exportations to the English market. So in 1890 100,000 barrels were exported. Today upwards of 1,500,000 are exported annually from Nova Scotia alone.

She also gave a description of Dairying in Canada as one cannot find in history anything to determine at what period the human race first used butter and cheese for food, it is very probable that the well known cottage cheese is the oldest form of milk product. Up until the time rennet was discovered to curdle sweet milk the cottage cheese would be the only kind possible from the natural souring and curdling of milk. No one knows when the rennet was discovered but this discovery has made possible the production of more than 1,000 varieties of cheese now made throughout the world. Mrs. Hogle closed this part of the program with a contest made up on vegetables. Mrs. C. Holmes won the prize for the largest number correct.

Mrs. Wilson tendered a vote of thanks to Mrs. Hogle and also to Mrs. Meyers for opening her home. The meeting was closed by repeating the Institute Creed and Mrs. Meyers and committee served a very dainty lunch. After which the selling of plant seeds and slips for 5c each brought an amount of $1.40. The conveners of each month are expected to make a bit of extra money whatever way preferred.

MASTER GOLF CHAMP ILLUSTRATES SOME OF HIS FINER SHOTS

Master Golf Champ Craig Wood is caught by the Speedray as he drove off in a practice round. Note he has shifted his weight to the left foot and the ball is in line with his left eye—considered the ideal form by most pros. Wood's left arm seems to form a straight line with the shaft of the club, which gives the greatest amount of pressure at the point of impact. This unusual photo caught the ball just as it was flattening against the club head.

The champion's technique of making a chip shot. Note that both arms are stiff, the divot being taken after the ball has been hit. In this case Wood is using the mashie niblick. On longer iron shots the divot is taken before the clubface meets the ball. Note bend in Wood's left leg, indicating transfer of all weight from the right leg at moment of impact or before finish of the down swing.

Craig Wood here makes an explosion shot from a sand trap. The winner of the recent Masters' tourney is using a blaster (weighted niblick). Note that he has completed his shot, but, unlike the unseasoned golfer, keeps his head down long after the ball has left the sand. In this shot Wood strikes the sand an inch or so behind the ball causing the uplifting sand to lift the ball. Note club head has passed the propelled ball in flight, which proves that the sand and not the ball was hit first. Note straightness of Wood's arms even in the follow through.

NAZIS MAKE AIR-BORNE ATTACK ON CRETE

Nazi Parachutists Take Part in Attack London Reports

Greek Gov't Retired To Island At Conclusion Of Greek Campaign—Heavily Guarded

SAVAGE AIR ATTACK

London, May 20 —(CP)— Glider-borne troops as well as parachutists and regular-plane transported infantry were used in a German assault today on Crete, it was reported reliably in London. This is the first reported use of gliders as troop transports in combat conditions.

These reports were incomplete, however, and there were no details as to the size of the gliders or how many men they carried.

The three-way air invasion of Crete was considered here to be the beginning of a determined attempt by Hitler to clear the Eastern Mediterranean sealane to Syria and complete encirclement of Turkey.

Semi-official quarters called this aerial invasion of Crete, seat of the Greek Government and a bastion of Britain's naval control of the Mediterranean, the beginning of a "grave battle." British and Greek troops on the island are commanded by Maj.-Gen. B. C. Freyberg of New Zealand.

A similar attack against Cyprus which is the only other British or Allied foothold across the Axis path to Syria, might well be the sequel to the attempt against Crete, informed quarters asserted. Cyprus, British territory, is deep in the Eastern Mediterranean, off the Syrian Coast.

Cairo, May 20 (AP)—German parachutists and air-borne troops attempted to obtain a foothold on the Island of Crete this morning and "a number have already been accounted for" the middle East Command announced today, indicating that the fight was proceeding.

Soviet Says U. S. Takes Initiative In Seeking Japan's Accord

Moscow, May 20—(AP)—The Soviet press published a report Monday that the United States had taken the initiative in seeking a far eastern accord with Japan.

Reproduced was a dispatch of Tass, Soviet news agency, from New York, quoting the Tokyo correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune reporting that the United States had received an unofficial Japanese proposal for an agreement which would include American mediation of the Chinese-Japanese war.

The Tass dispatch added, "According to other information, the initiative in the offer of a Japanese - American agreement came not from Japan but from the United States."

Turkish Newspaper Says Turkey Had Chance To Get Syria

Istanbul, May 20 (AP)—The Turkish newspaper Sabeh said yesterday that Turkey had a chance to take advantage of France's defeat last summer to gain Syria and that "Italy and Germany encouraged us to do so, but we didn't because we hate imperialism and believe in the right of people to live independently or according to fixed agreements."

"But with Syria under Axis control, Turkey must consider her vital interests," the paper added.

Other newspapers stressed the country's readiness to make sacrifices, and it was reported that all reserve officers here had been ordered to report between June 1 and 20.

Oddfellows Lodges Meet At Brockville

Brockville was chosen as venue for the rally because it is the oldest Ontario lodge in continuous existence. The Grand Lodge of Ontario was formed here in 1856 with Dr. Thomas Reynolds of Brockville as its first Grand Master.

Soldiers Will Receive Future Parachutists Says A. P. Herbert

London, May 20 (CP)—A. P. Herbert, humorist and member of parliament, told the United Kingdom Sunday, told the United Kingdom grim witticisms that "the next enemies arriving by parachute must not be met with peasants with pitchforks—undaunted in their underclothes."

He was referring to the Scottish plowman David McLean, who captured Rudolf Hess on a moor outside Glasgow a week ago last Saturday.

"They must—I believe they will—be received and repelled by trained troops fully equipped and ready," Mr. Herbert said in a broadcast.

"One day it may be these islands will shake to an unprecedented thud as Goering—a parachute at each corner—settles on and perhaps submerges the Isle of Wight or Skye....

"One day perhaps a less expansive but more important parachute will gently deliver to the peace of safety of this 'effete democracy' a scrubby little fugitive from the soldiers and sheriffs of all nations. And then we may sit back for a bit."

BERLIN REPORTS NO LOSS OF LIFE AS LINER SUNK

Claim Made 300 Passengers And Crew Of Zamzam Safe In German-Occupied Territory

LOCATION UNDISCLOSED

Berlin, May 20 (AP)—Nazi spokesmen said today that the 8,229-ton Egyptian liner Zamzam has been sunk by the Nazi Navy—presumably by a surface raider—and the 322 passengers and crewmen, including 138 Americans and at least 22 Canadians, are safe in German-occupied territory.

(The sinking, seemingly, occurred many days ago—the Nazis did not say when—for the trip from the South Atlantic lane she was following to the nearest German-held territory is a long one of itself.

(France, it appeared, was the likeliest territory for the landing of passengers and crew. Presumably they were taken there by the raider or an auxiliary.)

Nazi sources said simply that those from the Zamzam were "safe and well cared for in German-occupied territory."

"The vessel was destroyed with the most exacting regard for all international agreements," a Nazi spokesman said.

"The ship carried contraband intended for the enemy. German naval units observed every regulation in meeting the situation.

"It might be called a perfect example of the war on sea commerce carried out according to regulations."

FRENCH MINISTER SENT TO SYRIA

Gen. Bergeret Will Organize A.-A. Defences Against British Planes

Vichy, May 20 —(AP)— The Vichy government's Air Minister Gen. Jean-Marie Bergeret, arrived in Beirut last night to organize anti-aircraft defences in French-mandated Syria against British aircraft which had attacked German planes using Syrian bases, it was announced today.

The announcement said the purpose of Gen. Bergeret's trip was to "check up and perfect anti-aircraft defence measures of the Levant, in accordance with the government's orders and in conjunction with High Commissioner Henri Dentz.

He was met by Gen. Dentz and the Levant Air Commander, Gen. Jannekeyn, at Beirut airdrome. The Air Minister flew from North Africa after completing inspection tours there and at Dakar.

La Guardia Civilian Defence Head, Roosevelt Makes Appointment

Washington, May 20 — (AP)— President Roosevelt established by executive order today an office of civilian defence to be headed by Mayor Fiorello La Guardia of New York.

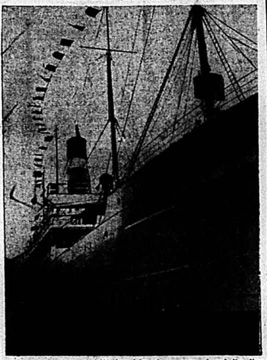
The President separated the new civilian defence agency into two general divisions. One will be a board of civilian protection with La Guardia as chairman and on it also will be representatives of the war, navy and justice departments, the Federal Security Administration, the Council of State Governments, American Municipal Association and the United States Council of Mayors. It will advise and assist in formulating civilian defence measures and attempt to provide "adequate protection of life and property" in the event of emergency.

The second division will be made up of a "volunteer participation committee" which the President said would have not more than twenty members representative of various regions and interests of the nation.

La Guardia, Mr. Roosevelt said, will draw no pay in the defence post and will retain his position as Mayor of New York City.

He will arrive in Washington tomorrow to take charge of setting up the agency designed to give every American citizen an opportunity to help on the defence effort.

ZAMZAM REPORTED SUNK



A passenger liner of 8,299 tons, the Egyptian liner Zamzam is reported to have been sunk somewhere between Pernambuco and Cape Town, en route to Alexandria. Twenty-four Canadians and 120 Americans were aboard the liner, and it is feared they have perished along with other passengers and members of the Zamzam crew. Berlin reports that all passengers and crew are safe.

Vichy Authorities Order British Consulates In Syria, Lebanon Closed

Beirut, Lebanon, May 20—(AP)—Vichy authorities have ordered British consulates in Syria and Lebanon closed and the personnel removed before the end of the week as reprisal for Royal Air Force bombing of Syrian airdromes.

The first notification was handed the British consul general at Beirut Sunday and the order was made general yesterday.

Iraq insurgents claimed today repulse of British ground forces in the Basra area and on the western Iraq front, and destruction of 30 British armored cars by the Axis-reinforced air force.

3 NEW ARRESTS AS WALTON DEATH PROBED BY POLICE

Examination of Body Leads Police to Believe Man Was Slain

DISAPPEARED MAY 5

Ottawa, May 20 (CP)—Death of Charles G. Walton of Ottawa definitely established by discovery of his bruised body in the Ottawa River, police today ushered in their 15th day of investigation in the case with announcement that three more men have been taken into custody.

About 2 a.m. Crown Attorney Raoul Mercier disclosed the new arrests had been made through combined efforts of city, Provincial and Royal Canadian Air Force Police, raising to five the number taken into custody since the 52-year-old engraving company executive disappeared May 5.

He declined to give the names of the men, but said they were being held for "further questioning" which was to continue today. An inquest also was to open.

Two other men arrested earlier in the investigation are free on bail.

Investigating officers said last night examination of Walton's body, found late yesterday by two boys within sight of the Parliament building and hundreds of motorists, had intensified their belief that the man was slain.

TWENTY WORKERS SERIOUSLY HURT IN TRUCK CRASH

On Way to Work in Hamilton When Truck Goes Out of Control and Turns Over

TAKEN TO HOSPITAL

Hamilton, May 20 (CP)—Doctors and nurses at Hamilton General Hospital had a major job on their hands today as they treated 28 Hamilton workers injured in an accident on Burlington Street when a truck overturned and spilled its passengers over the road. Five of the men were treated and discharged, but of the 23 remaining many were badly hurt.

Police believed there may have been other passengers on the truck who escaped injury but they couldn't trace them. Witnesses were unable to help the police.

The General Hospital emergency ward resembled a war zone casualty clearing station as the victims were brought in. The injured, employed by the Ontario Hydro Electric System, were enroute to their jobs at Burlington when the truck went out of control after a collision, struck a hydrant and then leaped clear of the ground in a somersault to end upside down.

Thrown Out of Control

Police said a second car going in the same direction came in contact with the front left hand wheel of the truck, throwing it out of control. A police cruiser was only a few car lengths behind the two vehicles and two officers, assisted the injured. The driver of the second vehicle was Samuel Berry, Hamilton.

The truck, owned by the Perry Coal Company was driven by Frank Farnsworth, Hamilton.

NO STATEMENT MADE IN HOUSE ON RUDOLF HESS

Prime Minister Churchill He Says Is Not At All Sure When He Can Make It

REMARKS BY M. P.'S

London, May 20.—(CP)—Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today he was not in a position to make any statement on the Hess case and he was "not at all sure when I will be".

Thus he left the public and members of parliament as well to their guessing on the reasons for the May 10 flight to Scotland of Rudolf Hess, No. 3 Nazi.

Vyvyan Adams, Conservative, had entered the questions of whether it was known if the Hess coming was "planned with the connivance and support of the German government" and whether the government would bear in mind the possibility that "the whole stunt may be the common or garden variety of plant".

James Maxton, Labor, said that two ministers during the week-end had given a full description of why Hess was in Britain "and all the rest of it". He asked Mr. Churchill to restrain them until an "authoritative" statement is made on behalf of the government.

Recent Statements by Ministers

The reference was to recent statements by Home Secretary Herbert Morrison and Labor Minister Ernest Bevin.

Mr. Churchill replied that he believed the week-end statements commanded "general approval" and added:—

"It is one thing that statements of that kind are made and another that I should, as it were, sum up on behalf of the government the result of all inquiries we are making and all the information that comes to our hands".

James Griffiths, Labor, asked Mr. Churchill to allay "public anxiety" about a British citizen's receiving a "private letter from Hess in Germany".

The Prime Minister replied there was no doubt Mr. Griffiths referred to the Duke of Hamilton, whose estate Hess was seeking when he parachuted from a Messerschmitt in Scotland, but added that this was a question which would be answered by the Air Secretary, "under whose authority the Duke is serving", as an air commodore in the Royal Air Force.

R.C.A.F. CASUALTIES

Ottawa, May 20 (CP)—The Royal Canadian Air Force today listed four men killed in flying accidents, one of them overseas, and a fifth man missing overseas in air operations.

Today's list brought dead and missing officially listed by the Royal Canadian Air Force to 256 since the war started. In addition to dead and missing one man was listed as seriously ill in Canada.

Churchill Says Military Situation Well "In Hand"

Troops Are Transported 100 Miles From Greece By Gliders And Planes

VIOLATE CONVENTION

London, May 20 (CP)— Prime Minister Churchill announced today that 1,500 German troops wearing New Zealand battle dress had landed by gliders, parachutes and troop-carriers in Crete.

To the House of Commons Mr. Churchill added quickly, however, that the military situation was in hand.

Mr. Churchill's statement followed an earlier one in which he stunned the House by telling of the German parachute invasion of the British-held island.

In his later review of the situation he said that a military hospital between Canea, the Cretian capital, and Dilemi had been captured by the parachutists but had been recaptured.

British Engage Enemy

British Imperial and Greek troops are engaging them in a stern battle, the Prime Minister said.

So far the defence force has the situation "in hand", the Prime Minister told the House of Commons; the Germans have failed in an attempt to capture a British airdrome and British and Greek troops have recaptured a military hospital which for a time had been in the hands of the 'chutists.

A fairly strong attacking group on the Canea-Malemi road has not yet "been mopped up," Mr. Churchill went on, "but other parties have been accounted for."

The Germans flew approximately 100 miles from the Greek mainland in great strength to invade Crete, last Greek territory to be held by the Anglo-Greek Allies, and one which Mr. Churchill had declared will be defended to the death.

It is held by New Zealand, British and Greek troops under the command of the New Zealander, Maj.-Gen. B. C. Freyberg, V.C.

Intense Aerial Bombardment

Then, early this morning, the 1,500 Nazi troops in New Zealand battle dress landed by glider, parachute and troop plane on the Canea-Malemi area at the western end of the island, Mr. Churchill said.

They failed, however, in their attempt to take Malemi airdrome, the Prime Minister went on, and by forenoon the British command considered it had the situation in hand. Fighting, however, continued.

The sudden invasion was regarded not only as an Axis attempt to gain a stepping stone for passage to the Near East mainland, but also as a possible dress rehearsal for an air-borne invasion of the British isles.

Successful invasion of Crete might be followed by a similar attack on British Cyprus, which lies off the Syrian coast. Thus the Germans would clear the Mediterranean sea-lane to Syria and complete the encirclement of Turkey, already hemmed in on the west by Axis-occupied islands in the Aegean.

The attack was not entirely un-

R. A. F. Blasts Nazi Airdromes In Greece And Nazi Planes In Syria

The Royal Air Force carried out destructive raids on airdromes in Greece from which the Germans are attacking Crete as well as making continued raids on German aircraft in Syria and on Bengasi harbor in Libya, the R.A.F. said today.

Heavy raids were made Sunday night and Monday morning, the communique said, and three violent explosions and a number of fires were caused at Hassani.

At Elevsis one building was hit squarely and several fires started.

The Nazis, preparing for their lightning attack with air-borne troops today, pounded airdromes in Crete yesterday, the R.A.F. said. The raiders bombed and machine-gunned a hospital at Canea and caused some casualties to the hospital staff.

Greater damage that at first reported was inflicted on German raiders over Crete last Friday, the communique said. Five additional destroyed planes have been reported.

In Libya R.A.F. units attacked Axis mechanized units, including some containing troops. Many vehicles were reported burned and others were left ditched at the roadside.

Twenty-eight explosions were caused on the pier at Bengasi in Sunday's night's raid.

U. S. HAS OFFERED TO SUPPLY EIRE

Ready to Sell or Charter Two Ships and Supply $500,000 Food for Irish Civilians

Wahington, May 20 (AP)—President Roosevelt disclosed today that United States has offered to sell or charter two ships to Eire and to supply $500,000 worth of food for the Irish civilian population.

Mr. Roosevelt said the vessels could be placed under the Irish flag and that they probably would carry much more than $500,000 in food, indicating that Eire intended to make purchases of her own.

Nothing has been done, he said, about military equipment to the Irish.

The Eire government for several weeks has been seeking Maritime Commission approval for the purchase of two ships here for transporting supplies.

TEAM OF HORSES BURNED IN FIRE

Fire of an undetermined origin destroyed a large barn, with hay, grain, sleighs and implements, on the farm of William Fisher, near Campbellford in Seymour Township.

A valuable team of horses owned by Samuel McDonald, were lost in the fire. In a vain effort to save the horses, McDonald's hands and arms were severely burned. He succeeded in getting the animals out the door of the flaming building but they became frantic, broke away and returned to their stalls.

McDonald's loss will be heavy as he carried no insurance on the horses, grain or sleighs, while Fisher's loss of twelve tons of hay and building is partly covered.

PLYWOOD BECOMING POPULAR FOR HOUSE SHEATHING

With the scarcity of lumber making it difficult at times for local construction contractors to purchase lumber with which to do building operations, the use of plywood as sheathing for residences is quite likely to become popular, according to Mr. Edgar Foster, local contractor.

The cost of applying such material is less than that of ordinary lumber as it is purchased in standard four by eight foot sheets and can be quickly nailed. The bracing effect of the three-ply material on the building is much greater than that of lumber, according to Mr. Foster.

Several owners building residences in the city this season have already adopted plywood as side sheathing for their houses. The plywood is nailed directly to the studding, covered with heavy building paper and then faced with brick or clapboards.

SHORT CIRCUIT CAUSE OF BLAZE IN TRUCK

While a mechanic of the Martin Transport Company was engaged in changing a battery in one of the company's transports at the Gordon Street garage on Monday the battery cable accidentally touched the metal framework of the truck resulting in a short-circuit fire which required the assistance of the fire department before all danger was past. No serious damage resulted to the truck, only cables and electric wiring being damaged but the fire occurred immediately beneath the gas tank and chemicals were quickly brought into play to extinguish the flames.

TOURIST CAMP MADE READY FOR SUMMER

The Belleville Tourist Camp on Dundas Street was officially opened for the summer tourist season on Monday, and with a new caretaker appointed, work of getting this popular stopping-over place into its usual fine condition commenced. Rain held operations to a minimum yesterday but today park benches are being placed about the grounds and employees of Department of Public Works are busily engaged in replacing light bulbs about the premises.

Under the new caretaker the same accommodations, courtesy and cordial welcome will be extended to passing tourists, that has for many years made the local tourist camp a popular place for the passing motorist.

RED CROSS NEEDS 12 KITCHEN CHAIRS

Red Cross officials of the Belleville branch of the society issued an appeal to residents of the city and district today for twelve kitchen chairs. The articles are needed in the new headquarters of the society on Campbell Street and will be gratefully appreciated by those in charge.

Suitable furniture for the headquarters has been a problem of the branch since they took over the Wills' property, but thus far they have arranged to secure their needs with the exception of the chairs.

Anyone having these articles of furniture and who wishes to donate them to the society, should get in touch with Mr. Howard Clarke, manager of the Citizens' Dairy, Coleman Street (Telephone 236) and he will see that the chairs are called for and delivered to Red Cross headquarters.

GOOD CATCHES FISH AT WEST LAKE OVER THE WEEKEND

Its surface practically dotted with the boats of local and visiting fishermen during the ideal weather of the week-end, the waters of West Lake, near Wellington, were productive of large hauls of pickerel and pike, George Thompson, village resident said today.

Three Oshawa fishermen landed six pickerel which averaged a little below five pounds, while fish of lesser size were hauled in by various parties.

Government edicts, prohibiting the waters of the lake to be used by commercial fishermen have been responsible, it is said, for the increase in catches.

Officials and members of the Argyll Chapter, I.O.D.E. were profuse in their expressions of appreciation to the general public when figures released last night revealed that $638 had been added to the Chapter's war coffers through the medium of Saturday's tag day.

"We are extremely grateful for the fine response, and can assure the public that every cent of the monies collected will be used for the war efforts of the chapter," officials said. "We wish to convey our sincere thanks to the public or the substantial amount collected," they added.

GETS LARGE PICKEREL NEAR GLEN ROSS

The water near the Glen Ross dam looked inviting. So the member of the local Rotary Club, who desires to remain anonymous, halted the car, and produced his fishing gear. Attaching a fresh minnow to the hook, he let go the line, and scarcely had the ripples subsided than there was a flurry of water.

A few minutes later a handsome pickerel, which tipped the scales at 6 3-4 pounds, lay gasping on the bank. The fisherman who was a member of a small party, decided this was the spot, and the result was fairly good hauls on the part of all concerned.

Choppy Seas Halt Salvage Work On Tug

Point Traverse, May 20—Choppy seas halted salvaging operations of deck winches and machinery from the sunken hull of the tug Florence which went down off Timber Island, November 14, 1933.

When the Intelligencer reporter went aboard today, work had been suspended owing to a fresh westerly wind that was blowing and had created a bad, choppy sea running.

An anchor from one of the salvaging vessels was fouled with an anchor of the sunken boat, and workmen were attempting to free it before heavy seas entangled other hawsers fastened to the tug Florence.

Kinsmen To Hold Soap Box Derby For Club's Fund

The fifth annual Belleville Kinsmen Club "Soap Box Derby", staged under the auspices of the Belleville Ontario Intelligencer, will be held in this city on the evening of June 30th, President Gardiner Duff announced at the fortnightly meeting of the local Kinsmen Club at the New Queens Hotel last evening.

Once again the proceeds from the Kinsmen Club's "Soap Box Derby" will go to the club's Eye Clinic Fund, a service club fund devoted to the welfare of the under-privileged children of the community, a work, that has been successfully carried on by the Belleville Kinsmen Club since their inception. As has been the custom for the past five years, the winner of the Kinsmen Club "Soap Box Derby" will compete in the World Championship "Soap Box Derby" to be staged at Akron, Ohio, late in August. For the past four years the winner of the Belleville Ontario Intelligencer "Kid Kar Derby" has been recognized as the Canadian champion and eligible to race at Akron. Last year the local race was won by Donald McGowan of Stirling.

The officials of the 1941 Kinsmen-Ontario Intelligencer "Soap Box Derby" were announced by President Duff last night and include Jim Fraser, general chairman, C. B. Colling, derby chairman, Orliff Lloyd, entries, Harry Rollins, track, B. Lovelace, ramp and other Kinsmen.

The speaker of the evening was Group Captain T. A. Lawrence, Commanding Officer of the R.C.A.F. base at Trenton, who gave a graphic account of the work being done by the Royal Air Force, Group Captain Lawrence having seen active service earlier in the present conflict.

The evening's entertainment included two splendidly-received piano solos by Leo Riggs, well known Belleville musician. Kin Harry Knott acted as song leader and Kin Sergt. Bill Holway of the 3-47th Battery, R.C.A., collected numerous fines as sergeant-at-arms.

V. O. N. Delegates Report Sessions Of Annual Meeting

Reports of the recent annual convention of the Order for Canada held in Ottawa featured the meeting Monday evening, of the Victorian Order of Nurses when the delegates, Mr. Taylor Franklin, president and Mrs. F. B. Foley brought to the members impressions of the very educational sessions they attended.

Mrs. Foley in her report told of the items which went to make up the splendid convention program, the address by such a distinguished medical authority as Dr. Harry Ebbs, of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, the presence of Her Royal Highness Princess Alice, Honorary Patroness of the organization, the address by the Hon. Herbert A. Bruce, M.D., and the entertainment which made the convention so delightful. Mr. Franklin gave a resume of the address by Dr. Bruce, a most enlightening treatise on the development of medical science.

Miss Soutar in her report for the months of March and April of the work in the district stated there were 132 patients in March to whom 457 visits were made, while in April 109 patients received 431 visits. She reported the activities at the Well Baby Centre where the annual preschool inoculations are underway, and medical and dental examination of the children. Miss Soutar who also attended the convention gave highlights of Miss Hall's address and that of Dr. Ebbs. Miss Hall is acting Superintendent of the Order during the absence, for military duty as chief matron of the nursing services of Miss Smellie. Miss Hall's address gave an insight into the scope and progress of the work in Canada during the past year.

These reports were heard with much interest and appreciation by the members of the local committee.

RURAL PROBLEM, RURAL CHURCH, SERMON THEME

Rev. Dr. J. Semple at Bridge St. Church Speaks on Rural Life

Speaking on the plight of the primary producer and the weakness of the country church, Rev. Dr. J. Semple at Bridge United Church on Sunday evening to mark Rural Life Sunday, declared this was one of the problems of today.

He quoted the Archbishop of York's statement that "we must recover reverence for the earth and its resources, treating it no longer as the source of potential wealth to be exploited but a storehouse of divine bounty on which we utterly depend". Dr. Butterfield, an eminent authority was also quoted, "the problem of the country church is the most important aspect of the rural establishment. It touches the highest part of country life".

"Why should a city minister and church be concerned with the problem of the rural church and rural life generally?" asked Dr. Semple. He answered "the rural church and the rural life problems are very real in the United Church. Two thirds of the congregations of our church are rural or semi-rural".

The minister said that the farm problem is the most serious problem within Canada. Agriculture is seen as being relegated to the background by mass production, large cities, great corporations and the overpowering competitive commercialism of today. He added that it was necessary that the farmer be recognized as the skilled workman and self-respecting citizen and on an equal footing with those engaged in other occupations.

Farmers' Income

He quoted figures to the effect that the farmers in Canada received 17.8 per cent of the national income in 1926, only one half to which they were entitled by their numbers. In 1940 the farmers received 11 per cent of the national income in Canada, one third of the national wealth to which they are entitled.

Dr. Semple also quoted average income for farms for the years as follows, 1926—$1,000; 1930—$546; 1931—$304; 1932—$196; 1940—$700 with a net average of $466.

With the war has come an additional problem. In the last war costs rose for all groups very much on the same level and the farm group with the others. At this time it is contended that there is a handicap on the prices of agricultural products. The cost of farm labor and supplies are rising. It is said that the price of farm products is below cost.

Dr. Semple challenged any complaint which would say the farmer's trouble was mainly his inefficiency. "Say ten per cent of the farmers are doing well and ten per cent rather badly. It is not these I am dealing with but I am thinking of the other 80 per cent of those who feed the world. If we transferred all the city folk to the farms and the farmers to the city we should still have the problem."

Farmers Efficient

The minister spoke of the high standard of the farmers. "They are just as efficient as the most efficient persons I have found in other departments of life."

Dr. Semple stated that at some time in the near future he would show what was being done to meet this situation in Canada.

Many Churches

Dr. Semple then turned to "the weakness of the country church." He quoted a statement that "the chief cause of its invalidism is because of its divided state," and said "there are too many churches in Ontario at the present time. I think of all the churches in Canada, we have 64 different sects in this province." Then Dr. Semple added that he had made a trip west last summer and in a town of about 200 persons, he counted from the train the spires of twelve churches. He said one could go to villages in this section and find a great many churches. In another section he said: "I could hardly see the rest of the place for the churches." He made reference to those who felt "they must have a church on the same corner as their fathers had about fifty years ago, even if it contained only twenty members."

There are three types of rural churches, the superfluous, the vital and useful and those that really require aid to do their work. He spoke of the numerous calls for ministers but "there are none to send." We have the countryside full of churches and ministers "while now 33 churches go vacant in Saskatchewan."

Great Ministers from Rural Charges

It had been stated that "great ministers have come from the country churches. Some of the greatest sermons have come from the country churches." He mentioned Rev. Dr. James Henderson who had been stationed at Port Stewart as his first charge and Rev. William Sparling. These churches still talk about these men.

One of the complaints made was many communities allow their churches to become unkempt and unattractive. All around them are new buildings, new schools, improved roads, but only they remain unchanged, the old church. Oh, drive through the country and see so many little churches devoid of beauty, when the most beautiful place should be the church.

Service for Mankind

"What is the rural church going to do?" he asked. It must become a friendly church and look after the people. The church that fails to do so is doomed to failure. Dr. Semple held in high regard the work of the Sunday School as the ally of the church and for the young to miss this training would mean they miss something of the greatest importance. He pointed to the serious decline in the number of those who attended the Sunday Schools in the United Church of Canada. He went on: "Lots of people think that the responsibility rests upon the parents. But the whole story is not told by the indifference of the parents. Some of the responsibility rests with some teachers and superintendents," he claimed. "One third of the people of a church should be young people. Today there are seventeen millions in the United States who are not receiving any religious education. It is a challenge to teachers to serve. The duty of ministering to young people should be the job of every adult in the United Church of Canada," the minister stated.

MEMORIAL PARK TO BE BEAUTIFUL

Horticultural Society Proposal Accepted by Parks Board at Meeting

Plans to beautify Memorial Park in Belleville were proposed to the City Parks Board by a deputation representing the Belleville Horticultural Society at the fortnightly meeting of the Parks Commission held last night in the City Hall.

Under the proposed plan, tendered by the members of the Horticultural Society, an 18-foot cinder path is proposed to be laid from the south intersection of Station Street and Cannifton Road, running northerly to the present site of the Cenotaph, where the proposed path would branch out and completely encircle the War Memorial. Blue prints of the proposed improvements were presented to the Parks Board for consideration.

"It is estimated the cost of such a path would be in the neighborhood of $150.00 and what we would like is to have the Parks Board assist us in financing this project, as we feel it would do much to beautify Memorial Park," urged John "Cap" Watson spokesman for the Horticultural Society, as he later asked for $75.00 as the Board's contribution.

To Plant Evergreens

The Horticultural Society also asked permission to plant beds of evergreen bushes at the two northern entrances to Memorial Park and also along Cannifton Road. "I might add we propose further plans of beautification of this park another year, but ask permission for these two proposals as an advance in the matter," concluded Mr. Watson.

Permission to plant the evergreen bushes was granted, while a delegation consisting of Chairman W. A. Woodley and Commissioners O. A. Pinkston, C. J. Symons and Mayor Thompson will visit Memorial Park regarding the 18-foot cinder path. "It seems to me an 18-foot path is a pretty wide roadway," remarked Chairman Woodley.

Fair Dates Granted

The second deputation heard by the Parks Board was from the Belleville Agricultural Society seeking the use of the Exhibition Park for the Fair on Sept. 8th, 9th and 10th of this year.

"What days do these dates fall on?" asked Commissioner C. B. Colling.

"Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday," replied E. E. Bonter, Past President of the Belleville Fair. The request was granted. When the Fair deputation asked the Parks Board for financial assistance in the meeting of an additional cost in the erection of the new cattle sheds however, considerable discussion was heard before His Worship, Mayor Thompson, proposed the Board vote fifty percent of the additional cost, which amounted to $250.00 in all, be paid to the Fair Board.

"I'll support that if the Fair Board will pay the rental for last year's use of the Fair Grounds," stated Chairman Woodley and later Commissioner C. J. Symons assured the Board this matter was being adjusted.

All accounts were passed and ten new picnic tables ordered, five of which are to be placed on Riverside Park and the others distributed at Memorial and Victoria Parks.

Granted Use of Park

The Belleville Victory Loan committee was granted the use of the Exhibition Park for their forthcoming campaign on June 1st and 9th, during which a mammoth demonstration will be held at the Fair Grounds. The Bay of Quinte group of the C.O.S.S.A. was granted the use of the track and field for a field day of Interscholastic sports on May 31st. Douglas Palmer, Belleville, was named Life Guard at Victoria Park for the coming summer months.

Commissioner A. B. Baird told the Board there was considerable work to be done at Victoria Park before the park could be opened to the public. "The swimming pool is badly in need of repairs, as are the steps leading onto the swimming raft at the south end of the park," revealed Mr. Baird who was given power to complete such repairs without delay. Benches will be repaired and painted brighter colors in order to add to the beauty of city parks.

Last night's meeting lasted three hours, the longest meeting of the Board this year with Chairman W. A. Woodley, Mayor Thompson, C. J. Symons, C. B. Colling, M. J. Callaghan, A. B. Baird and O. A. Pinkston all being present to complete the Board.

CITY FLOWER BEDS DESTROYED

Citizens Complain of Wanton Destruction of Tulips and Other Flowers

"What is the use trying to beautify our city and make our homes look presentable by planting flowers when persons continue to wilfully destroy them? When I arose this morning I found that over half of the tulips in my front flower bed had been picked during the night and this thing is getting to be discouraging to lovers of flowers, who are willing to spend their time and money in attempting to beautify Belleville," stated a citizen over the telephone as he called The Ontario Intelligencer to complain about the wholesale destruction and stealing of tulips in Belleville. Another Alexander St. resident voiced a similar complaint yesterday.

During the progress of last night's Parks Board meeting at the City Hall, Commissioner C. J. Symons, chairman of the horticultural branch of the board, reported that practically all of the tulips planted at Corby Park had been stolen over the week-end.

"We had a splendid display of spring flowers at Corby Park and the tulips were a thing of beauty. I realize it is next to impossible to apprehend these culprits and make an example of them, but in the name of common decency couldn't an appeal to the residents of the city be made in an effort to curb this practice? After all these flowers are placed on public parks for the express purpose of the beautification of the city and citizens should take as much pride in their preservation as any member of this board," suggested Commissioner Symons in an appeal to the general public.

Board Defers Vote On Principalship To Wednesday May 28

Taking further time to see if it is possible to reach something like an unanimous decision on the motion to revoke a previous motion of the Board and to have Mr. P. C. MacLaurin, remain in the principalship of the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School, and to avoid as some foresaw, a split in the Board on the vote, members of the Board of Education late Monday afternoon left over consideration of the motion until the evening of Wednesday, May 28. The entire Board was present.

Board Chairman H. B. Fetterly read the motion at the special meeting which opened at five-fifteen o'clock. This was the motion notice of which was given last Friday night on motion of Rev. W. J. Walker, seconded by Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne.

The Motion

"That the motion with respect to Mr. P. C. MacLaurin's principalship made on April 28th., be revoked and that Mr. P. C. MacLaurin remain as principal of the Collegiate and Vocational School for the next year on probation and satisfactory until he has completed the years necessary for him to gain the retiring allowance, his term of service to be subject to the jurisdiction of the Board of Education and his complete co-operation with the Board".

During the course of the debate there were lulls when members of Board were waiting for other expressions of opinion. The meeting moved very leisurely.

Sees Board Split Open By Vote

Trustee Harold Legate, first to speak, declared his belief that a vote at the present time would see the Board split open. "I do not think we should find that sort of solution", he commented. There are different steps the Board can take, it can leave Mr. MacLaurin in charge. There are quite a few difficulties in the way. If we bring in a new principal they are there too".

It might be that the staff and the students would not co-operate with him (a new principal). It would take six months to overcome this.

Mr. Legate said if Mr. MacLaurin is left as principal he will be able to count on one hundred per cent co-operation of the teachers and he thought one hundred per cent of the students. Mr. MacLaurin would no doubt be quite satisfactory to the teachers and students.

"But I am not satisfied that he will be satisfactory to the board as a whole", he commented.

"What I have in mind is if it is possible to arrive at such a solution as would be unanimous, it will be well to do so."

Referring to the present motion, Mr. Legate said that the Rev. W. J. Walker apparently thought that the motion on the books (that of April 28th) secured results so far-reaching that he can safely withdraw or revoke it. Quite a few members of the Board do not agree with that, he stated.

A Committee Suggested

Mr. Legate expressed the opinion that if Mr. MacLaurin stay, Mr. Walker should accept a little more responsibility than anyone else. "I think if anyone should work with Mr. Walker it is Mr. Crosby. He has good sound sense, that is what we need on this Board. I think they would be a good committee to meet Mr. MacLaurin once a week. I don't know whether either of these gentlemen— they have sacrificed three or four months on this question—would be willing to spend a couple of hours a week in this.

"There seems no other way. If a new principal comes or Mr. MacLaurin stays, that principal is entitled to the whole support of this Board. I would not think of asking anyone to decide that today but I would like it thought over and see what you think about it".

Rev. Mr. Walker pointed out the urgency of decision. "The matter has to be settled in a few days one way or other. If you arrive at a negative decision you will leave very little time to make a choice," he said. "Teachers elsewhere are under contract. If you thought it necessary to appoint a principal in the next few days you would have to interview him in his locality.

Urges Against Delay

"I personally think it is in the wisest course to accept this motion as I have proposed it. If you delay longer than a week there is a possibility you would not make a wise choice or you may not get a choice" if the board decided to appoint a new principal. "There is the prospect of a negative decision, it might be that Mr. MacLaurin would stay as teacher and we might have to appoint a member of the staff as interim principal.

"He (Mr. MacLaurin) has come before us with an apology. He admits he has erred? We cannot do better, I believe that has been suggested in the motion."

As the chairman rose to speak, he asked Mr. McGuire to take the chair.

Chairman Speaks

Mr. Fetterly declared, "I cannot consider myself responsible for this situation. I think every member of the board is to—not blame—call it what you like—but each one has been as responsible as I have. I have never had occasion to have an argument with Mr. MacLaurin, the Board settled it. Through the committee it was shown that Mr. MacLaurin did not understand conditions but I did. He became very much annoyed. That was the only time in my life that there has ever been an argument with Mr. MacLaurin. I have had a great deal thrown at me and have said nothing. I kept my mouth shut and took it because I thought the interest of the school demanded it.

"I have never been afraid to take my political life in my hands. I have not found it necessary to retract. To step down from the position of chairman would be an admission that I had been in the wrong and I have not. I assure you there will be no obstacles I will place in Mr. MacLaurin's way."

Mr. Fetterly continued: "Mr. MacLaurin came to this board with an apology. But when did he come? after he had done everything possible, what did he do? He went to Toronto to the Department of Education.

Suggestions

"I think before we take him back, we should do something about it. That was why I made that 'ridiculous' suggestion about probation to the end of June. What I wanted was to have Mr MacLaurin put on the table in the next few weeks plans as to what he is going to do about the examination system, and what he is going to do with the teachers. Is he going to have a conference with them once a week? I think these are the least we should require."

Mr. Fetterly said that as far as he was concerned as chairman, he would do all he could to help him organise the school. That is all he could do, he stated.

Refers to 'Technicality'

Steps which Mr. MacLaurin had taken to correct the situation at the school were referred to by Rev. A. B. Payne. A delegation was sent to him to inquire of certain things and to set before him a choice whether he would carry on as teacher and give up the principalship or carry on as principal alone.

Mr. Payne remarked: "The Board was honest in its request and so sent this delegation. The committee came back and reported to the Board and the Board sent it back to accept the challenge of Mr. MacLaurin that he would give up teaching and remain principal. Since then to my knowledge the only infraction was that Mr. MacLaurin was in his classrooms, not in his office and he told u. afterwards he was examining examination papers—if you call that teaching."

Mr. Payne: "Teachers' Federation members told me that any principal who would not have gone over the examination papers would have been remiss in his duty.

Mr. Legate said he understood that Mr. MacLaurin was to have his classes rearranged.

Mr. Payne declared that it was a fact that the Board had a policy which was being carried out by this motion. There was only the technicality about the examination of the examination papers. The members of the Teachers' Federation said that such work was not considered teaching.

To Mr. Legate Mr. Payne replied that rearrangements had been made as to classes.

Mr. Payne expressed the view that the suggestions mentioned should have been put to the committee and dealt with by them in the meeting with Mr. MacLaurin and the committee could have judged.

Board Acted in Good Faith

Mr. Legate's suggestion of a sort of liaison committee to meet the Principal and transmit the views of the Board to him was thought a good one by Mr. Payne. Again Mr. Payne pointed out that the Board had acted in good faith. If there was anything in dispute it was the technicality of the examination of the examination papers.

Col. Geen asked: "You believe it only a technicality that Mr. MacLaurin was teaching science?"

Mr. Payne: "I understand that Mr. MacLaurin had not been teaching science."

Mr. Walker: "No, Mr. MacLaurin said in answer to a question, he had been teaching, then he said he had been, examining examination papers."

Clear Apology

Mr. Payne referred to Mr. MacLaurin's letter and said: "You could not get a clearer admission of fault or a more clearcut offer of apology and promise of change."

Mr. Payne read the letter and came to the words "I erred". Mr. Payne said the principal did not say "if".

"After all Mr. MacLaurin is only human. He has erred and offers apology. Let us bear in mind we have a policy and let us be sure we have very good grounds before we make a change."

Col. Geen said he believed Mr. Fetterly's suggestions should be gone into and he did not see why discussion could not be suspended until a further date.

The question was asked how long would be needed and Mr. Geen remarked "a couple of weeks at least."

Mr. Frank Cushing concurred with the statements of Messrs. Walker and Payne and noted that "I for one appreciate the suggestions of the chairman. For the third time at a meeting I state that it will take possibly a year before we have a system developed that will please the majority of the board.

"I disagree with the opinions some of you hold regarding the principal and chairman co-operating. I think it is possible to draw upon the wealth of experience of the chairman to organize the school on a most satisfactory basis."

Some criticism has been directed against a number of former Boards, Mr. Cushing thought that members of these Boards were just as courageous as members of the 1941 Board, and that they had done their duty with as much judgment.

"I feel we should not delay the matter and should go as far as we can. If it should develop that some other course must be taken we should have ample time to formulate some other policy."

"I do not believe all of us have had sufficient time to clarify our minds. It is therefore my opinion that this meeting should adjourn for a week or ten days and that then a decision be made. I think it would be most distressing if we are not unanimous. If we retain Mr. MacLaurin as principal I want every man on this Board to be agreeable."

In Mr. B. C. Sisler's view the board was at a crisis and the influences of the decision about to be made would be felt it might be for ten years to come. He added, "With doubts in my mind, I cannot be fair to Mr. MacLaurin, the Board or myself if we vote now."

Rev. Mr. Payne expressed the view that unanimity seemed impossible. His remarks were: "If you adjourn this meeting with the idea that you are going to be unanimous, you are mistaken. If it is just a question as to whether we could all be of the same opinion, it would be very nice, but from the remarks I have heard here I judge that it is impossible."

Decision to adjourn for nine days was then reached.

Picton and District

Picton, May 20 (Special)—Owing to the very bad condition of Highway No. 14 between Belleville and Picton, the Ontario Department of Highways is being asked to have the entire highway rebuilt. The greater part of the highway is badly damaged as a result of heaving and it is felt that with the increased traffic due to the airports at Mountain View and Picton that the road should be rebuilt. The road is an old one and each year has been badly damaged and it is felt that rebuilding would prove economical in the end.

At a special meeting of Prince Edward County Council, a committee was appointed to go to Toronto this week to interview Hon. Mr. McQuesten. This committee consists of Warden Dwight Reynolds, Reeve Ed. B. Purtelle and Deputy Reeve Jack Welsh, also Bert Pearsall and Howard Leavens representing the town and Bloomfield.

The same highway was the topic of a resolution passed at the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce.

The Chamber also considered the naming of Highway No. 33 which runs from Kingston to Trenton, via Glenora, Picton, Bloomfield, Wellington and Consecon. The Governor Simcoe Branch of the United Empire Loyalist Association, had asked local support for the suggestion that this scenic highway be named the U.E.L. Highway as it passes through the district where the Loyalists first landed on the Bay of Quinte shores.

Recent Rains Beneficial

Recent rains have proved very beneficial, farmers state. Growth is very rapid and the ground which was hard for cultivation is now in good condition. Warmer weather would be appreciated following the showers.

The May meeting of Picton War Emergency Committee was held on Monday with reports of the work showing that there had been no slackening up of the work despite the busy season. Mrs. E. L. Bronskill, wool convener, reported knitted articles this month as follows: 113 pairs of socks, 2 pairs of mitts, 4 pairs seaman's socks, 4 helmets, 3 pairs mitts, 4 seaman's sweaters and 10 other articles. Sewing done at the work rooms included 12 baby articles, 2 quilts, 26 jersey dresses, and 6 other articles of clothing. Plans were made to make another big shipment to Red Cross headquarters.

The Committee decided to purchase one thousand Victory bags in connection with the salvage campaign which they are sponsoring. L. B. Calnan, who is conducting the campaign, told of a trip to Brantford where Victory bags are used and it was found there that this made for regular saving of salvage materials. These are placed in the homes and regular collections made.

Musical Festivals Held

The annual Music Festival by the schools of Prince Edward County was held in the United Church here Friday evening with 1220 present. Carl Reid, president of the Prince Edward Teachers' Institute was chairman. Music instructors whose schools gave numbers were Miss Velma Vandewater, Miss Muriel Bishop, F. E. Walden and C. H. Simpson. In addition to the individual numbers, there were several patriotic selections by the massed choirs and these were particularly well done. C. Brethour, supervisqr of music in Toronto schools, was adjudicator, and had words of praise for the program given.

Gnr. Knudsen of Toronto, formerly of Denmark, delighted a capacity crowd at Picton Baptist Church on Sunday evening. He has a very fine tenor voice and gave many numbers.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Wells, Stirling, visited Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Bowerman over the week end.

Urges Prevention Of Accidents With Fireworks

Chief Constable Bain Asks All Parents and Teachers to Co-operate With Police on May 24th

Trenton, May 20 (Special)—Chief Constable William Bain urged all teachers and parents to aid the police in preventing any accidents with firecrackers on May 24th. The Chief points out that the teachers and parents can do a great deal to warn the children against the hazards of firecrackers.

In a letter to the principals of all the schools, Chief Bain asked the full co-operation of the teachers in advising the pupils of "the greatest necessity for using every care and precaution to prevent fires in the Town of Trenton."

"Lighting firecrackers is a sport that the children indulge in, without any thought or consideration for the damage that might result in the indiscriminate use of the same. Many disastrous fires in Trenton have been started by firecrackers."

"Our factories and homes are more vital to us than they have ever been," he said, "as we are in a life and death struggle with our enemies—and it is most essential that we take every precaution to conserve our resources.

"I therefore solicit your aid and assistance in warning the children under your jurisdiction the necessity for using the greatest care, as above outlined," said Chief Bain.

Ever thinking of the war and the effort of his fellow citizens in this war, the Chief Constable suggested to the teachers and parents that they urge the children to spend their money on War Saving Stamps instead of on firecrackers. "Only by doing things like this can we help the government to prosecute the war to a successful termination.

IRAQ REBELS SAY VOLUNTEERS AID

Claim Forces Swelled by Volunteers From Soviet Russia, Afghanistan and Iran

Ankara, May 20. — (AP) — Iraq rebels sources said today the ranks of their Axis-aided forces were being swelled by volunteers from Soviet Russia, Afghanistan and Iran (Persia).

These informants claimed that among the Soviet volunteers were pilots, aviation technicians, tank drivers and mechanics.

(Germans in Istanbul said Sunday that Russian volunteers were in Iraq, although a previous statement by Tass, Soviet News Agency, described as "fabrications' Iraq newspaper reports that Russian pilots were joining the Iraq air force.)

"We are unprepared for the struggle alone but help is coming rapidly", Iraqis here said.

They declined to discuss the extent of German aviation help. German-made planes being flown to Iraq, they contended, were bought a year ago.

The possibility of Russian aid for the Iraq revolt was discussed at an hours' conference yesterday between Soviet Ambassador Vinogradov and Iraq Minister Kamil Djailani at the Iraq Legation. Results of the meeting were not disclosed.

Insurgents Make Claim

Beirut, Lebanon, May 20—(AP)—The Iraq insurgents claimed today repulse of British ground forces in the Basra area and on the western Iraq front and destruction of thirty British armored cars by the Axis-reinforced air force.

(British advices said the Basra area was quiet and that in the north British forces advanced fifteen miles in the direction of Baghdad, crossing the Euphrates.)

A communique received here claimed two British gunboats bombarding Iraq positions from the Persian Gulf were driven off and one damaged by Iraq artillery.

SAYS LEASE-LEND AID REACHES U.K.

Senator Barkley Says He Does Not Think Conditions Are Acute

By W. B. ARDERY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, May 20 —(AP)— Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky, the Administration leader, said today that lease-lend war equipment "seems to be reaching Great Britain satisfactorily."

Barring a change in the situation he added, it was unlikely that the government would take any new "affirmative steps" to see that the goods are delivered.

"Of course," Barkley told reporters, "the situation could change completely over a weekend. Right now, however, indications are that the goods are getting across and conditions are not acute."

Barkley Answers Questions

Barkley made his statement in response to questions as to possible use of convoys. He and other legislative leaders discussed the foreign situation with President Roosevelt yesterday.

Barkley said the government would keep a close watch on the progress of Vichy-Nazi "collaboration," and added that "of course it would be necessary for us to take some action if Germany sought to establish herself on Martinique or other French possessions in this hemisphere."

He said that although the original armistice terms between France France and Germany had prevented Nazi control of the western hemisphere possession, this arrangement might be superseded by the new "collaboration" agreement.

R. A. F. CONTINUES DAILY BOMBING OF SYRIAN BASES

Determined Drive Being Made to Smash Nazi Planes en Route to Iraq

FOOD SHORT IN SYRIA

Damascus, Syria, May 20—(AP)—Royal Air Force has settled down to almost daily bombing of Syrian airports and other military targets in this French mandate, combining these with pamphlet propaganda raids, it appeared today.

(The dispatch, sent from Damascus just before noon, indicated, without saying specifically, that the R.A.F. was raiding again today. The British attacks started last Thursday or Friday, when it was announced in London that Syrian Airdromes were being used by Nazi planes en route to Iraq.)

Syria's domestic situation is complicated by a food problem. Wheat stores have decreased so much the mandate government has ordered a mixture of maize and barley.

The harvest is near, however, and the crop seems abundant. Measures were taken to protect the prospective supplies by banning extraordinary private accumulations of grain.

Naval College, Royal College, Of Surgeons Hit

London, May 20 (CP)—The Royal Naval College at Greenwich and the Royal College of Surgeons in London were among places damaged in recent air raids, it was permitted to be announced today.

Valuable museum specimens were lost when the Royal College of Surgeons, twice slightly damaged in early raids, was hit by high explosive and incendiary bombs.

The bulk of the famous Hunterian collection made by Dr. John Hunter, known as the founder of modern surgery, was buried under a pile of fire-swept debris. The collection was bought by the government for 15,000 pounds two years after his death in 1793.

Another landmark destroyed was an ancient house at 10 Nevills Courts, just behind Fleet Street. It was believed to date back to 1664 and generally was considered the oldest dwelling in London.

Charges Canadians Do Not Realize Peril Of Position

Purvis States Nazis Would Attack Early if Britain Fell

Montreal, May 20 (CP)—Right Hon. Arthur B. Purvis, chairman of the British Supply Council of North America, warned Monday that should Britain fall it would be but a few weeks before Canada would feel the threat of enemy attack.

"Obviously our own peril, for peril it is, is but partially appreciated," Mr. Purvis told an audience of 1,500 at a Victory Loan luncheon.

"Were England to fall, the pincers movement would begin once again, this time to close on North America," he said. "And, with the Atlantic Ocean a broad and easy highway for the attacker, Eastern Canada and South and Central America would be the aim of the pincer points. Meantime, Japan would fall upon our backs."

Some, added Mr. Purvis, may call such reasoning "improbable, fantastic." So thought many European nations now in bondage.

Without weapons there is no security against bombers once bases are secured. The enemy has bombers. Were it not for the British fleet he would have the bases today. And nothing could be done to stop him. Once again would go out the "frantic but ineffectual" appeals for help.

Fortunately, Britain is strong and she will grow stronger. "But still she must go many months more before a real preponderance of sea, air and land weapons will ensure the striking force necessary to handcuff this new brutal German attack."

If assured of an "all-out" effort of this continent, said Mr. Purvis, Britain can be relied upon to hold.

"Already steps are being taken to integrate the weapon production facilities of the United States and Canada. The productive resources of the United Kingdom, combined with those of North America, can swamp the enemy. By her $7,000-000,000 lease-lend plan the United States Congress has shown where it stands."

The $600,000,000 Victory Loan must be a success for the evidence that it will provide that Canada that Canada pq(b0 ,Vee knows the gravity of its position, of that of the Empire and of democracy itself," he said.

CHURCHILL SAYS

expected. Night after night, the R.A.F. had been bombing concentrations of German planes on southern Greek airdromes, and the Germans, in turn, had been stepping up their attacks on Crete.

Coming at the end of a brief review of British operations in the Middle East, Mr. Churchill electrified the House with his statement on Crete. None of his staff knew he intended to make the extemporary remarks.

Makes No Peroration

He did not trouble about peroration but sat down after the speech, the first part of which treated the House to lighthearted and witty phrases.

Observers saw in Mr. Churchill's switch from his lighthearted review of fighting in the Salum area and Ethiopia to a grave outline of the Crete situation as indication that the government regarded the parachute attack as a major German thrust towards Syrian and Iraq airdromes.

German occupation of Crete would enable the Axis partners to shelter water-borne supplies to Syria and Iraq behind the Island and amass near east mainland equipment for a drive on Suez.

"Fought exclusively between British and German troops", the Prime Minister regarded recent operations in the Salum area particularly important because "for more than the past six weeks the Germans have been proclaiming they would shortly be in Suez".

House Roars With Laughter

The House roared with laughter when he added:-

"It has not been found worthwhile, I suppose, to maintain Italian troops at the end of such a long and precarious line of communication".

It should hearten Britons, Mr. Churchill said, "to see we have retained strong offensive power and that fighting is being maintained at any rate on even terms in advanced areas of approaches to Egypt".

Organized Resistance in E. Africa Ends

The Prime Minister said that the surrender of the Duke of Aosta and his troops on Amba Alagi had brought an end to organized resistance in East Africa. He added that fighting would probably continue for some time in the south as mopping up operations proceed.

He revealed that the senior officer after Lt.-Gen. Alan Cunningham in the Ethiopian campaign has been Maj.-Gen. William Platt, who had command of the troops which marched from the Sudan.

Extraordinary British Competence

Mr. Churchill said the campaign had been accomplished by extraordinary competence in warfare and its speed had been "beyond anything that was hoped for."

He said that the South African army had played a distinguished part in the campaign and was now moving north to the Mediterranean.

The Prime Minister revealed that two divisions from India participated in the Ethiopian fighting and had displayed "extraordinary military qualities."

"Their dash and ardor, their faithful endurance of all hardships has won them the regard of their British comrades," he said. "Sometimes we have even seen cases when not a single British officer remained and the battalion has conducted itself in the most effective manner."

He revealed that 500 Germans were taken prisoner in the fighting on the Libyan-Egyptian frontier, while the Germans claimed 100 British prisoners. German losses in equipment were as heavy as or heavier than Britain's.

British armored and motorized forces, numbering several brigades, advanced 30 miles in the fighting, Mr. Churchill said, taking Salum, Hellfire Pass and Fort Capuzzo. A German counter-attack forced the British units to give up Fort Capuzzo, however and necessitated a withdrawal from a position well round the enemy's flank that had been achieved by an armored brigade.

New York, —(CP)— In landing troops in Crete disguised in New Zealand uniforms, the Germans today violated the Hague Convention, which stipulated that "improper use of . . , the enemy's uniform" is prohibited.

THEY WILL SURVIVE

There will always be a Westminster Abbey, a St. Paul's, a Temple and a House of Commons Chamber, says the New York Times. When peace comes they will be restored and in essence they will be the same. The explanation is this, "The atmosphere of historic continuity in a public monument does not depend on the original amount of brick and stone that lives through the ages. The things that count are the original site and the historic associations."

The Times shows that through the ages very few really ancient churches have come down unaltered from the times of the builder and the work of the "restorer" is everywhere. Guidebooks point out that the western towers of Westminster Abbey go back only to the eighteenth century and the facade of the north transept was rebuilt in 1890. Westminster Hall is really ancient, going back almost to the time of William the Conqueror, but its roof is from the days of Richard II, more than five hundred years later. And Richard II's original west facade was restored or rebuilt in 1882.

One has to go back only to 1914-1918 to recall the fate of the Cathedral at Rheims, battered by fragments of Hun shells in the first Great War. During the years following 1918 the church was restored, though it still shows the evidences of restoration. Today as one thinks of Joan of Arc, the heroic maiden leader of the French armies many centuries ago, the mind turns to Rheims and its cathedral, where the Dauphin was crowned as the consequence of her victories.

As long as there is a record, as long as there is public memory, as long as the names of these churches exist, they will survive for so much of human greatness and idealism is associated with "the site and the historic associations" as the newspaper points out.

HITLER CANNOT HAVE HIS WAY

There are certain facts about the rules of conduct of Adolf Hitler that we must keep in mind, because they are so utterly opposed to the rules of conduct of civilized people that we are constantly tempted to say they cannot be true. Adolf Hitler has said this: "My motto is, 'Destroy by every means! So-called international laws will not check me ..... One is either a German or a Christian. You cannot be both'."

In January, 1934, Germany concluded a treaty with Poland, by which she pledged her honor that "in no circumstances" would she "proceed to the application of force" against Poland. In September, 1938, Hitler, for the fourth or fifth time, solemnly and deliberately renounced all further territorial ambitions or designs in Europe.

In April, 1939, Hitler in a broadcast reply to Mr. Roosevelt's plea for peace, said that he knew nothing of any German "threat of arms to other nations."

Exactly four months later Germany's mechanized army swept over the Polish border, where her Fifth Column had already prepared the way, and her aeroplanes were machine-gunning women and children in Polish towns.

Dame Edith Lyttelton in War Letters from Britain, says: "Hitler has said many times that he means to exterminate the English as he is trying to do with the Poles. He can never do it with either, for he does not understand that there is a spirit that will rise again so long as one drop of the immortal blood of fighters remains."

The English and the Poles are both peace-loving peoples. They do not love fighting for its own sake, and they do not extol it as an object of national policy; but their long-suffering has a definite limit. Push them beyond a certain point and they will not merely fight, but they will go on fighting beyond all reason, fighting with a deadly persistence, a concentrated fury, that recognizes no impossible odds, that may retreat for the moment, but returns again and again, until final victory is won.

That is the thought behind Clemence Dane's poem "It is Dangerous to Wake Our Dead."

> 'They' have waked Nelson, a spirit,
> He slept sound in his bed.
> And no one had warned them, 'they' did not know, none said > how dangerous it is to wake our dead.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

THE ALWAYS FAITHFUL......

When the meeting's called to order, and you look around the room,
You're sure to see some faces that from out the shadows loom;
They are always at the meeting, and they stay until it's through.
The ones that I would mention are the Always Faithful Few.

They fill the many offices, and are always on the spot,
No matter what the weather, though it may be very hot;
It may be cold or rainy, but they are tried and true—
The ones you can rely on are the Always Faithful Few.

There are lots of worthy members who come when in the mood,
When everything's convenient they can do a lot of good;
They're a factor in the meeting, and are necessary, too—
But the ones who never fail us are the Always Faithful Few.

If it were not for these faithfuls, whose shoulders at the wheel
Keep the institutions moving, without a halt or keel;
What would be the fate of meetings, where there is so much to do?
They surely would be failures but for the Always Faithful Few.

—Anon.

Those stories told by whalers who go after the big fellows on the west coast of Canada to the effect that fellow members of their crews, swept overboard, have mysteriously disappeared, may now be believed.

Also those sceptics who placed tongue-in-cheek when told the story of Jonah and the whale can readjust their believing apparatus. For up comes Dr. E. M. Geilung, University of Chicago professor, who actually made a trip through a whale.

The big fellow, of course, was dead. "It was a pretty slimy trip," the professor remarked after he had crawled through the gullet of a descendant of Jonah's hide-out, "but there was plenty of room."

He sailed as a supercargo on many a whaling ship to gather scientific data, and has collected such facts as the sperm whale, one of the biggest animals on earth, is probably the one who accommodated Jonah. They sometimes reach eighty feet in length. A whale baby, he says, comes from an egg no larger than the human ovum, but it is twenty feet long and weighs two tons when it is born.

Anyway, it is a whale of a story.

All was serene at the Rotary Club luncheon yesterday. At the "host" table Mine Host Clare Morgan entertained six of his fellow clubmen. On a table nearby stood a handsome birthday cake, ornate, elaborate in its white trimmings. Many a furtive look was cast in its direction by the remaining members.

Suddenly it appeared as if by magic in the hands of the Sergeant-at-Arms. And that worthy gentleman, none other than the estimable Charles Spalding, suggested that the cake be formally cut and divided among the members of the club. Guests at the host table objected. Warm waxed the argument, then the S.A.M. decided that in fairness to the donor, and his guests, that it be returned to the host table.

He picked it up in his arms and strolled majestically toward the table d'honor. Suddenly there was a resounding crash. Members stared as in their amazed vision came the strange sight of a handsome birthday cake rolling crazily along the floor of the banquet hall.

It was a block of wood, all decorated for the occasion. And the only red face was that of a member who had earlier endeavored to cut the cake, but wisely refrained from imparting his knowledge when he made the discovery that it was a future Charlie McCarthy in disguise.

Now, members of the club are wondering if that handsome bird, which resembled a roast chicken done to a golden brown, and which decorated the host table, was the weather-vane from the barn of a rural resident

Three-Handed Bridge

The New Statesman

Deal the pack to three hands instead of four, so that each player receives 17 cards, the last card being left face upwards on the table. Each player discards four cards from his hand, one of which must be either an Ace or a King, unless he has no Ace or King in his hand. The twelve discarded cards are mixed face downwards on the table, and the auction then begins. The declarer receives as his dummy the one exposed card and the 12 concealed cards.

Play and scoring as in ordinary contract with two exceptions: (a) 300 is scored at once for the first game won, 400 for the rubber-game if either of the opponents is also vulnerable, 600 if neither is vulnerable; (b) if one of the defenders has not included an Ace or King among his discards when his hand contains such a card, the declarer scores 1,200 points. If the declarer has made a similar omission, his two opponents score 200 points each. These penalties are annulled if they are claimed before the play of the hand has been completed.

At the end of the rubber the player with the lowest score loses to his opponents, the respective differences between his total and each of theirs, while the player with the highest total wins the respective differences, e.g., if N scores 2,000, S.1,500, and W. 300, W. loses to N. 1,700 and to S. 1,200, S. pays to N. 500.

'Maids of All Work' Of the Royal Navy

By Admiral Sir Michael Hodges
in the London Listener

I had the honor of being placed in command of all the destroyers in home waters soon after the close of the Great War, and my task for the next two years was to reorganize the destroyer service, and to embody in its training all the lessons of that war. My first connection with destroyers was when, exactly 40 years ago, I was given command of one of the type then in existence. She rejoiced in the name of Flirt.

This particular Flirt, whose activities I was to control, was a torpedo-boat-destroyer of 300-odd tons; her gun armament consisted of two 12-pounder guns, and she carried exactly two torpedoes.

What a contrast to the modern destroyer, where, in the largest class, known as the "Tribals" on account of their names, names such as the Somali, the Tartar, the Eskimo and so on, the displacement approaches 2,000 tons. They are armed with eight 4.7 and other smaller guns, and four 21-inch torpedo tubes. With their vastly improved sea-going qualities these modern destroyers are almost in fact small light cruisers.

Then, beside the Tribals there are those destroyers whose names begin with J and K. In the J's and K's the gun armament is slightly reduced and the torpedo armament proportionately increased. Thus they have six instead of eight 4.7's, but they mount 10 torpedo tubes. Several of these destroyers have distinguished themselves in the war. Amongst them are two special cases, those of the Javelin and Kelly, where, having had the misfortune to be torpedoed during action with enemy craft and very badly damaged, they were safely brought back into port, the Javelin with her bow and her stern shattered, and the Kelly — well, let me tell you about the Kelly.

It was 10.30 p.m. one twilight evening, windless and with banks of mist forming on the surface of the North Sea. Suddenly there was a tremendous explosion as the torpedo hit her, and a sheet of flame rose level with the bridge. The Kelly lifted bodily with the force of the explosion, which blew a large hole in her side extending downwards to the keel. The foremost boiler-room was blown open to the sea, and the ship was enveloped with steam which escaped with a deafening roar. Every one in that foremost boiler-room was killed instantly, but those in the after boiler-room and the engine-room remained quietly at their posts until ordered on deck.

In a few minutes the Kelly was well down by the bows with a heavy list to starboard. It looked as though it must be only a matter of minutes before she foundered. But the captain knows his ship, and he's not going to give up hope. By flooding compartments on the opposite side he brings her on to a level keel, but with her decks awash. For 91 hours — that is for nearly four days—in tow of one of her comrades, the sea sometimes quite rough, the Kelly slowly made her way home. And don't think for a moment that the Germans left her alone—far from it. With her guns manned, her crews knee-deep in water, the Kelly beat off attack after attack by German airplanes.

The stories of the Kelly and the Javelin are a tremendous tribute to the excellent work which is put into the construction of our naval vessels by the shipyards, and no praise is too high for the personnel employed in this great national work.

I have lately been paying visits to all our shipyards, and at the one which undertook the Kelly's repairs I was shown photographs of both the interior and exterior of the vessel as she was at the time of her return, and I talked to the men who repaired her. I can therefore testify, not only to the magnificent effort of seamanship, combined with courage and determination, required to bring her home, but to the complicated task of repair which was so expeditiously carried out by the yard in question.

British shipyards are supreme, and a perfect understanding between the men who build our ships and the men who sail them makes possible such a splendid story as that of the Kelly, who, by the way, is now back at sea in full fighting trim.

History will have many tales to tell of destroyer doings in this war illustrating the many and varied jobs of work they may have to perform at any time. You would hardly expect, for instance, to find destroyers taking part in street fighting, but here's something that happened at Boulogne when our destroyers were evacuating the last of our troops. One of them, after forcing her way in, found herself under fire from a battery of field-guns in a fort on a hill above the town. The destroyer turned all her 4.7 guns on to it, and the second salvo blew down the whole side of the fort and part of the hill, sending guns and mountings rolling down the slopes.

Just at this juncture an enemy detachment of motorcyclists and a car came out of the main streets of Boulogne.

A midshipman of the Royal Naval Reserve opened fire with a pom-pom, blew the car to pieces and sent the enemy scattering in every direction.

The destroyer has been described as the "maid of all work" of the Fleet, and that is exactly what she is; the many and various duties she has to perform provide the finest training imaginable for both officers and men.

The command of a destroyer teaches an officer at an early age the quick handling of a ship, gives him self-confidence and many opportunities of showing initiative and accepting responsibility, all of which are of inestimable value to him when he comes to command the bigger units of the Fleet.

Destroyers form part of all convoy escorts. This convoy escort work entails long voyages in all sorts of weather, and you can imagine what this means to the officers and men of these little ships, in the North Atlantic, for example, during the Winter months. Think of them, for days and days on end, always wet and cold, the ship knocking about in such a way that cooking becomes almost impossible.

Life in destroyers is a hard one. Spells in harbor are very infrequent and, when they do come, very short. But all this is most cheerfully borne by these young officers and men. Destroyers are always on the go and always ready for any emergency. Should an SOS be received, the order is invariably "Send a destroyer." And how many of our merchant ships, bombed or torpedoed, with the crew taking to the boats, or still endeavoring to save their ship, have been cheered by the sight of these splendid little ships steaming at full speed to their rescue?

Their duties, as I have said before, are endless and they call for the highest form of seamanship, courage and endurance. We can never have enough of them and, like Nelson, whose cry was always for "Frigates and more frigates," our senior officers repeat the same cry. "Destroyers and more destroyers."

They are being added to our Fleets as fast as the shipyards can turn them out, and there is no lack of realization on the part of those responsible as to their value.

LIVELY LINES

By Arthur L. Burke

Dan Cupid, you know, with his arrow and bow,
Knows something of how trouble starts,
He shoots everywhere and don't seem to care,
Just who is way-laid by his darts.

As press lines relate, there's a lass in the States,
Her age is a hundred and ten,
When she starts out to chase, any male of the race,
Dan Cupid starts shooting again.

Aunt Lizzie, she's called, altogether has hauled
Nine husbands in turn to her door,
But each one has died, as the years rolled aside,
And Liz is a widow once more.

It's a fact widely known, that she can't live alone,
Her spirits would suddenly lag,
She'd die of despair, if she failed to ensnare,
And trap number ten in the bag.

She's just taken on, a boy friend named John,
A fast working lady is Liz,
Though he's eighty years old, he may wake to behold,
That dear old Aunt Lizzie is his.

Some people I know would spend all their dough,
And consider it cheap, so to speak,
They'd give all they own, if the secret were known
Of Aunt Lizzie's winning technique.

AT YOUR BEST

These are things beyond all measure:
Words of cheer.
Joys of gain and place and pleasure
Disappear.
But the pride of one befriended
While he lives is never ended.

This is influence: To brighten
Other lives,
Some one's weight of care to lighten
As he strives.
And to whisper: "Stand you to it,
Harder try and you may do it!"

Hopeful, friendly be and cheerful,
And then show it.
If you're strong in moments fearful
Some will know it.
Many more than you've suspected
By your conduct are affected.

Others learn from high example.
'Gainst disaster
They themselves have courage ample
Ills to master.
At your best! For there's no knowing
Just how far your shadow's going.

You'd Be Surprised!

THE RED SEA

The Red Sea, which has long been part of Britain's inner routes to India, is 1,450 miles long and is 7,000 feet deep in places.

Just why this great body of water was originally called the Red Sea is not known for certain.

One authority suggests that the word "red" may have been applied to it because of the color of the inhabitants in that region.

Another thinks the name was due to the great number of reddish plants growing in the water.

There is, however, a more logical theory. The land inhabited by the descendants of Esau is called Edom in the Bible. Edom literally means red, and the ruddy hue of the mountains in that region may have suggested the name.

Or possibly Esau himself was called Edom because of his reddish complexion. At any rate, the neighboring body of water came to be called The Sea of Edom or The Red Sea.

The narrowest strip of land between Asia and Africa is the Isthmus of Suez through which the Suez Canal was cut.

The question of the boundary between these two grand land divisions, however, is complicated by the fact that the Sinia peninsula and the territory north of it to the Mediterranean Sea are politically a part of Egypt.

Therefore map-makers generally include this region in the map of Africa, making the eastern boundary of Egypt rather than the Suez Canal the dividing line between the two continents.

It was not the Red Sea proper, but the narrow Gulf of Suez, that was the scene of the crossing of the Israelites under Moses in the biblical narrative.

In the Book of Exodus we are told that "Moses stretched out his hand over the sea; and the Lord caused the sea to go back by a strong east wind all that night, and made the sea dry land, and the waters were divided: and the children of Israel went into the midst of the sea upon the dry ground: and the waters were a wall unto them on their right hand, and on their left."

BLITZ BLASTED FAVORED HAUNT FOR CANADIANS

Huge Crater Marks the Spot and Visitors to London Must Find Other Ports of Call

By D. E. BURRITT

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London (CP)—Perhaps it will be no wrench to those who never mixed with the "Canadian colony" but a huge crater and a little note pencilled on a road barrier that tell the fate of "Nina's," mean that numerous Canadian servicemen must find new "club" quarters when on leave in London.

For no more will they feel their way down a dimly-lit stair to a gaudy-painted basement whose walls were lined with sketches of the important customers who lined the crowded bar.

It was there in that hidden basement, made foggy by tobacco smoke, that Canadian sailors, soldiers and airmen sat and drank sang to the gravel notes of Archy's venerable piano or danced with the hostesses amid the once-sturdy palms which now hung limply on cords around the discolored pillars.

Quaint Characters

Down there the Canadians — mostly officers — found assorted drinks and companionship of their own countrymen, to say nothing of the hostesses or "Old Liz" the buxom flower seller who peddled her blossoms and then paid the club for selling rights by spending her takings on raw gin. The customers she rewarded by singing oldtime music hall favorites.

At first Liz would protest feebly with "Oi cahnt sing dearie," But bolstered by several more neat gins provided by affable customers she would remain beside the piano long after anyone was paying attention to her cracked voice and pathetic attempts at "tap dancing."

The name of anyone who had been in the place more than once was remembered by the hostesses and Archy who would sit for eight-hour stretches pounding out requested songs and providing "theme songs" for the entry of new customers.

Honored Pictures

Airmen particularly were the favorites and the crayon-artist, with his uncut hair and brilliant tweeds, had the walls covered with portraits of D.F.C. winners or those of others whose names were well-known in the club.

Even on the almost-hallowed spot—the bar mirror—reserved for prices of liquor, was the picture of one tousled-hair Canadian D.F.C. winner. Beneath was the newspaper story of his exploits.

In such an atmosphere the Canadians would sit through many an air raid, arguing about everything in general but agreeing on at least one topic—and that was that the club was bound to "get it" some night. And they were right.

U. S. Industrialist Criticizes Regulations Forbidding Canadians To Travel Freely In His Country

"We need Canadians in the United States. We want your inspiration. You are doing a wonderful job here in Canada, and we in the U. S. A. want to know how it is being done," Frank Goodchild, president and general manager of the J. and J. Cash Company's plant in Norwalk, Connecticut, declared here yesterday.

Speaking before the Belleville Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon in the Hotel Quinte, Mr. Goodchild levelled criticism at the Canadian Government, stating that it had made a "big mistake in stoppages of visitations of Canadians to the United States."

People of the United States are not as cognizant of what is going on in Canada as they should be, he said. "It would do us good to see a nation work behind movements as big as are going on in your country. We get reports, but the press does not give us as true a picture as we could see for ourselves, or the story of it as it comes from the heart."

"We are losing out" he continued, "because we are not understanding things about Canada as we should. We want visitations in the United States and Canada needs visitations from our people south of the border."

For Better Understanding

He urged the clubmen to bend their energies to the "pulling down" of the restrictions that confine the peoples of both countries to their sides of the border." Only in that way, can we have a better mutual understanding of what we are up against" he said.

He illustrated his statement regarding the lack of United States visitors to Canada with a personal experience last summer when he journeyed from his home to Montreal. Asking the conductor of the train if it were possible to purchase or secure a seat in the pullman car, he was told he could buy the whole care for $1.90. "I was the only one in the car," he said.

Stating that the first war recorded in the Bible, that resulting from the building of Babel when confusion of tongues caused trouble, Mr. Goodchild averred that no everlasting peace can result while people in the world speak different languages.

"Peoples of the earth can never understand each other while they talk in different tongus," he said, adding the remoteness of trouble between Canada and the U. S. A. was proof of this.

Foreign Elements Trouble Makers

One of the greatest troubles in the United States today, he said, was the foreign elements who can not or will not speak the Enigish language. "Those who learn this universal tongue," he declared, "make good citizens, others are not. The elements which are responsible for the most of the trouble resulting in strikes, are usually those who cannot speak a word of English.

He read an article on Democracy, written by a Hungarian foreman in his employ, and which has been widely publicized. This, he said, was proof of what the English-speaking foreigners are doing.

"It is too bad that you Canadians cannot cross the border and make yourselves better known to your cousins in the United States," he concluded. Rotarian I. G. Hefkey introduced the speaker while J. O. Herity expressed the appreciation of the club. Local representatives of the J. and J. Cash Company were guests at the luncheon.

Due to next Monday being a public holiday, there will be no meeting of the club, President Percy McGuire announced. Two new members, Messrs Enos David and A. M. Francis were formally installed in the club during the luncheon.

CONSCRIPTION IS OLD STORY FOR ARCHIVES

Canada Had Provision for Compulsory Service in Country's Defence Nearly 300 Years Ago

By GLADYS ARNOLD

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa (CP)—Canada again is at war and is enforcing compulsory military service for defence of the Dominion but actually this power to conscript defence forces has been on the statute books since 1669. It came into being under the French regime and is fully described in documents recently acquired and which now may be seen in the public archives.

Copies of correspondence, regulations and laws governing Canada's first military history, beginning in 1651 and carrying through to the beginnings of the British Period when in 1777 it was ordained that every citizen from 20 to 60 years of age was obliged to serve in the militia of the parish in which he lived under pain of fine, are part of the 1940 report issued by Dominion Archivist Gustave Lanctot.

On June 6, 1651, Canada's first militia regulations were sent out by Governor d'Aillebous, to "Pierre Boucher, captain of the inhabitants of Three Rivers." He was told to see to it that drill took place as often as possible including target practice and to "see that each one keeps his arms in good condition and well charged with ball and shot." To ensure that the inhabitants did not sell or otherwise dispose of their arms, Capt. Boucher was further instructed to visit each home regularly and check up on the arms.

Orders from Louis

In 1669 a letter from King Louis of France instituted compulsory service. He ordered that the whole population be divided into companies and captains, lieutenants and subalterns be appointed to command them. Those easily assembled were to meet once a month in their own districts for drill in handling arms. Wrote the king! "I leave it to your judgment to assemble only those who can do it and return home in two days time in order that more time is not lost which should be devoted to their business or cultivation of their lands."

In order that those who had no money might buy arms Aubert de la Chesnaye, merchant of Quebec was commanded to sell arms to them and "take in payment good genuine wheat at the rate of 50 sous the bushel and in salt pork at the regular price."

In 1758, after the change of regime, the British government passed an act establishing and regulating the militia. "All male persons, planters, inhabitants and their servants between the ages of 16 and 60 residing in this province (Nova Scotia) shall bear arms and duly attend all musters and military exercises of their respective companies . . . three months time shall be allowed to every son after coming to 16 years and to every servant to provide themselves with arms and ammunition," the act read.

Arm Themselves

The act provided that "every enlisted soldier be provided with a musket gun or 'fuzil' not less than three feet long in the barrel, two spare flints, 12 charges of powder and ball, on penalty of 40 shillings fine . . . or one month imprisonment with hard labor for want of such arms."

Citizens were obliged to provide their own firearms and ammunition as well as serve without remuneration while residents of both town and country were obliged to billet the soldiers free of charge. Penalties for not attending military exercises included fines and imprisonment.

In 1777 Quebec came under similar military regulations.

Fishing Scenes In Canada Shown In Films At Meeting In Tweed

Tweed—Mr. Bill Lang, representing the Tourist Bureau of the Provincial Government showed several films in colour, showing scenes in Canada, particularly of fishing in Ontario, to a group of local fishermen and sports on Thursday evening at Pott's Hotel. During the past winter Mr. Lang, acting for the Provincial Legislature had toured much of the United States showing these films to large audiences, bringing to the notice of the American tourist the splendid fishing to be had in Ontario.

These films taken by Mr. Lang himself were very interesting, particularly the pictures made last summer at Moira Lake.

The Sunday School anniversary of Tweed United Church was held on Sunday morning with Dr. W. P. Fletcher of Marmora as guest speaker. There was a very large congregation and a children's choir of forty voices led in the singing. They sang two numbers, "Trees" and "Sun of My Soul" (in two parts) with Mr. S. H. Connor directing. Miss Lois Richardson presided at the organ. Dr. Fletcher gave a fine address especially suitable to the youth.

In the evening the anniversary service was held at Sulphide United Church with Dr. Fletcher as special speaker. The choir of Tweed United Church assisted in the service.

The annual school concert presented by the children of Tweed Consolidated School will be held in the Oddfellows' Community Hall on Friday, June 6th. The proceeds will be devoted to the British War Victims' Fund.

Mr. Harold Grayson who has been operator of Tweed Theatre since the opening has gone to Hamilton where he has secured a similar position.

May 26th will be observed as a holiday in Tweed since Victoria Day, May 24th, falls on Saturday.

The recruiting meeting scheduled for Tweed on Saturday evening was postponed.

On Monday, May 19th, Mr. Manley MacDonald, A.R.C.A., O.S.A., gave an exhibit of painting in the Community Hall under the auspices of St. James' Anglican Church.

Capt. Hillier H. Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Thompson of Northbrook has returned from piloting a bomber to England. He is a member of the Trans-Atlantic Airways' Crew stationed at Botwood, Newfoundland and Montreal Quebec.

Miss Mavis McGuire, M. A., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. McGuire, Tweed, has been appointed to the staff of Chatham Collegiate Institute. For the past two years she has been teaching in Blenheim High School.

The May meeting of Tweed Red Cross Branch was held in the Veterans' Hall. In the absence of the President, W. E. Tummon, the chair was occupied by Mr. S. B. Rollins. Members present: Mrs. J. C. Hayes, Mrs. M. J. Quinn, Mrs. J. J. Luffman, Mrs. F. C. Arber, Mrs. S. B. Rollins, Mrs. J. McNaught, Geo. Elwood, S. H. Connor.

The treasurer's report showed a bank balance of $84.44 with outstanding cheques and accounts payable of $156.12, leaving a net deficit of $85.46. The treasurer explained that the financial position of the Branch was due to a number of causes. In February Tweed Branch had forwarded to Red Cross Headquarters approximately $500, which included a direct contribution from Tweed of $200. Pledges made in the fall campaign were not being honored by many of the pledgers through neglect or oversight. In this connection receipts during April and May had shown an improvement, and it was felt that all pledges would be fulfilled when the urgency of the society's need was impressed upon those who were in arrears.

Following this financial report the secretary was instructed to write Thomasburg, Sulphide explaining that the $200 February contribution made to Canadian Red Cross, while forwarded by Tweed unit, was in reality a contribution from the entire Branch and suggesting that these units might desire to assume a portion of it by a remittance to the Tweed treasurer.

A committee composed of Mr. Geo. Elwood, treasurer, Mrs. J. C. Hayes and Mrs. F. C. Arber was named to approach Miss Ann Rayburn, president of the Business and Professional Women's Club, asking that the club assume the responsibility of checking the contributions and arrears of pledges to the local Red Cross unit and then waiting on those in arrears to urge that these arrears be paid.

Mrs. Hayes, Mrs. Ray Quinn and Mrs. A. C. Blakely were added to the Shipping Committee. Other members of the committee are Mrs. F. C. Arber and Mrs. S. A. McCarey.

The Shipping Committee reported a number of articles forwarded in April.

At the United Church on Sunday, May 25th, the Roll of Honour which bears the names of members and adherents of Tweed United Church who have enlisted in Canada's fighting forces will be unveiled. A message of a patriotic nature will be delivered by the pastor, Rev. H. L. Morrison.

The Daily Vacation Bible School will again be held during the first two weeks of July with Mrs. H. L. Morrison in charge.

Tweed United Church will observe the Fiftieth Anniversary of the present edifice in 1942. The church was reopened following the destruction of the former building by fire in December 1892 with Dr. John Potts preaching the sermon of dedication. Plans are underway to mark the observance in 1942. At the anniversary services in October 1941, Dr. Archer Wallace will be the anniversary preacher. He will deliver an address "England as I remember it" on Monday following anniversary Sunday.

Rev. H. L. Morrison, B.A., preached in Marmora United Church on Sunday, May 18th.

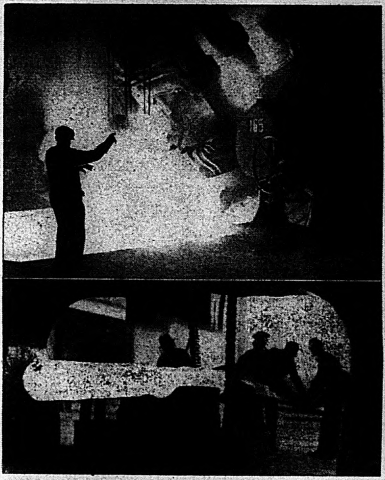
HOW CANADIAN GUNS TAKE FORM



Ten tons of scrap metal have been thrown into the huge electric furnace in a Canadian gun plant, shown in the top picture. In three hours it is reduced to molten steel at a temperature of three thousand degrees Fahrenheit. After several processes, the metal begins to take form of a Canadian gun. (Lower picture) Canadian workmen are shown operating a hammer press which is "hammering the gun to the round." These war weapons are being produced in Canadian plants in large quantities. They are just a small part of Canada's contribution to the war against Hitler. Buy Victory Bonds and keep those guns moving across the Atlantic in ever increasing numbers.

OLD SOLDIER, 100 DIED WITH PALS AS HOSPITAL HIT

Veteran Was Among 10 Killed When Night Raider Dropped His Wares on Old Chelsea

By DOUGLAS AMARON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Londoon (CP)—A German night claimed as a victim Henry Augustus Rattray, an old soldier whose only grudge was against people who hid his cheroots.

Oldest pensioner at the Royal Hospital, Chelsea, the 100-year-old former bandsman was killed with nine other veterans when a bomb levelled the infirmary where they lay with other aged patients.

Rattray's life history will never be written for even his closest cronies knew little of his early years. He joined the 24th (2nd Warwickshire) Regiment of Foot many years ago—at least 60, for in 1881 his regiment became the South Wales Borderers.

"He never talked much—he was beyond the age of being talkative," said the hospital adjutant who described Rattray as a benevolent old soldier, loved by all with whom he was associated. He came to us three years ago and in next to no time was a favorite in the wards. The only times he was obstreperous were when we wouldn't let him have his cheroots. He would smoke all we gave him and more if he could get them."

Keen Memory

Rattray, whose keen memory never failed, remained in the infirmary from the time he was admitted but until three weeks before his death was able to get up for dinner every day. He followed newspapers and discussing the war world events closely, reading the with other patients.

His big day each year was Christmas when it was his privilege, as the oldest pensioner, to make a speech at a party for the patients in his ward.

As a sergeant-bandsman he had seen little service in war but he kept his soldierly bearing to the end and his square jaw jutted out like a rock when he talked of Hitler and the Germans.

Once before death came close to this veteran but he shrugged it off as the sort of thing a soldier has to expect. Last fall a delayed action bomb landed in a flower garden underneath his window.

Awakened, he sat up in bed and cursed loudly, then rolled over and went back to sleep. He was not disturbed by the bomb which fell last month. Death was almost instantaneous.

Luxurious Peasant Clothes

By ALICE ALDEN

CLOTHES of peasant simplicity, fashioned in luxurious fabrics are a new triumph with some of our greatest designers. Valentina excels in this type of dress-making and here is an example of her genius. This dinner dress of peasant inspiration fashioned of white satin matelasse is worn by Rosalind Russell and is one of the favorites in her personal wardrobe. The gown is collarless and slit to the diaphragm at the front, lacing all the way up with narrow laces. It features three quarter length sleeves and a very full skirt.

Weddings

CUMMINGS—MILLS

A pretty wedding took place on Saturday May 17, at the Evangel Temple, Belleville, at five o'clock, when Della Gertrude, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Mills of Thomasburg, became the bride of William Harry, son of Mr. Cole Cummings and the late Mrs. Cummings of Cloyne. The ceremony was performed by Rev. E. N. O. Kulbeck.

The bride was charming in a dusty rose frock with hat to match and carrying a bouquet of roses. The young couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. William Wilkinson of Belleville. The Wedding March was played by Mrs. Arnold Reilly and Messrs. Daly Cummings and Arnold Reilly were ushers.

Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Daly Cummings of Point Anne. There were about twenty-five guests present at the table which was beautifully decorated with pink and white streamers and spring flowers. The bride and groom received many gifts.

Baptist Young People Hold Sectional Rally In Sidney Twp. Church

Baptist young people representing Belleville, Campbellford, Sidney and Peterboro unions held their sectional spring rally for the Belleville district in the Sidney Baptist Church on Monday night.

The Rev. W. C. Pearce, of Brighton, principal speaker, referring to a famous quotation of His Majesty King George, "We are all in the front line now," pointed out to the young people that the same thing could be said about the work of the church. "We all have something to do," reiterated the speaker. "We are all in the front line for Christ, not merely the minister, the deacons, teachers and officers. Each has a place to fill in God's work. Find your particular niche, the part you are best fitted for, then do your job with all your might. Let nothing swerve you from your path. Do not be discouraged if a certain task seems too hard but remember always that God will help you. God is always for you, never against you, so face your task confidently in the knowledge that it is you and Him together for the work." Mr. Pearce was introduced by the Rev. H. Bryant, pastor of the Campbellford Baptist Church.

Welcome Extended

The opening song service was conducted by Mr. Eric Naylor of Belleville. Mr. Gerald Irvin of Sidney gave the address of welcome and on behalf of his group extended cordial greetings to the visiting unions. Mr. Chas Franklin of Belleville responded to the welcome. A brief period of worship was conducted by Mr. Donald Lloyd of Campbellford.

Following the roll call, Miss Della Anderson read the minutes of the previous rally held in Belleville. Miss Jean Thompson, Belleville, was elected to the post of secretary for the ensuing year. The chairman, Mr. Ralph Smith of Sidney, announced the 1941 convention thought "Onward in Faith" and the convention hymn "How Firm a Foundation."

Miss Phyllis Moore of Murray St., Peterboro, who is President of the Peterboro Association, gave an interesting review of B.Y.P.U. activities and outlined plans for the Ontario and Quebec convention to be held in Toronto next week, also the picnic to be held in Cobourg on July 1st and the fall associational rally in Murray St., Peterboro, on Thanksgiving Day.

A lovely vocal duet was given by two members of the Belleville Intermediate B.Y.P.U., Miss Jean Cook and Miss Muriel Wells. The benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Campbell McFarlane, pastor of Sidney Church. At the close of the session a bounteous luncheon was served.

Recently Redecorated

It is interesting to note that the Sidney Baptist Church has been proclaiming the word of God for over a hundred years in this lovely community. The building has recently undergone extensive repairs. The interior has been completely and beautifully redecorated and adequate electric lighting fixtures expertly installed. The young pastor and his congregation are justly proud of their church and the visitors to the rally were not slow in expressing their admiration of the really fine things accomplished by the enterprising folk of this splendid country church.

Lengyel, Emil—Turkey.

The enigma of Turkey, which has puzzled the western mind for centuries even to the present, is discussed graphically by the author of that recent outstanding volume "The Danube". Here is spread before the reader the rich tapestry of life in the Near East from ancient days to modern times. The struggle for the Dardanelles, which has been constant since the day of Helen of Troy to Adolf Hitler, is one that will arouse curiosity among all readers who wish to keep abreast of world affairs today.

Streit, C.K.—Union now with Britain.

The author of the doctrine of a union of democracies brings his ideas to date with this sequel to his book "Union Now". Practical plans for immediate federal union between the United States and the British Empire are described in the light of looming events. Hailed in the United States as an indispensable book to be read by Americans, it will offer equal food for thought for Canadians.

Bemelmans Ludwig — The Donkey Inside.

Fusing together material gathered on many trips to South America, Mr. Bemelmans has given an amusing picture of "the land of surprises" Ecuador. The author and artist of many witty articles in the New Yorker magazine, has captured the spirit of "beautiful madness" which he claims is the chief charm of this lovely land. He portrays explorers, officials, Indians, exiled diplomats both in his writing and drawing, cleverly combining the fresh vision of a child with the shrewdness of a philosopher.

Snow, Edgar.—The Battle For Asia.

A full careful political and economic analysis of the last three fateful years in China as given by Mr. Snow in his latest volume, of eyewitnesses journalism. The author pictures the rebirth of this great and ancient people. Today and tomorrow in the Far East is presented by a man who has few equals in the knowledge of what is happening and why.

Alley, Norman —I Witness.

The breath-taking exploits of one of the world's premier newsreel cameramen, are described in this narrative of high adventure. The only foreign cameraman in Germany during the present war, he moved ahead of the blitzkreig of the Low countries and on to Dunkerque to film the British evacuation. His narrow escape both in his home front, America and far afield in Europe will make absorbing reading.

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, May 21

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

WHILE there may be a certain degree of enterprise and initiative in a business way on this day, yet these may be beset or irked by petty difficulties or trifling perplexities making social, domestic or sentimental urges more exciting. In fact the accent may be upon these private lures which should offer more harmony and real enjoyment. These too are under auguries for small anxieties or disagreements, calling for amiability and discretion. With all kinds of discords and frustrations cleverly managed a surprising gain may be shown.

Those whose birthday it is may feel moderate energy and ambition to engage in some enterprise or new venture, but may be discouraged by a chain of thwarting, perplexing or disappointing developments. This will make it easy to seek compensations in social, domestic, artistic or emotional indulgences, and these happy relaxations are of paramount importance. They may also be subject to inharmony, defeat or obstruction, unless real affability and discretion be exercised. Withal there may be some surprising benefits and gains.

A child born on this day should have energy, initiative and constructive ability, with artistic leanings, yet its emotional urges may lure it from the practical to the social and romantic way of life.

Chaplin "The Dictator"

One of the most amazing success stories in the world is Charlie Chaplin's, who talks for the first time in "The Great Dictator" now on the Belle Theatre screen.

At the age of 28, he was not only one of the most famous and best loved men in the world, but wealthy in his own right. The same year he built the Chaplin Studios, starting his own producing company which, since its inception in 1918, has never produced anything but artistic as well as financial successes.

The son of theatrical parents, he earned his own living from the time he was nine years old. By his own admission, his schooling was spasmodic. But even as a very young boy, those who knew him say Charlie was studious. When he joined the Karno Repertoire Company as a lad in his teens, he was never to be found in the "gay spots" when the day's work was done, as did the other young fellows in the troupe. Instead he would remain in his room, trying out new steps, figuring out "funny business" that would make his part of the show outstanding.

That he succeeded is a matter of record, for in 1913, when the company came to the United States, an agent for Mack Sennett spotted him immediately. From that memorable day in November when he entered pictures, his rise has been meteoric.

Formed Own Company

After the first two Sennett pictures, he wrote and directed his own comedies. When his contract expired, Charlie signed with Essanay at a greatly increased salary, then on the Mutual and First National Companies in rapid succession. Upon completion of this latter contract, he decided to produce himself. And who will ever forget "Shoulder Arms," "The Kid," "Woman of Paris," "Gold Rush," "Circus," "City Lights" and "Modern Times"?

Author, producer, director and star of all his productions, with the single exception of "Woman of Paris," in which he did not appear, Charlie's talents appear endless. Writer of two books, many songs as well as the greater part of the musical scores of "City Lights," "Modern Times" and "The Great Dictator," he has an enviable reputation as an athlete, having held the amateur long distance running championship in England, is an expert tennis player, angler, musician (playing any musical instrument, although he has never taken a lesson nor can he read music), is a recognized authority on economics and world affairs. In fact a list of what Charlie cannot do would be easier to compile than one containing his many accomplishments.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Sis Hopkins"

Judy Canova's songs featured in "Sis Hopkins," Republic picture now showing at the Capitol theatre, are admirably adapted to her vocal range. She has been called the "song-writer's dream"; she can sing low-down music in a contralto voice or do a tune in a coloratura register with equal ease. She has the biggest range of true notes of any screen star in Hollywood.

In addition to her versatility in the mere mechanics of music, Judy also is able to inject real soul into her singing. Being from the South, she understands the south-land rhythm, which was created originally by the negroes and which was the forerunner of present day syncopation.

In the particular region of Florida in which Judy was born, people told their stories in song, the songs are all traditional. These songs were never written down with words and music, but were passed from generation to generation.

Thus, children of the South are infected at an early age with the inspiration and desire to sing. They grow up, and often develop into singers of renown, as has Judy Canova.

Miss Canova, however, despite her lessons and training, has maintained a sort of untouched back-home Americanness of tone, which is in keeping with her unassuming personality. She is never satisfied with her own work, and is in torment while listening to a "playback" of her own recordings. When the playback ends Judy murmurs apologetically to everyone on the set: "Honest, folks, I didn't mean it!"

The added attraction "Lucky Devils," featuring Richard Arlen and Andy Devine packs plenty of action and thrills that will keep you on edge throughout. The short subject "Stranger Than Fiction" completes this swell double feature bill.

Tonight only in person Ken Soble in his famous Toronto radio show, "Did I Say That?"

Madoc—On Saturday afternoon and evening Madoc Red Cross held a most successful display tea in their work rooms, Community Hall, Madoc. Articles of most every kind of work for the Red Cross were on display, quilts, soczs, sweaters, refugee supplies, soldier's quota, seamen's quota, and airmen's needs beautifully finished were among the numerous lists. With the assistance of the Harts, Hazzards, and O'Hara Red Cross Units, also donations from I.O.D.E., St. Peters Y. W. Club, Trinity United Club, knitting done by pupils of Madoc High School and many personal donations the exhibit was indeed most gratifying.

This work has been accomplished since the first of April and will be shipped on Monday to Red Cross Headquarters, Toronto. A most pleasant event was the visit of Major Watson of Toronto, Field Secretary of the Red Cross. During the afternoon and evening Major Watson gave instructive talks on Red Cross Work. Giving the visitors and workers much information on the work being done by Red Cross. Between two huncred and fifty and three hundred visited the display during the afternoon and evening. Mr. E. Carswell of Oshawa spent the week end with his parents.

Social Evening Concludes Season Of Cannifton Y. P. U.

Friday, May 16, was closing night for Cannifton Union until Autumn. Invited for a social evening were Carmel, Bethany, Gilead, St. Andrews, the other appointments of the circuit. The evening began with a sing-song directed by Mrs. Davis, and served to get everyone in a happy, friendly mood.

The president, Margaret Smallhorn took charge of the worship service, reading us a talk on the future as a "golden age" wherein "peace will not make us soft, where there is no poverty and prosperity will not make us proud. Liberty will not become licence, nor our happiness turn to selfishness."

The guests entertained with a short program: Violin solo by Harry Macpherson, a reading from Olive Treverton and a piano solo by Anne Clare. "Blest be the tie that binds" and a short prayer by Mr. Davis closed this part of the program and we turned our activities to games ably conducted by Theresa Henry. At the end of the evening refreshments were served and the meeting ended with "Auld Lang Syne" and the Mizpah Benediction.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

TOO MUCH EMPHASIS CAN BE PLACED ON

MOTHER'S RESPONSIBILITY

In these modern days one can hardly get away from reading articles on and hearing radio talks about the solemn and sacred responsibilities of mothers. In fact, so much has been said to the effect that motherhood is the most difficult task in the world that I'm afraid it is beginning to effect parents' attitude toward their children in an undesirable way.

In most of the expressions about motherhood to which I refer, there is too much preaching and criticism, it seems to me. The best advice to mothers is "always enjoy your children", and this doesn't require much amplification. The "solemn duties of mothers" will be fulfilled if this idea is adhered to, and all concerned will be much happier if most of the other preachments on the subject are ignored.

In this world — or perhaps I had better stick to our continent, there is a high percentage of children who do suffer from neglect, but there is also a great number who suffer from over-attention and indulgence. Too many mothers, it has been my observation, are so wrapped up in what they conceive to be the solemn duties of motherhood that they literally become fanatics on the subject. As such they are constant fault-fingers, scolds and worriers. They are constantly upset over the child's health, or manners, or schoolwork. Every minor ill, every mishap, demoralizes them. Such mothers are so concerned over their children that they never enjoy them. And naturally, the children of such mothers hardly enjoy their parents or their childhood.

From the day of its birth, a baby needs most of all to be enjoyed. Nothing as beneficial to a child as the feeling that he is wanted and is a source of happiness to his parents, capable of arousing such a feeling as that expressed by Du Bartas:

My lovely living Boy,
My hope, my hap, my love, my life, my joy.

But enjoying your child doesn't mean that even the smallest babies shouldn't have discipline and a habit-forming routine. If these are started early and correctly, they'll be no hardship on the child or unpleasant task to you. Actually, they will add to your enjoyment of the child.

If you'll stop and think, instead of acting on impulses, common sense will prevent you from either over-indulging or neglecting your child's needs, and make it easy for you to enjoy him.

Wellman's S. S. Class Honors Former Member

Rawdon—On Friday evening, May 16th about thirty members of Wellman's Young People's Sunday School Class gathered at the home of Mrs. Edith Sharp and tendered Mrs. Harris Dean, Fuller, nee Gladys Pauley a linen shower.

The house was decorated in yellow and white with bouquets of lilacs, iris and tulips and a three tier wedding cake graced the dining room table. The cake was iced in pink and white with a bride and groom in the centre of the top layer. Beautiful streamers hung from the ceiling to the cake.

The guests gathered early and hid their gifts in various places about the house and when the bride arrived she was asked to find the parcels.

Miss Barbara Whitehouse presided and the address of appreciation was read by Miss Mabel Sharp and the gifts were then opened and admired. Both Gladys and Harris both graciously replied and thanked their friends for the pleasant event arranged in their honor.

All joined in a round of community singing led by Miss Mina Dracup. Several games and contests were staged and all enjoyed an hour of jolly fun together.

The president, Mr. Lorne Watson then took charge and Miss Betty Hulin sang "Let me call you sweetheart" with guitar accompaniment. Miss Dorothy Hinds contributed a reading and Rev. J. E. Beckel spoke briefly.

At the close an appetizing lunch of cookies, sandwiches and jellies was served topped off with the wedding cake.

Later in the evening about fifty gathered and tendered the newlyweds a noisy charivari. The group then repaired to Mr. Victor Graham's store and enjoyed refreshments.

Be Smart With All Beauty Aids

Ann Baxter has a charming natural beauty

By HELEN FOLLETT

It is evidence of a woman's intelligence and good taste if she can make herself look different from the run-of-the-mill sisters. She keeps in the fashion picture, but she has her own little individual touches that set her apart. She is not content to be a carbon copy. She will be an original masterpiece of loveliness or know the reason why.

She studies herself. She is aware of every good point, and every point that isn't so good. She knows that if she won't acknowledge the disqualifying factors, there is no chance of improvement. She sees herself as clearly and with as little bias as she sees the woman next door.

Overcome Beauty Faults

Smart women are nearly always good looking; if they have brains they can find ways of overcoming beauty griefs. They don't want to look pretty; that sort of thing is for the youngsters. They desire to appear distinguished, to have flare and verve.

They are fussy about make-up, are not content unless it is flattering, gives freshness to the complexion. They don't go in for quirky eyebrows, nutty hats, fancy shoes or anything that will make them conspicuous. If they have trouble arranging their brain wool, they seek the services of a clever hair stylist. They appreciate the value of a correctly cut foundation garment. They are mindful of posture; a slouching figure makes the costliest robe look like so much dry goods, and nothing more.

Material beauty wealth is to be had from many sources. Dentists do wonders to correct impaired or uneven teeth. Clever dressmakers improve the not-so-good figure by the right use of color and line. Pretty shoes make pretty feet. Gyms have ways of battering off fat cells. Perfumes create a romantic appeal.

There's also the matter of good living habits. Deep breathing, daily bathing, regular exercise, refreshing sleep, sensible eating habits have a vitalizing effect not only on the body and nervous system, but on the complexion, the eyes, the teeth and fingernails.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

COURTEOUS PEOPLE HEED PRELATE'S ADVICE

Without doubt the most famous definition of a gentleman — was written by Cardinal Newman.

The last sentence of this famous definition is: "A gentleman is a friend of religious toleration, and he is that, not only because his philosophy has taught him to look on all forms of faith with an impartial eye, but also from the gentleness of feeling which is the attendant of civilization."

Great words for our contemplation! The tongue is an unruly member, and never is it so cruel and offensive as when it is saying derogratory things about another person's religion.

If you are intolerant of another's beliefs, you are a sorry spectacle of ignorance and inhumanity. Your steps should not cross the threshold of the other person's credo unless in spiritual sympathy and understanding.

How few of us realize that when we say — or even think — malicious things about another's religion, we are showing ourselves to be very poor representatives of our own. And that while we demand tolerance of our religion, we are unwilling to be tolerant of another's religion.

If you must be intolerant, be intolerant of your own intolerance — not of another person's beliefs!

Brother's Engagement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My brother and his fiancee are to have their engagement announced at a party soon, and my husband and I and other members of the family are going to this party. We would like to have you tell us if an engagement present is called for. If it is, would you please tell us an appropriate gift for the girl or the young man, or both.

An Ardent Reader

While engagement presents aren't "called for", usually close relatives of either the fiancee or the fiance like to give the engaged girl some simple gift in honor of the happy occasion. The engagement gift is usually something for her personal use, rather than something for the new home. It may be a purse, an evening bag, some monogrammed handkerchiefs, a vanity-case, perfume, a fitted or unfitted overnight bag, lingerie, some accessory for her dressing-table.

Usually the young man in the case doesn't receive engagement presents, but I don't see why he shouldn't! Perhaps you and your husband would like to give your brother a wallet, or a pair of cuff links, or a cigarette case, or any other item that you know he'll welcome.

Sisters Register At Hotel

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When three sisters are registering at a hotel, is it necessary for all of them to sign the register, or could just one sign? And how is it signed?

The Three

It doesn't make any difference whether one sister — the oldest, probably — signs for all three, or if each sister signs individually.

Each sister signs her name like this:

Miss Margaret Willinams.

If the registration is in a book, only the name of the home-city is written. East Orange, New Jersey. If, as is usually the case nowadays, the registering is on a registration form, this includes a space for the house address. The signature should be the same — the name with the title written before it — whether written in a book or on a card.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Husband Complains of Cost of Beautiful Wife

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I married a wonderful woman. She's as neat as a pin and is a good cook. I like to take her out and like to have my friends come in to meals, as she's such a credit to me. What bothers me is that it takes so much money for her to keep her in such good condition. Permanents ever so often, a trip to the beauty parlor every couple of weeks, to have the hair dressed. Besides that she must have oil treatments, manicures and even facials.

She contends that as long as she does all the housework and is very economical, she should have these little extras.

Worried

You say your wife is economical and saves you money by doing her own work. You enjoy going out with her because she is always so well groomed and you like to invite your friends to the house. Then why object to the amount she spends in making herself so pleasing to you?

If you destroy her morale by objecting to her beauty parlor trips, she'll turn into a "dowdy" and then you won't be so proud of her. That will also make her feel discouraged and she will lose her skill in cooking and housekeeping.

Escort From School Prom

Dear Miss Fairfax.

I am 16 years of age and would like to invite a young man, who is 21 years of age, to our school prom. One of the boys in my class has asked me to go with him, but I have not accepted, as I feel I would enjoy myself more if I were with the older boy. I've been out with him several times and he's very sociable. He doesn't know many of my friends.

If you think it would be all right to ask him, should I buy the tickets?

Betty

When one is Sweet Sixteen, to my way of thinking, she should ask the boy she likes best to the Prom. As the years roll on, these happy times are good things to remember. Of course, if you invite the young man, you are supposed to buy the tickets, as he is your guest.

Widow Wonders About Suitor

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been reading some of your letters from complaining wives. They don't know how lucky they are to have a nice home and husband to work for them.

My husband was killed in an accident three years ago. We were married twenty-five years and very happy. We shared everything together—sorrow, happiness, love and companionship. We always had joyous times on his day off, going fishing, hunting, or on trips with the children.

My two sons are in the army, and I still have my daughter at home, but my life has been very lonely since my husband left. However, I've carried on for the children. Now I have met a man seventeen years older than myself. He loves me very dearly and wants to marry me. I love him but don't know whether he could take my husband's place. He has a good position and plenty of money. Do you think I should take the chance?

Very Undecided.

While you may become very fond of this older man, it's doubtful if he could take your late husband's place in your affections. I don't think that anyone completely takes the place of someone we have lost through death. We may become fond, even devoted, but it is not the same.

It would seem that the sensible thing would be for you to marry this man, even if he is older. Here are my best wishes to you.

EX-KING TO LEAVE BERMUDA

Hamilton, Bermuda, May 20 (CP)—Ernest Urdareanu, close attendant of former King Carol of Rumania, said Sunday that Carol and his party are planning to leave for St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands by boat.

Heated by plugging into an electric current outlet, a branding iron with interchangeable letters and figures has been invented for marking wooden articles or automobile tires for identification.

NEIGHBOURHOOD HARMONY!
Growth in local telephones has made it necessary for us to build new telephone offices in scores of cities and towns.
Many of these don't look much like telephone buildings. Often they are in the residential part of the town because that happens to be the wire centre — the most economical place to build them.
And so our architects have designed them to harmonize with the buildings around—they form an attractive and pleasing part of the residential district.
This is just one example of our efforts to provide service which will be not only adequate for public convenience and protection, but pleasing and attractive as well.

Brooklyn Dodgers Protest Two Games Won by Cubs on Grounds Chicago Has Over Limit Of Men

Player in Question is Charley Gilbert Who Figured in Herman Deal

TIGERS MOVE UP

By JUDSON BAILEY

(Associated Press Sport Writer)

First-place jams in the National League are as common as traffic tie-ups in Times Square, but the senior circuit has one now that only President Ford Frick can untangle.

Brooklyn Dodgers have lost two games in a row at Chicago to the Cubs and yesterday slipped out of the percentage lead although remaining half a game ahead of St. Louis Cardinals on won-lost reckoning.

However, the Dodgers complicated this otherwise commonplace mix-up by protesting both games on the grounds that the Cubs had 26 men on their squad, one over the limit that went into effect May 15.

The player in question is Outfielder Charley Gilbert, whom Brooklyn traded to the Cubs in the Billy Herman deal. He was playing under option at Montreal and the deal provided that the International League Club turn him over to the Cubs June 1.

In the meantime he sprained an ankle and went to Philadelphia to get repairs. He never has been any closer to Chicago than he is right now—roughly 800 miles.

Take Week for Ruling

President Frick says it may be a week before he can make a ruling and during the interim the protest not only will reflect on the first-place struggle between the Cardinals and Dodgers, but also on the Cubs, who moved into the first division yesterday.

If the Cubs don't cut off a man, and the protest is upheld a week from now, other managers may holler, too, and a lot of games be lost by forfeit.

Even if Brooklyn wins the protest it won't erase the humiliation of yesterday's 14-1 walloping. The Cubs climbed on chubby Hugh Casey, who had won five games without a defeat and kayoed him with nine runs in the second inning. Claude Passeau, the Cub's pitching ace, contributed a homer with the bases loaded in the big inning and then proceeded to choke the Dodgers with four-hit hurling.

Indians Bumped Off

Cleveland's American League leaders also were bumped off again yesterday by Philadelphia Athletics 5-4. Rookie Les McCrabb kept nine hits well spaced.

Dennis Galehouse, who had pitched a one-hit shutout his last time out, held New York Yankees to four safeties as St. Louis' Browns forged a 5-1 victory.

Young John Gorsica pitched four-hit ball for Detroit Tigers to beat Boston Red Sox 4-2 and lost a shutout in the seventh when Ted Williams homered with one on. It was Detroit's fifth straight victory and kept the American League champs right on the heels of the second-place Chicago White Sox, who whipped Washington Senators 8-2.

The day's best pitching duel was in the National League where Pittsburgh ended New York Giants' four-game winning streak 2-1. Max Butcher of the Pirates allowed only four hits while old Carl Hubbell gave up six.

Cincinnati Reds ripped off 14 hits to beat Boston Braves 7-3 behind Johnny Vander Meer. Catcher Ernie Lombardi distinguished himself by throwing out four runners at second.

Boys' Trophy Night Takes Form Of Banquet At "Y"

The annual "Y" Boys' Trophy Night banquet was held in the Y.M.C.A. auditorium last evening and was attended by eighty youthful and active members of the minor classes of the "Y". The presentation of crests to the more proficient and a program of stunts added to the evening's entertainment.

During the banquet hour, at which Ed Shortt, physical director at the "Y", acted as chairman, community singing was the order of the night with Gord McCle[illegible] at the piano.

The presentation of crests to the "Prep" champion-Defiants was made by Steve Licence, chairman of the Boys' Work committee. The team was composed of Hugh Cameron, captain, Jack Dixon, Bob Stuart, Jim Barclay, Harry Abbott, Pete Calbury and Don Williams.

Group Captain J. Sylventer is probably the only member of the Royal Air Force who carries a golf club on bombing flights over Germany. One of the R.A.F.'s keenest golfers, Sylvester says he does this so that "If we are forced down I can keep my swing going."

T. M. Patterson of Glasgow won the Scottish universities individual golf championship at Carnoustie with two rounds of 80. Edinburgh University was not represented for the second year in succession.

The death is announced of Sub-Lt. E. J. H. Dixon, R.N.V.R., former Captain of the Oxford University cricket team and member of the Northamptonshire XI. He was 25.

Albert Penfold, world-renowned golf ball maker, is believed to have been drowned in the Atlantic. He was aboard a ship lost by enemy action.

Racing is going to the dogs—in more ways than one. At a bloodstock sale at Newmarket, several well bred horses were bought on behalf of a firm which supplies horse meat for dogs.

Don Bradman, Australia's best-known cricket player, has been recommended for discharge from the Royal Australian Air Force on medical grounds. Bradman, supposed to take charge of physical training in South Australia, recently spent three weeks in hospital for treatment of rheumatism in the back.

SYRACUSE CHIEFS NOW ON WAY UP

Climb From Seventh Place to Fifth Place in One Week

(By The Associated Press)

With the aid of some new talent, bought, borrowed or bartered from various clubs in their own circuit and in the Major Leagues, Syracuse Chiefs are climbing up the International League baseball ladder. Exactly two weeks ago they were in seventh place. Today they are fifth and are threatening the first-division clubs.

The Chiefs took their fourth game in a row last night, beating Baltimore Orioles 5-1. Victory put the Chiefs within a game of the idle Rochester Red Wings while the Orioles' margin over the last-place Toronto Maple Leafs was sliced to a half game. All the other clubs also were idle.

Joe Krakauskas, optioned two weeks ago by Cleveland, is one of the pitching standouts recently acquired.

Krakauskas, a former amateur around Hamilton, Ont., allowed only seven hits and struck out seven to win his second game in four starts for the Chiefs. He pitched shutout ball up to the ninth when a walk was followed by two hits. Baltimore's Orlin Collier suffered his first setback in four starts although he pitched a good game.

Danny Litwhiler

Litwhiler hit safely in 21 consecutive games with the Phils, setting the season's record for the National loop.

With Wilkes-Barre, Litwhiler batted .305 in 103 games.

The Phil outfielder is a native of Ringtown, Pa.

He is a right-handed batter.

ST. CATHARINES WINS JUNIOR CAGE TITLE

Score 22-12 Victory Over Fredericton, N.B., in Second Game of Series

WIN TWO IN ROW

Fredericton, May 20—(CP)—The Canadian Junior Basketball Championship was held today by the First United Church team of St. Catharines, Ont.

A 22-12 victory over Fredericton Hi-Y last night clinched the Dominion title for the Ontario players, who won the first game 26-19 Saturday and thus took the final series 48-31.

Early in the second contest Fredericton came within a point of knotting the series count when the game score stood 6-0 in favor of Hi-Y, but the visitors rallied to finish the first half tied 8-8.

While allowing the Maritime champions only four more points in the last half, St. Catharines added 14 to their own total. Nine of these were shot in the final quarter, when the best Fredericton could do was to make good on a penalty shot.

The game, played in the Lady Beaverbrook gymnasium at University of New Brunswick, was considerably faster than the first contest and both teams showed better form. It was also rougher, 18 fouls being called.

Jack Marrack, St. Catharines' forward, led the scorers with nine points. Another Ontario player, Eddie Nickowski, followed with eight. Ken Davis, who collected four points, was high scorer for the Fredericton team.

1,052 GOLFERS TO ENTER OPEN

Qualifying Rounds Will be Played in the Deep South

New York, May 20—(AP)—The southwest is getting ready to support its first National Open Golf Tournament in a big way and as a result Dallas, Houston and Tulsa have supplanted New York, Chicago and Philadelphia as the principal centres for the sectional qualifying rounds next Monday.

Dallas is the qualifying location for the section where the big tournament will be played — at Fort Worth's Colonial Club, June 5, 6 and 7. This district contributed 126 entrants to the total of 1,010 who will try to qualify in 27 different locations. Chicago, always a hot spot in golf and looking after a big territory, is second with 104 entries and Pittsburgh third with 80. Then come Tulsa with 69, Detroit with 68 and Houston with 67, all ahead of New York's metropolitan district which generally is either first or second. New York's total this year is 65.

The total entry list for the 1941 open, announced yesterday by the United States Golf Association, is 1,052, of these 33 are exempt from the sectional qualifying rounds because they were among the low 30 scorers and ties for 30th place last year. Eight former open champions who didn't rank high in the 1940 tourney also were granted exemption under a ruling made this year and the home club pro, Bob Byrnes, also is exempt.

As a result there will be just 128 places in the main tournament for the 1,010 golfers to shoot at Monday. The field at Fort Worth will be limited to 170 starters, the same as it has been since 1936.

GOSSIP NEWS COMMENT

Some time ago we gave you a reprint of an Englishman's impression of hockey as played in Canada. Along comes an Old Country newspaper clipping in which the writer tries to delve into the intricacies of baseball and goes something like this:

"Here on the village green, though not yet on the sacred cricket pitch, which is waiting for the return of summers more serene, the young Canadian soldiers are trying to initiate local youth into the mysteries of the national game of North America.

"Saturday afternoons and Sundays, if fine enough, are the appointed time, for during the week the soldiers are careening round the countryside in their various war-machines, and the English lads are busy on the land or at their other essential wartime tasks. But at the week-ends, both have some leisure, and other distractions are few.

"It has been an uphill job for the young Canadians to interest our village in a new game which appears at first sight to be nothing more than rounders in uniform. But, taken by careful stages, the higher nature of baseball begins gradually to manifest itself.

"Practice in pitching discloses that this art is comparable to that of the fast bowler's, and is not merely the "chucking" at which the country cricketer sneers. The catcher takes anything our best local bowlers and fieldsmen send down with a careless ease, which is beginning to convince them there may be more in this queer game than meets the eye.

"Tactfully, the pitcher persuades the fielder that he is doing just as good a job as a fieldsman. It won't be long, he tells himself, before we can make a real baseball team out of these guys. But until that happens, and our village is satisfied that it isn't just a new way of playing rounders, that game for small children and family picnics, there can be no question of giving up the village green to any Anglo-Canadian baseball match.

"Literally and metaphorically, the ground must be prepared. Meanwhile, pitching practice on an Imperial basis is a good friendly preparation."

The 1941 Ontario Intelligencer Soap Box Derby will be held slightly in advance to previous years, June 30th being the day when young Belleville will be king of all he surveys. With the Kinsmen Club-sponsored Belleville Kid Kar Derby slated for June 30th, which is slightly more than five weeks off, the ten-aged drivers should begin to make enquiries as to the construction of their racing cars almost immediately. Kin. Jim "Up-and-at-'em" Fraser is general chairman of the big race this year and has a set of the best racing wheels procurable ready for every boy anxious to participate. Besides the handsome Coyle Trophy that goes to the local winner, remember boys there's that big trip to Akron, Ohio, and a chance to compete for the world's Soap Box Derby championship, that carries automobiles and even a college education as additional prizes. Belleville is today recognized as "the Akron of Canada" and the home of Kid Kar Derbies in this Dominion. Don't be disappointed in delay, fellows.

Do you remember when Hilton Belyea, one of Canada's most promising scullers, sailed for England to compete in the Diamond Sculls competition sixteen years ago today? Belyea was unlucky, lost the race, but started out for another attempt in 1924. On the way to England, he became ill, and subsequently had to retire from active competition.

After Dick Siebert hit two home runs against the New York Yankees and Jimmie Foxx of Boston had to be content with a couple of puny singles against the Athletics, the two had an exchange of words at first base.

"Do you mind my stealing your stuff?" Siebert asked.

"Not at all," came back Jimmie. "For me, that would be a good day—for you, it's a good season."

The rains came . . .

After six or seven weeks of perfect weather the local softball league pushed off under ideal surroundings last week when two games were played without interruption. However, the third scheduled game had to be postponed last night owing to wet grounds. Last season there were only two softball games postponed all season owing to rain, but seasons like that only come once in a decade or more. According to the regulations governing the Men's League, postponed games must be played within 24 hours of the postponement, unless rain still interferes, which would indicate the S. A. Co. at Reliance match will be played this evening, while on Wednesday the season's first dual bill is scheduled with the league-leading Juniors trucking down to Point Anne and the Corby's A.C., tied with the kids, making another attempt versus the S. A. Co. With such a dry, early spring behind, the softball moguls can prepare themselves for more rain postponements in the next fortnight, than they experienced during the entire 1940 season.

With the gals' softball league scheduled to open on Friday at the Armouries lawn, President Ted Schwab and Secretary Barn[illegible] Smith have called a general meeting of the league tonight at the "Y" at which time all changes in the playing regulations will be discussed. Incidentally players' certificates must be in Secretary Smith's hands tonight also, so managers and coaches should govern themselves accordingly, as only players passed on tonight will be eligible for the three week-end opening games of Friday, Saturday and Monday.

The Major "A" bowling finals got off to a flying start at the Recreation Alleys last night with some tall maple knocking seen, especially by the Corby's A. C. trundlers. The Major "A" play-off plan is governed by the composite scores in three games played. Last night the Corby's A. C. team took the lead in the opener, scoring 3360 points, with Belleville Golf second, 3085 points, Deacons third with 2867 and Meade-Johnson next with 2824. Reg Arnott of Corby's A.C., was the top bowler last night with a strong 727, while Harry Robinson, a team-mate, was a close second with 726 and both of these high scores were chased hard by Joe Legault's 725 points. The teams resume activities on Wednesday.

SPORT SLANTS—The Cubs beat the Dodgers 14 to 1 yesterday, allowing the Cardinals to slip into the lead of the National League. . . . Whenever the Dodgers play in Chicago it's just like old home week as you can find no less than eight former Cubs in the livery of the Brooklyns today. . . . After a shaky start the Tigers seem to have settled away, as they registered their fifth consecutive win yesterday and took a firm hold on third place. . . . Skipper Gerald Barriage says the two lucky tickets drawn last Friday night at the Corby's A.C. game were 14 and 114. . . . Leave it to Larry McPhail of the Dodgers to get into the headlines. x x x

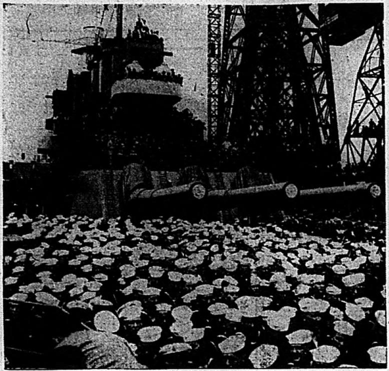
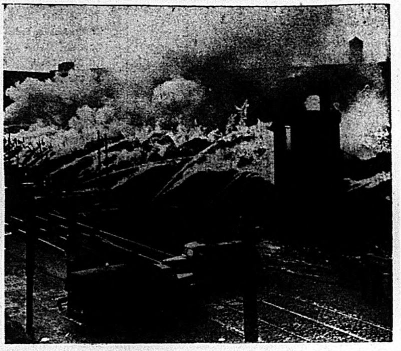
NEW 35,000-TON DREADNAUGHT JOINS AMERICAN NAVY



In an impressive ceremony at the Philadelphia Navy Yard, the 35,000-ton super-dreadnaught U.S.S. Washington joins the American navy. Here is a view of the dreadnaught's after deck, showing the crew lined up under the triple 16-inch guns of the aft turret, as the giant battler is placed in commission.

FLAMES SWEEP PHILADELPHIA, DOING $5000,000 DAMAGE



Flames are shown roaring through a section of Philadelphia during the 10-alarm fire that destroyed homes and factories in the city to the tune of an estimated $5,000,000. The blaze was finally checked by a "wall of water" from the hoselines of fire companies from all parts of the city as it bore down on the Cramp shipyards, vital defence work centre. The machine shop and plate shop of the yards were gutted before the fire-fighters got the upper hand. The blaze is believed to have started in a lumber yard.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was starting to go to school after breakfist and I said, Hay ma, did you see my report card anywheres? I have to hand it in today because this is the last day, so did you see it, ma? I said.

No I didn't, and I never saw such a boy, either, ma said.

Meaning me, and I said, Well G, ma, where do you think it can be?

If you had anything to do with it I think it can be in a thousand and one places, ma said, and I said, No it cant, ma, not at the same time. Jimminy, ma, I mean holey smokes, you must of seen it somewheres, I said.

Oh of ccurse, I'm a miracle worker with a hundred eyes, ma said. Dont you think you're old enough now to remember where you put your own things? she said, and I said, Well I do, ma, I remember exactly, it's right in the house because I remember laying it down.

That's about as definite as the Chinese alfabet, ma said, and I said, Well G wizzickers, ma, it's not such a big house.

It's a great eel bigger than your report card, ma said.

Being a good answer, and I said, Well G roozalem, as long as I know where it partly is, it's not the same thing as if it was entirely lost. I mean it's either somewheres on the first floor or upstairs somewheres, I said, and ma said, Dont make any rash statements, are you quite sure it's not on the roof?

Being sourcastic and I said Now I remember, I can tell you exactly precisely. It's on the hallrack in the front hall in Puds Simkins's house. See, I told you I knew it was somewheres in the house. I didn't say what house, did I? There you are, ma, found it all by myself, but thanks just a same, I said.

And I hurry up ran out before ma got enough breath back for a good answer.

LATE MRS. SARAH J. ROSS

Monday afternoon the funeral of Mrs. Sarah Jane Ross, widow of Gilbert Ross, took place from her late residence, 30 Holloway Street, to Holloway Street United Church where an impressive service was conducted by the pastor, the Rev. J. S. Dilts, who also conducted the service at the graveside in Belleville cemetery.

The following nephews of the deceased acted as bearers: Messrs. Will Empey, Hugh Empey, Albert Empey, Frank Empey, Charles Empey and John Empey.

MRS. ELEANOR A. MOON
(Sidney Township)

After an illness of nine months' duration, Mrs. Eleanor Amelia Moon, widow of Charles Moon, died at her home in the 2nd concession of Sidney Township on Monday, May 19th.

The late Mrs. Moon, who was in her 73rd year, was born in Prince Edward County, being a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Loveless. At one time she resided at Bayside and for the past thirty-three years she made her home in the 2nd concession of Sidney Township. She possessed many fine traits of character and was highly esteemed in the community. In religion she was a member of Aikens' United Church and when age and health permitted she took an active part in church work, being a member of the Women's Missionary Society, the Women's Aid and also for twenty years the efficient organist and choir leader.

Surviving her are two daughters, Mrs. Fred Westover, Sidney Township and Miss Jennie Moon at home; one son, Mr. Fred Moon, at home, two grandchildren, Carol Moon and Douglas McPherson. Her husband died eight years ago.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

POLICE BLOTTER

Prompt action on the part of the Belleville police resulted in the apprehension of two members of the R.C.A.F. stationed at Trenton who had gained entrance to a storehouse at the rear of the Perfect Cafe late Monday night. The names of the men were later given as John Lubenguth and Albert Ireland, both Aircraftmen.

Today Lubenguth and Ireland were arraigned before H. B. Wilson, local Justice of the Peace, and charged with breaking and entering a storehouse, situated at the rear of the Perfect Cafe, with the intent to commit theft. The men were remanded until Friday and given into the custody of Air Force authorities until that date.

Hearing disturbances at the rear of their premises, employees at the Perfect Cafe notified police. Constables Ellis and Arnott hastened to the scene and found Lubenguth and Ireland outside the storeroom door, which had been forced open with the use of a large shovel. The lock had been broken off the door, police reported.

Answered Call to Bakery

Later in the evening police answered a similar call to Linn's bakery on Dundas Street, but were not as successful at this point, as their query had flown despite the fact the officers were on the scene within a very few moments from the time nearby residents had reported they saw a man trying to gain entrance to the premises through a rear window. The description of this man was similar to that of the marauder who attacked Wm. Williamson, service station attendant on Dundas Street, early Monday morning, police revealed.

City police are continuing their drive upon motorists, who persist in violating the city traffic ordinances, Chief Kidd stated today as he revealed three summons had been issued to drivers who had either been apprehended breaking the speed laws or failing to adhere to the 'stop street signs' in Belleville.

SHOULD TRANSFER TITLE

Washington, May 20 (AP)—President William Green of the American Federation of Labor told newsmen last night that it was his personal view that the government should transfer title of naval vessels to Great Britain for convoy purposes rather than use the United States navy for convoy duty.

"This would lessen our chances of involvement in the war," he said.

NINE-STATE ALARM RAISED

Cleveland, May 20 — (AP) — A nine-state alarm was broadcast today by the civil aeronautics authority seeking trace of a plane which set out from Washington Saturday, carrying two Cleveland business men and failed to reach its destination here. The four-seater monoplane was owned and piloted by Daniel Stone. His passenger was Earl Waltz.

Radio Highlights For Tonight

The Air Force Sing-Song will be from Regina, Saskatchewan tonight and will be heard over CBL at 10.00 (DST). At 10.15 (DST) Rep. Karl E. Mundt will speak on "America and Destiny" over WGR. Sen. Tom Conally speaks at 10.45 (DST) over WHAM on "Armed Security."

TWENTY WORKERS

Police were told that the driver, along with another truck, was supposed to meet the workers at a designated spot and take them to the job at Burlington; the second truck had not kept the appointment by the time for departure, it was reported, and Farnsworth had loaded all the men in the one truck and started out or Burlington.

Burlington Street at the scene of the accident was strewn with crushed lunch-pails, blood and pieces of clothing as well as parts of the truck and some tools being taken to work by the men.

British Position Strengthened By Aosta's Collapse

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington, May 20 (AP)—The prime strategic importance of the Greek Island of Crete is reflected in Berlin reports that it will be the next German-Italian objective in the struggle for control of the Eastern Mediterranean.

While that water-guarded remnant of free Greece remains in British-Greek hands, the Axis will be seriously hampered in expanding the war against Britain in Iraq or in converting the Franco-British clash in Syria into a stab at the Suez Canal defences.

Meantime, surrender of the major remaining Italian force in Ethiopia, the Duke of Aosta's army, has eased the situation for Britain. That surrender, ending the most valiant stand Italian forces have made in this war, freed virtually all British Imperial forces in East Africa for us elsewhere, and that at a time when they are vitally needed.

Can Move Bulk of Troops

Presumably, final mopping-up in Ethiopia can be left now to Ethiopian troops, with some British air and technical assistance. The bulk of the British and Imperial air forces in East Africa can be shifted immediately to Iraq, to North Africa or to Crete or other Eastern Mediterranean bases. From Crete, seventy miles off the Greek mainland, British air forces can and already are striking at Axis attempts to span the Eastern Mediterranean by sea or air to take advantage of the war in Iraq or of the situation in French-mandated Syria.

How large an army the British Command can now rush up from East Africa to bolster forces in Iraq or in Egypt is a matter of conjecture. There has never been any authoritative estimate of the Imperial forces on that front.

There are indications that very substantial forces of Indian and South African troops were engaged in Ethiopia and are already being shifted as seasoned veterans to the real danger zones.

Crete Powerful Obstacle

The Italian surrender in Ethiopia was peculiarly well-timed from the British point of view and ill-timed for Axis purposes for that reason. Rome and Berlin unquestionably hoped that Aosta's army could hold on in its mountain fastnesses indefinitely, and keep important units of the Royal Air Force and the Imperial Army in that remote area while the critical Axis campaigns in North Africa and in Iraq developed.

With the virtual collapse of Italian resistance in East Africa, there seems urgent reason for Nazi-Fascist strategists to turn the heat of their eastern offensive on Crete. It is a powerful obstacle to transportation of major Axis forces across the Eastern Mediterranean to Syria or Iraq.

British reports of continued quiet in Iraq indicate that as yet no substantial German force has arrived on the scene, or that such Nazi planes as have reached there via the Dodecanese Islands and Syria are hampered by lack of fuel. Nor is it yet clear whether French threats to meet British force with force in Syria mean French intervention in the conflict beyond purely defensive measures for protection of air fields bombed by Britain because of suspected servicing of Nazi planes en route to Iraq.

SON BELIEVED DROWNED

Cornwall, Ont., May 20 (CP)—Mr. and Mrs. David Craig of nearby Lancaster said Monday night they had been notified yesterday their son, Sgt. Courtland Craig of the Royal Canadian Air Force, is missing and "presumably drowned" as the result of a training flight somewhere in Scotland.

Sgt. Craig joined the Air Force as a Gunner a year ago and went overseas last January.

BERLIN REPORTS

24 Ambulance Drivers

(The ship was carrying 24 American ambulance drivers and 20 ambulances from New York to Alexandria for service with the British and Free French forces in Africa. In all, 138 Americans and at least 22 Canadians were aboard.)

Nazis quoted American and British press statements in which the sinking of the ship was called an instance of Nazi barbarism or the beginning of unrestricted sea warfare.

"The facts show that it was anything but the kind, indeed it was an instance of the most humane and legal destruction of a vessel which was bringing most valuable supplies to the enemy," a spokesman said.

Nazi sources did not say where in occupied territory the crew and passengers were taken. Nor would they say where the sinking occurred.

To a question whether the Zamzam was destroyed by U-boat, the spokesman said "It's hardly to be assumed that a submarine could take hundreds of survivors aboard."

In New York, meanwhile, Thomas Cook and Sons, passenger agents for the Zamzam, announced they received a message from their Cairo office this morning stating: "Understand Captain Smith safe. Hope advise you further shortly."

The agency said it was its custom to use the name of captains instead of the names of ships in messages and that this message therefore would mean to them that the Zamzam itself was safe.

No Munitions Aboard

Also in New York, the American Export Lines, freight agents for the Egyptian line, declared the Zamzam carried a general cargo containing no war materials, unless the ambulance unit was considered as such by the Germans.

There were "absolutely no munitions or chemicals" taken aboard in United States ports, a spokesman said, adding it was felt certain none had been loaded in South American ports.

"Even paint with a low flash point was not permitted on the boat because of the war and the number of passengers," he said.

While missionary and British-American ambulance corps officials expressed relief when told of Berlin's announcement, the president of the latter, William V. C. Ruxton, said the loss of nearly $100,000 worth of equipment on the vessel was an argument for U.S. navy convoys.

Hope for Further News

Rev. Dr. Emory Ross, general secretary of the Foreign Missions Conference of North America, said his organization was hoping "for further confirmation" of the Berlin information.

"We have notified various missionary boards and societies and are seeking by every means to follow up this lead through our organization and the State Department," he said.

Ruxton said his organization would "do all in our power to find the location of these men and see that they are supplied through the International Red Cross with what they need to make them comfortable while in captivity."

"The loss of nearly $100,000 worth of much-needed materials donated by generous Americans will be replaced," Ruxton said, "and we hope that by the time this is ready for shipment Congress will have seen the necessity of convoying and that further shipments will go over guarded by our navy."

3 NEW ARRESTS

Bruised About Face

Police said the body had bruises about the face, head and neck. They found no money in his clothing although when last seen he was believed to have had about $80 in his pockets—and this they interpreted as strengthening their theory that robbery might have been a motive for Walton's death.

Search for the missing businessman ended late yesterday when two Ottawa youths—Jean Maurice Boudreau, 17, and Aurele-Richard, 19—noticed a body in the river as they rowed under the Interprovincial Bridge across which a stream of cars flows to and from Hull, Que.

The boys towed the body behind the boat until they came to a boathouse where police, summoned by an anonymous telephone message were waiting.

More Than 100 Questioned

Since Walton disappeared police have questioned more than 100 persons in connection with the case.

Yesterday Rodolphe St. Jean of Ottawa was remanded a week after pleading not guilty to a charge of obstructing justice and Leo Lamour of Gatineau Point, Que., was remanded on a charge of attempting to obstruct or mislead a Court of Justice.

Bobby Walton, youthful star with Sydney Millionaires of the Cape Breton Amateur Hockey League, came here from his home at Kirkland Lake, Ont., recently to aid in the search for his father. Young Walton, formerly of Kirkland Lake Blue Devils and Niagara Falls of the Senior Ontario Hockey Association, is an only son.

A native of Cobourg, Ont., the dead man is survived by his father, his widow, his son and four brothers—Frank of Kenora, Ont., Fred of Parry Sound, Ont. and Robert and Matthew of Ottawa.

NAZI PARCHUTISTS

There was no immediate indication of the strength of this Nazi invasion by air of the British and Greek defended seat of the Greek Government. Crete also is a bastion of Britain's naval control of the Mediterranean.

The first real test of parachute troops came in the German invasion of Norway April 9, 1940, and a month later they were used in force in the low countries for deep thrusts to paralyze communications behind the lines and to seize air bases for subsequent air-borne troops.

They also were used in taking the Corinthian Isthmus in the Greek mainland campaign, just ended.

British Advance 15 Miles

In Iraq, a communique said, British forces have advanced 15 miles toward Baghdad from the Habbaniyah air base, crossing the Euphrates River and occupying the village of Fallujah, 40 miles from Baghdad. The important bridge crossing the Euphrates there was found intact.

At Habbaniyah itself and at Basra, on the Persian Gulf, the situation was described as continuing quiet.

On the East African front, arrangements were reported proceeding to complete the surrender of the Duke of Aosta's Fascist forces at Amba Alaji, in Northeastern Ethiopia. Torrential rains had operations curtailed in the southern part of the country.

Patrolling activities were said to be continuing in the Salum area, on the Libyan-Egyptian border while the situation at Tobruk, 80 miles to the west, was declared quiet.

EAST END BOYS BOMB SNUFFERS

Self Reliant and Quick-Witted They Save a Lot of Damage by Quick Action

London (CP) — Sixteen-year-old Mickey O'Connor comes from the little streets of the East End where there's no room for grass to grow between the tightly packed houses and where the sun scarcely ever penetrates.

Youngsters of the East End, who have to make their own way early in life, grow up self-reliant and sharp-witted. Mickey is no exception. He saved a church from destruction in one of the German "reprisal" raids on London and helped put out eight other fires the same night. The rest of that night he bicycled and walked through bomb-riddled streets delivering messages between A.R.P. stations.

"I just had to save the church," he said, "because I sleep in the crypt there with my father. He slept there for months in a 500-year-old coffin in the crypt, but it has been taken away." Two fires were blazing on the roof. Mickey with water and a stirrup pump climbed a narrow stairway. He tackled fires so efficiently they were easily brought under control. About 350 people were sheltering in the crypt.

Belfast (CP) — Maj.-Gen. Sir James Cooke-Collis who had two narrow escapes when London was bombed and had a fine record in the South African and First Great War died quietly at his home here, aged 65.

With France in chains, American and British dress designers are moving to take over leadership of the world of fashion so long held by Frenchmen and Frenchwomen. When racing opened at Belmont, N.Y., a fashion terrace was featured to supersede the famed centre at Longchamps near Paris. This dress a grape-and-white silk print, with grape straw hat, was one of the models displayed.

FRENCH MINISTER

It was acknowledged yesterday that Syrian anti-aircraft batteries had fired on British planes over Syria.

Ready to Fight for Seized Colonies

Vichy meanwhile indicated it was ready to fight to regain African colonies seized by Gen. Charles de Gaulle's Free French forces.

With Vice-Premier Jean Darlan en route to Paris—presumably to continue collaboration negotiations with Nazi representatives—the Vichy information office asserted the time had come for the recapture of territories taken over by "De Gaullist rebels."

The statement—which followed by only a few hours an announcement last night that French anti-aircraft batteries had begun firing on British planes over Syria—declared that Vichy "can not permit any foreign government to intervene" to frustrate this purpose.

"It is necessary to underline one point—that this problem of rebellion is to be settled solely between France and the rebels," the information office said, adding that complete French sovereignty "must be established" over the lost territories.

Germans Want Control Re-Established

There was no indication of how this statement might be linked with Berlin-Vichy collaboration plans. There have been rumors in Vichy for some time, however, that the Germans have been pressing Vichy to attempt to re-establish control of colonies as one of the terms of the agreement.

(In London, British sources expressed belief the Nazis had instigated the Vichy statement. They suggested that Vichy might hand back to Germany part of the African Colonies of Togoland and the Cameroons which the Germans lost in the First Great War and then grant Nazi troops free passage across French possessions to bases from which they could strike at Free French and British forces.

Commenting on this possibility an authoritative London source said: "Only a small force could march across the French Sahara Desert, but even a comparatively small force could be a devil of a nuisance".)

Beyond an acknowledgment that French anti-aircraft batteries had fired on British planes over Syria, there was no official comment on developments in that Vichy mandate.

(The Royal Air Force has been attacking Syrian airdromes where Nazi planes admittedly have been landing with Vichy approval en route to aid Iraq rebels battling British forces.)

Free French Control Large Area

The information office statement asserted that messages written by "Rebel French" military leaders had been dropped on Syrian towns from British planes, indicating that "one of the objects of English politics is to separate Syria from Metropolitan France".

Most of the "rebels" under de Gaulle, the statement declared, are "good Frenchmen who have been betrayed".

The French African possessions which the Free French forces control cover an area of approximately 1,000,000 square miles and have a population of more than 3,400,000. Included are a huge section of French equatorial Africa, Gabon, the Cameroons and Chad territory, extending from the West African Coast north and east to Italian Libya and the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

The Vichy government has a large and well-equipped army stationed in North Africa under Gen. Maxime Weygand which presumably would be called upon in any attempt to regain the colonies now held by the De Gaullists. How many men Weygand has under his command is a military secret.

The Day in Parliament

(By The Canadian Press)

TODAY

The House will consider Budget taxation proposals in committee of ways and means.

The Senate will resume sittings after adjournment since last Thursday.

YESTERDAY

The House in committee passed changes in the Income Tax and Excess Profits Tax Acts; heard Conservative House Leader Hanson urge Finance Minister Ilsley to postpone action on new succession duties until they are discussed with the provinces; J. P. Pouliot (Lib. Temiscouata) criticized the Government's Constitutional right to invade this taxation field; Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced Parliament will adjourn when its present business is completed, instead of proroguing; and his comment that nothing is giving the United Kingdom and other allied governments more concern at the moment than developments in the relations between Vichy and Germany.

The Senate did not sit.

50 NAZI PLANES DELIVERED

New York, May 20 (AP)—The British Broadcasting Corporation today quoted a Cairo dispatch saying that, in addition to 800 tons of war materials already sent from Syria to Iraq, about 50 Nazi planes have been delivered to the Iraq rebel forces.

It also reported that the route from Beirut, Lebanon, to Northern Palestine had been mined.

BUDGET TAXATION HOLDS INTEREST OF THE COMMONS

Hanson Urges Postponement of New Succession Duties Until Provinces Conferred With

DEBATE CONTINUES

(By C. R. Blackburn)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 20.—(CP)—Consideration of budget taxation resolutions was to be resumed today in The House of Commons with the new Federal Succession duties the first item of business.

This section of the Budget ran into opposition late last evening after the House in Committee of the whole had passed changes in the Income Tax Act and the highly-technical excess profits Tax Act.

Conservative House Leader Hanson, while not opposing the principle of the new succession duties, urged Finance Minister Ilsley to postpone action until there has been a discussion with the provinces.

He said he feared there would be a duplication of taxation in this field which hitherto has been occupied exclusively by the provinces and suggested the provinces might vacate it in favor of one general Federal tax.

More specific opposition was advanced by J. P. Pouliot (Lib. Temiscouata) who questioned the constitutional right of the government to invade this field, particularly at a time when the Dominion had cut off aid to the provinces to meet unemployment relief costs.

House to Stand Adjourned

During the day Prime Minister Mackenzie King suggested that party whips get together in an effort to speed up work of the session in order that early adjournment might be reached.

At the same time Mr. King announced that parliament would not be prorogued when the business was completed, but would stand adjourned. This would make it possible to deal with the St. Lawrence Waterways agreement at the present session if it were ratified by the United States Congress, Mr. King said.

The Prime Minister declined to make any statement immediately on the government's reaction to developments in the relations between the Vichy government and Germany. He said nothing was giving the United Kingdom and other Allied governments more concern at the moment, but that it would not help to make any premature statement or take premature action.

Many Questions Asked

The day's discussion on Budget changes was occupied almost entirely by questions from the Conservatives and Mr. Ilsey's answers. Although eleven Conservatives participated in the discussion Mr. Hanson was most frequently on his feet.

Apart from Mr. Pouliot the only Liberal to take extensive part in the debate was D. A. McNiven (Lib. Regina City) who contended the heavy taxation under the excess profits taxation would render many Saskatchewan businesses "perpetually bankrupt".

Members of the C.C.F. party criticized the Conservatives' opposition to the taxation changes. Members of the New Democracy remained completely aloof.

Hanson Leads Opposition

Mr. Hanson and H. R. Jackman (Con. Toronto-Rosedale) led the opposition to increases in the excess profits tax which brings the flat rate of corporation income and excess profits tax combined to 40 per cent.

They expressed fear that such a heavy burden on corporations would bear unfairly on those who depended upon corporation stock revenue for a living and would unreasonably depress the market value of stocks.

D. G. Ross (Con. Toronto-St. Paul's) also criticized certain phases of the excess profits tax, particularly one section which he said "directly excludes" the possibility of money borrowed from a bank and used in a business being treated as capital. Mr. Ilsley in reply said the business man could deduct from his profit the interest which he pays to a bank, thus reducing his excess profits tax payments.

Urged 100 Per Cent Taxation

Clarence Gillis (C.C.F. Cape Breton South) protested against solicitude for the wealthy. He urged a tax of 100 per cent on excess profits instead of the effective rate of about 75 per cent which exists.

"These spokesmen for the corporations are ill-advised to stand up here and waste the time of the House to preserve for corporations 25 per cent more profit than they were making prior to the war," Mr. Gillis said.

Mr. Hanson at one stage was in conflict with one of his own followers, Karl Homuth (Con. Waterloo South) who in the course of an appeal for a board which might judicially pass upon individual taxation cases, criticized the legal profession.

"Oh, leave the lawyers out," exclaimed Mr. Hanson, himself a lawyer.

"We have too many of them in this House," Mr. Homuth retorted.

"DAUGHTER OF DESTINY"

By ELEANOR ATTERBURY COLTON

CHAPTER XXVII

For an instant that stretched time into infinity, Devona and Talbot faced each other across that handsome room. A clock ticked sonorously somewhere, Devona realized. And a muffled thudding that must be of her own heart pounded like distant kettle drums.

She waited, scarcely breathing, searching for the right word, the right gesture——

"Well?" Talbot finally broke the spell himself with a quietness that she had, a few moments ago, mistaken for calm reasonableness. "Why did you come back? This isn't going to be pretty."

Why She Came Back

Devona moistened dry lips, tried to match that false calm with real control. "I had to come back."

"No you didn't. And you'd better run along now. Surely a man has a right to"—his lips twisted—"his own decisions".

"No, not in this decision." She took a step toward him, flinched as she saw his fingers tighten around the gun's handle. "Not when it involves others".

"Fortunately, this decision doesn't involve any one but myself. Except", he added dryly, "as it relieves them of responsibilities".

"But it does, Tal. It involves all of us.

"All of whom?"

"Every one who loves you".

He shrugged. "Dale, maybe. But I'm a drag around his neck. He'll be better off. Otherwise, there's no one."

"Yes, there is. We all love you —I do, Tal". That reached him—almost. Instinctively she knew she'd touched him finally. "You mustn't do this—to me".

The taut fingers on the gun butt relaxed a little. "Do you mean that, Devona?"

"But—of course, Tal". It was worth it, that little lie, she assured herself watching him drop the gun slowly onto the desk. Besides, it wasn't exactly a lie. She did love him—for himself, for the traits he shared with his brother, for his need of her. Not the way she loved, had loved—Dale. Still—

In His Arms

"Devona—you mean——" Tal's grim face relaxed, almost imperceptibly at first, changed from despair to heartbreaking hopefulness.

Mute now with relief, Devona nodded, held out her arms to him. In the next moment he'd crossed the room to her, gathered her convulsively into his arms.

"Oh, my darling. Oh, my God, Devona. You don't know what this means! Devona, I love you. I've wanted you. I need you, my sweet".

The door, which had stood open since that terrible moment that Devona had flung it wide, closed softly now. The sound of its latch jerked at their attention.

Still holding her close, Tal spoke over her shoulder.

"Hello, Dale".

For an instant Devona stared straight ahead at Tal's satin lapel. An instant in which she tried to discipline the expression on her face, regiment the routed emotions fleeing now like some ragged army through her mind. When she turned, she met the strange smile on Dale's lips, heard a note of—could it be hatred—in his voice.

"Well—sounds as if congratulations were in order, Tal".

"I'll say!" Tal's face was a study in proud delight. "And what's the idea of busting in on a guy when he's right in the midst of his proposing"?

Dale managed a grin. "Sorry, old man. I had no idea you were up to that".

"Neither did I—until just now". Tal hugged her close, smiled down at her. "May I present the future Mrs. Brasher", he said. Then, laughing, he amended, "The future Mrs. Talbot Brasher, I should say".

A Bitter Tongue

Unfaltering, Devona met Dale's glance as it travelled from Tal's jubilant face to her own trembling smile.

"Congratulations, Tal", Dale said, but he looked at her. "And my very best wishes for your happiness".

But Dale's eyes were bafflingly masked. He only smiled carelessly as Tal burst out of the room shouting, "Abbot! Hey, there, Abbot! Open that champagne. Both bottles. We're celebrating. Abbot! Where the devil is that—"

As Tal's steps thundered down the hall, Devona and Dale faced each other across a widening chasm of silence. Finally Dale bridged it with a sarcastic:

"So it's to be—Mrs. Talbot Brasher".

Dale Adamant

Obviously he hadn't seen —he didn't understand! She wanted to sink into that chasm and pull it over her head. "Yes", she managed quickly. "Talbot needs me".

Perhaps it was better this way. For Tal's sake, Dale had better not know about—about the gun.

"And I presume"— Dale bowed a little, "you need him, too?"

"Of course". Quick loyalty to Tal, to her own promise to him, prompted her as, head high, she met Dale's challenge levelly. "I love him", she added quietly.

"I see. Isn't it rather — sudden?"

She flushed, her eyes lowered defeated for the moment before the savage assault of Dale's sarcasm.

"I—I——" she stammered helplessly, bit her lips as words refused to come.

"I didn't know you had ambitions in his direction".

That stung her pride out of its muteness. "What do you mean?"

"I mean that for an ambitious little girl like yourself, I'd rather assumed marriage would have to have a handsome price tag attached. And ——" His smile was like a smart slap in the face, "if you didn't know, you should be told how that the Brasher fortune is practically nonexistent".

"How—how dare you——"

No Money

"Surprised! I don't wonder! But you see—it's this way. What the depression didn't do to us, this little plunge into backing Tal's play, finished up. We're broke, my dear little future sister-in-law. So—lest you be letting yourself in for something——"

Fury swept a crimson floodtide into her cheeks as Devona took a step toward him, her slim fists clenched, her words coming low and even as she lashed out at him.

"You're despicable. You're attributing to me, and to Tal, your own contemptible motives. I love Tal. I'll marry him for that reason—and for no other".

"God!" Dale applauded dryly, leaned one elbow against the fireplace mantel with magnificent carelessness. "And let's hope you really mean that. Tal couldn't stand another blow, I suppose you realize. Or—would anything like that really concern you?"

She clutched a chair back to keep her hands from flying to his smiling, sarcastic face. "I realize it—perfectly. I shan't let him down".

"Again —good". His eyes travelled slowly from her face, down the length of her soft velvet gown, to the points of her pretty slippers, and then back. 'At that, it will be one way to advance your —career, won't it?"

Thinking of Tal

So that's what he thought! Just a cheap opportunist! Devona's rage turned to dust in her throat. Distrusting her, Dale was only fighting her this way to protect Tal from what he probably believed was unscrupulous selfishness. How could she make him see that—

"Please believe me Dale. It's not my career—it's Tal's I'll work for now. You're so wrong about—"

"We shall see". Dale shrugged and then as Tal's footsteps sounded again in the hall outside, he turned to her, his face grim, his voice lowered.

"If you do let him down, if you add one iota to the agony he's just been through, by all the gods, Devona Raebourne, I'll kill you. He's the only brother I've got and I happen to care more about what happens to him than anything else. Understand that? Or can you?"

Mute, she nodded, fought back tears.

"If you don't mean it when you say you love him——" Dale's eyes blazed—"then I'm warning you to clear out while there's yet time".

"I——"

But Tal's hilarious return spared her an answer. Carrying a tray of thin-stemmed glasses and champagne in a silver ice bucket, he kicked open the door, strode triumphantly into the room.

"You play bartender, Dale," he commanded and, turning, swept Devona into his arms again. "What do you think of my bride-to-be, old man? Isn't she——" his eyes devoured her, "gorgeous?"

"Very", Dale agreed dryly, picked up the silver handled bottle opener.

Tal is Jubilant

"And to think I found out she loved me on just the night I needed to know it more than anything else", he added, seriously, as he held her close. Then, releasing her, he stamped across the room. "You know Dale, that play's lousy. I know it, too. I'm not sap enough to believe in it now. But it has possibilities. I'll do it over. No—I won't." Hands jammed deep in his pockets. "I'll do another. As Devona says. A better one. By heavens, I will. And I'll make those darned critics eat every word they're rushing off to get printed right this minute. Won't I, darling?" Crossing to her again, he gave her chin a little shake, kissed the tip of her nose lightly.

Smiling, she nodded. "Of course you will".

"And I'll pay you back, Dale—all your share of the estate that's gone up with this mess". Tal's face was flushed, eager.

Dale poured the bubbling champagne with a steady hand. "Forget that. It was a gamble I took with my eyes open. We lost. That's all".

"But next time we won't lose", Tal insisted. "With Devona beside me now——"

"Yes. With Devona" — Dale handed her a brimming glass—"you should really—get places".

"A toast, Dale", Tal prompted, lifting his glass. "You propose the first one".

Dale lifted his glass. "To my future sister-in-law—and may her every ambition be realized".

May Withdraw Vichy Envoy From Batavia

London, May 20 (CP)—The British Broadcasting Corporation last night quoted a report from Batavia, capital of the Netherlands, East Indies, to the effect that "plans are being formulated" for the withdrawal of the Vichy Government's representative from Batavia.

The BBC also quoted an unnamed Batavian newspaper as urging that the Vichy representative should not be permitted "to fly the French flag."

The newspaper added:—

"The once-honored tricolor has gained the qualities of a red flag in the eyes of a bull, Marshal Petain and Darlan (Vice-Premier Jean Francois Darlan) have stepped themselves in the mire of treachery.

"We hope that we shall not see this flag flying over the Consulate until it has been adorned with the cross of Lorraine, the symbol of Free France."

Broken Eggs, Damaged Fruit Delay Military Mail

Damaged fruit, broken glass jars which had contained maple syrup and cartons of fresh eggs, all broken, causing damage to the surrounding mails, are being removed from parcels addressed to our Overseas Troops at the Base Post Office, Ottawa.

Canadian Postal Corps officials have reported to Hon. William P Mulock, K.C., Postmaster General, that last week 16 parcels in one bag of army mail missed a despatch because they required repacking, as a result of the breakage of a glass jar of maple syrup in one parcel. Fresh eggs that had been enclosed without wrapping, along with two tins of maple syrup in another parcel had also broken and spread. Five bananas with but a single paper cover and two thin cartons of eggs merely wrapped in paper were removed from other packages.

The above examples illustrate the folly of sending perishable or fragile articles through the mails to our Troops, especially in view of the long journey by land and sea under war time conditions. Parcels containing perishable goods likely to spoil within the time required for transportation and delivery, or which contain articles likely to become damaged in transit, are not acceptable for mailing.

If a parcel is worth mailing it is worth care in packing. All parcels should be fully prepaid, securely packed in strong containers, wrapped in several layers of thick paper and tied with strong twine. A slip containing the address of the soldier and the return address of the sender should be enclosed with the contents. The sender's address should appear on the cover. Completed. Customs Declaration forms are required on all parcels for our Troops abroad. Parcels for Overseas should be addressed as follows:

Regimental Number, Rank and name,

Name of Regiment or Branch of Service,

Canadian Army Overseas.

Time For Hesitation In Present Conflict 'Long Since Has Passed' Says Sen. Pepper At Hamilton

Hamilton, May 20. — (CP) — Senator Claude Pepper, United States Senator for Florida and one of the foremost advocates of all-out aid to Britain, said in the Convocation address at McMaster University here today that the time for hesitation in the present world conflict "has long since passed".

"Those who hesitate now run the violent risk of forever being lost," he said. "The world has never seen such a crusade as now sweeps across the globe . . . with every principle and instrument of science prostituted to purposes of destruction . . . .

"Our only hope to rally oppressed and dejected men and women . . .is to show them that our faith is not a wornout dogma, a hollow chant, but a living, vital fire".

Received Honorary Degree

Senator Pepper spoke at the Convocation ceremony, at which he re- the Bible, the Church, the Libraries, of Laws. Dr. Donald Church Balfour of Rochester, Minn., received an honorary degree of Doctor of Sciences, and Rev. J. Alexander Johnston, of Westmount, Que., a degree of Doctor of Divinity.

Senator Pepper said "the organism of progress has been many times throttled but never destroyed."

"The trek of the human family has been long and arduous. Can anything present or future be worse than we have mastered already? Candor bids us say no. What then is our course? To be steadfast, to be bold, to know that nothing can cheat us of our destiny; to look outward and not inward, upward and not downward, forward and not backward, that is the Way, the Truth and the Light.

Standards Must Be Raised High

" . . . the standards of the Cross, of all we love must be raised high the Homes of the old landmarks, ceived an honorary degree of Doctor and held up.

"Our strategy must not be a defence but a counter-attack. Let us confess that our way of life has been tardily adopted to the technology of the current day and that most absolescent of all our equipment is our thinking the excessive tenacity with which we hold to the old, the over-reluctance with which we embrace the new.

"We must tell those young men who have left their classes and their desks, their simple pursuits of peace, who have broken the ties of hope and home and family and soared into the clouds and plowed through the waves and across the desert sands—we must tell them that before God we will not let them down as we did their fathers.

"They must go with the conviction in their hearts that they are not sheep to the slaughter, but knights of a greater round table than King Arthur's on a mission as holy as the search of the Holy Grail.

May be Testing Time

"This terrible ordeal may be in the mysterious way of the Divine One—a testing time for the race when we, like Job, shall have our faith tried.

"We have already seen enough to know what the outcome will be. We have seen the aroused spirit of a great nation, a mighty empire rising like the glory of a morning sun which no thing on earth can darken or cool. We have seen the majesty of the human will rising unconquerable above every material assault which the force of hell may loose. We know that the greatest power on earth is the soul of many.

Entrusted with Tasks

The schools and colleges were entrusted with the task of "keeping the signal fires lighted," because "in the heavy night valiant men will lose their way if those lights go out; and they must not lose their way because they are the wise men bound east to keep their rendezvous with the Christ Child."

On the platform at the special convocation were President H. J. Cody of the University of Toronto; Maj.-Gen. S. C. Mewburn; Senator Pepper; Hon. Albert Matthews, Lieutenant-Governor and chairman of the McMaster Board of Governors; Chancellor H. P. Whidden and Rev. J. Alexander Johnston, of Westmount, Que.

FLIER KILLED, SEVEN PLANES DESTROYED BY FIRE

Air-Borne Phase Of Crete Invasion Enters 2nd Stage

3,000 More Nazi Troops Land But Situation Under Control Reports State

WARNING BROADCAST

London, May 21 (CP)—The battle for the invaded Greek island of Crete is growing fiercer as German air-borne shock troops keep pouring in, reliable sources declared today.

(The British Broadcasting Corporation said it now appeared that one or two sea-borne German troop transports also had penetrated the British defences of Crete and indicated that the Germans had gained at least a temporary foothold on the long island, including fields suitable for aircraft use.)

4,500 Believed Landed

On the basis of latest reports from the island, London sources said more than 4,500 German troops are believed already to have been landed by parachute, glider and transport plane.

One authoritative informant said at least one air-borne German unit totalling about 7,000 men were "involved" in the operation, but added that by "involved" he did not mean the whole unit already had landed.

(The 4,500 figure apparently is based on the 1,500 mentioned by Prime Minister Churchill yesterday and the additional 3,000 said to have been put on the island overnight, either by parachute or transport-glider.)

An attempt also has been made to land Nazi naval forces on the Mediterranean island, these sources said.

It was expected that further efforts to land parachute troops in Crete would be made today, but the situation was described as "well in hand."

Whether the Germans had succeeded in landing any sea-borne troops on the island was not disclosed. These attempts were reported concentrated at the western end of the island and in the Canea area, seat of the Greek Government.

Today's attack apparently followed the pattern of the initial assault yesterday, when the Germans began landing by parachute, glide and transport plane after a heavy aerial bombardment. Operating from bases on the Greek mainland, from 75 to 100 miles away, the Germans were said to be employing huge new Focke-Wulf air transports capable of carrying 50 to 70 men each.

The gliders employed in the landings were cut loose from towing planes at a great height many miles away from their objectives and coasted in without the telltale drone of motors. Some of the troop-carrying planes were shot down, but no figures were given.

News dispatches from Cairo quoted official Greek sources as saying that all the Nazi troops which landed on Crete yesterday had been killed or captured, but there was no official confirmation of this in London.

Churchill Gives Statement On Progress Of Fighting On Island Of Crete In The House

SITUATION IN HAND

London, May 21 —(CP)— Warning the Empire it must expect the fighting to continue with "increasing severity," Prime Minister Churchill today told how the Germans in one operation alone had dropped 3,000 parachutists on Crete.

This was in the Suda Bay area, he said. The attack began at 4.30 p.m. yesterday and two hours later "the greater part of these had been accounted for."

Although the fighting continued, "the situation was reported in hand at 9 p.m." he added in his statement to the House of Commons.

This was evidently the latest report the government had received.

Suda Bay, although available only to shallow-draft vessels, is Crete's best anchorage. It is located on the northwest corner and this is nearest the southern Greece airdromes which the German air force is using in its sustained aerial invasion.

Canea, the island capital, is less than five miles from Suda Bay.

Mr. Churchill's brief statement follows:—

"In the Suda Bay area further air-borne attacks commenced at half past four p.m. yesterday.

"About 3,000 men were dropped and by six thirty p.m. the greater part of these had been accounted four.

"Fighting continues and the situation was reported in hand at nine o'clock.

"The method of attack was Stukas and Messerschmitts, followed by gliders and parachutes.

"In the Heraclean and Retimo areas the attacks began at half past five by parachutes, and troop-carrying aircraft, many of which crashed, also landed.

"There are no details yet. Of course, we must expect that the fighting will continue in increasing severity."

Answering a question Mr. Churchill affirmed yesterday's statement that the first German parachute troops were dressed in New Zealand battle dress.

The Prime Minister added that the government was also advised that some Nazi aerialists were wearing English 'Tommies' battle dress.

As to whether such prisoners were executed as spies, Mr. Churchill said he was "not sufficiently informed on the exact circumstances."

"We must leave a certain amount of discretion to those on the spot," he said.

Propose U.S. Voluntary Registration Of Millions of Men for Civilian Defence

Washington, May 21 —(AP)— A plan for voluntary registration of millions of men above the present military age in the United States was reported under consideration today as Mayor La Guardia of New York began directing the vast new civilian defence program.

As director of civilian defence, La Guardia will receive no salary and will continue as mayor of New York. He also is co-chairman of the Canada-United States joint defence board.

Counting in more than 2,000,000 first great war veterans, authorities said there are approximately 10,000,000 men in the age group 36 through 45. (The age limits for military service registrants are 21 through 35.)

Furthermore, they pointed out, there were 27,000,000 women between ages of 21 and 46 from whom additional millions of volunteers could be drawn, if the registration were extended to cover them.

A final decision on adoption of the voluntary registration plan, it was said, will rest with La Guardia to whom President Roosevelt has delegated full authority for supervising the organization of civilian defences. Such defences include home guards, already formed in some states, air-raid warning and air-raid defence services, and the numerous services connected with recreational and social projects for men in the army.

It was noted that La Guardia was assigned among his other duties the job of looking after civilian morale, and it was expected that while his long-range objective would be to prepare against such possible dangers as airplane attacks, his immediate goal would be the stimulation of morale by making the defence drive a matter of personal concern to the millions who heretofore have had nothing personally to do with it.

U.S. ASKS VICHY FOR DECLARATION OF INTENTIONS

Hull Wants to Know Extent Of Future Collaboration With Nazis

LOSING FAITH

Washington, May 21 —(AP)— The United States, it was learned authoritatively today, has made the equivalent of a diplomatic call on the Vichy government for a forthright declaration of Vichy's future intentions in "collaborating" with Germany.

Vichy has been given to understand, it was said, that it cannot hope to restore American relations to harmony unless it is first prepared to supply full assurances in writing that France will hold rigidly to the terms of the June, 1940 armistice in all subsequent dealings with the Reich.

State Secretary Hull's sternly-worded explanation of U.S. view to French Ambassador Henry-Haye contained the diplomatic cue, informed sources asserted, that a formal note, putting the Vichy government on record, was the only solution.

French Ships at Martinique "on Manoeuvres"

The uncertainty over Vichy intentions meanwhile increased overnight with news from Martinique that the French cruiser Emile Bertin and the aircraft carrier Bearn had been to sea for what the commanding admiral called "routine exercises." The officer was quoted as saying that no real preparations for the ships' departure were being made.

As far as is known here, this was the first time the vessels have ventured from port since they berthed at the French colony in the Caribbean when France fell last year.

Informed sources were slow to accept the Martinique explanation that the purpose, in part, was to keep up the morale of the crews.

One theory advanced was that the "exercises" constituted a veiled warning to the United States that the warships were ready to resist any attempt to make the island a hemisphere protectorate, should the course of Vichy-Nazi "collaboration" so warrant.

Another conjecture was that the ships were making ready for a dash through the British blockade for some French base in Europe or North Africa. Such an attempt, it was said, would pose a difficult problem for the United States, for this country is unsympathetic to the thought of the two ships eventually finding their way into Axis hands.

MAINLAND BASES BOMBED

Cairo, Egypt, May 21. — (AP)— Heavy bombers of the Royal Air Force smashed last night at the Greek mainland bases of the German air invasion of Crete, but detailed results are not yet available, the Middle East Command of the R.A.F. announced today.

'Serious Losses' Suffered By Nazi 'Chutists

Cairo, May 21—(AP)—German parachutes and air-borne troops suffered "serious losses" in their attack yesterday on Crete and one detachment which penetrated the outskirts of Canea was "quickly surrounded and accounted for", a British Middle East communique said today.

All the German invaders—reaching the Greek Island by transport planes, gliders and parachutes—suffered yesterday what the daily communique termed "serious losses".

As for the fighting today, the communique said only: "Operations are continuing".

Here is how the High Command described the aerial invasion of Crete:

"Throughout yesterday the island was subjected to a series of intensive air attacks in the intervals of which fresh waves of German parachute and air-borne troops were landed at various points.

"Heavy fighting continued throughout the day in which the enemy sustained serious losses while ours were comparatively light.

"At one point a German detachment which succeeded in penetrating into the outskirts of Canea was quickly surrounded and accounted for".

19,000 New Prisoners

In Ethiopia the surrender of the Italian Viceroy, the Duke of Aosta, his staff and forces gave Britain a total of from 18,000 to 19,000 new prisoners, taken during and after the battle of Amaba Alaji. Aosta's staff included five Generals and "a number of senior officers." The British army also gained quantities of Italian war material.

In the Lakes Region south of Addis Ababa British forces were closing in on the remnants of two Italian divisions, having captured an Italian Brigadier and other prisoners.

In northeastern Italian Somaliland, "some hundreds" of Italians who had taken refuge in the town of Tohen, just occupied, were rounded up.

On the North African front the command reported "no change" in the situation at the Axis-besieged force at Tobruk, Libya, but said that mechanized patrols "again vigorously harassed the enemy" in the Sahum area, along the Egyptian-Libyan border.

In Iraq the British forces were continuing a roundup of rebel detachments in the area of Fallujah, already occupied. The situation at Habbaniyah and Basra was described as quiet.

CHURCHILL WILL GIVE STATEMENT

'To Relieve All Anxiety' Concerning Letters Said to Have Been Received From Hess

London, May 21.—(CP)—Prime Minister Churchill promised the House of Commons today an early statement to "relieve all anxiety" concerning letters the Duke of Hamilton is said to have received from Rudolf Hess prior to the No. 3 Nazi's flight to Scotland.

The Prime Minister gave this promise when asked by a member to read the letters to the house, "to let us see if anybody else is implicated".

Mr. Churchill said yesterday that the correspondence comes under the authority of Sir Archibald Sinclair, Secretary of State for Air, since the Duke of Hamilton is an officer of the Royal Air Force.

NAZIS MAY DELAY FREEING DRIVERS TAKEN ON ZAMZAM

Fear The Ambulance Drivers Who Pledged Service To De Gaulle, Would Divulge Secrets

AT ST. JEAN De LUCE

Berlin, May 21—(AP) — Nazi spokesmen asserted today that German military authorities will make sure American ambulance drivers cannot divulge any military information to the United States or Britain.

This came in response to the question whether the Americans captured in the sinking of the Egyptian liner Zamzam would be released soon.

Speedy release of the one hundred and forty Americans taken off the Zamzam before she was sunk in the South Atlantic by a Nazi warship previously had been forecast.

Americans to Leave Seen

A Nazi spokesman said it was expected that the Americans—declared safe at the Nazi-occupied French port of St. Jean de Luz—would be permitted to leave shortly for neutral countries. No mention was made of the disposition of twenty-three Canadians who were aboard the ship.

"It is a publicly known fact that the American patrolling system has for its chief purpose that of reporting on anything that might be of service to the British," the spokesman observed.

"It must be assumed that the ambulance drivers pledged to Gen. De Gaulle have a similar assignment."

(Apparently, it is left in doubt whether American ambulance men are to be freed or detained. It is possible the Germans count on the lapse of time before any release to nullify the importance of any information the Americans could give.

(Among secrets the Germans might be anxious to preserve may be the type and identity of the

Vichy Instructs Masters To Scuttle Ships If Intercepted

London, May 21 (CP)—Vichy has instructed master of French merchantmen to scuttle their ships if intercepted by British warships, the Ministry of Economic Warfare said today.

The statement said a copy of such instructions which had come into British possession was signed for Vice-Premier Jean Darlan by Rear-Admiral Auphan.

Although the British authorities said they knew of on instance when a French ship was scuttled, the order read that "except where contrary instructions have been received —formally, Captains must avoid by all means letting their ships and cargoes fall intact into the hands of the British authorities."

"Captains are informed that failure to obey these instructions will have grave consequences on permits now given to French traffic and will expose them personally to sanctions."

Saturday Post Changes Its Tune

New York, May 21.—(CP)— The Saturday Evening Post, which has supported an Isolationist policy for the United States in the war, said editorially today that America must make up its mind to "go on and on at any cost, to reconquer Europe and destroy Hitler there, even with American man power: or turn back".

The magazine, critical of President Roosevelt's policy which it claimed had carried the United States into a dangerous position, said it was too late to turn back: ". . . if we turn back we shall be remembered as the Falstaff nation of the world, boasting of a power it did really possess, boasting of how it would put it forth against the aggressor, and then changing its mind when the night came".

La Guardia May Visit London To Make Inspection

New York, May 21.—(AP)—Mayor La Guardia, director of the newly created office of civilian defence, was reported today preparing for an inspection trip to London.

City Hall reports said the mayor might head a delegation of six members of the United States Conference of Mayors, of which he is president.

POLICE PRESSING INVESTIGATION OF WALTON'S DEATH

Charges Laid Against Four Ottawa Women for Allegedly Concealing Information

BELIEVE MAN SLAIN

Ottawa, May 21—(CP)—Four persons were in custody and two others free on bail today as police pressed their 16-day investigation into the death of Charles G. Walton, 52-year-old Ottawa Engraving Company Executive whose body was recovered from the Ottawa River two days ago.

Late last night charges of attempting to obstruct the course of justice by concealing information were laid against four Ottawa women—Mary Pilon, 36, Lillian Gaddie, 26, Elizabeth Fitzsimmons, 42, and Mrs Florence McGinnis, 34. Three of them were arrested Monday night the fourth yesterday.

The two on bail while awaiting trial on similar charges are Rodolphe St. Jean, 32-year-old Ottawa taxi driver and Mrs. McGinnis' brother, and Leo Lamoureaux of Gatineau Point, Que.

BRITISH ISLES HAVE QUIET NIGHT

Adverse Weather Conditions Enforce Lull in Aerial Warfare

London, May 21—(CP)—Adverse weather conditions continued to enforce a lull in the air war during the night.

Nazi raids on the British Isles were confined to small-scale attacks on southwest England and stabs at South Wales and East Anglia.

Weather conditions over the continent prevented any major Royal Air Force activity.

The trees are being planted on the lawn of a home where the crash occurred. PO. Aitken's parents live on an adjoining farm.

Use of Gliders May be Laboratory Test Of Hitler's Plan for Britain's Invasion

By JAMES LONG
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

New York, May 21—(AP)—Germany's air attack on the Greek Island of Crete casts the glider for the first time as a weapon of war, co-ordinated with the now-familiar parachute troops in what may be a laboratory test of Hitler's plan for invasion of Britain.

The glider trains can carry more troops for less fuel than transport planes alone and have this additional advantage: The gliders, cut loose, can swoop to separate landings in spots where the planes never could land.

Germany has thousands of them and perhaps 100,000 pilots can fly them.

Most of the gliders carry six to eight soldiers in addition to the pilot. Some carry up to 14. There have been reports of experiments with giant gliders which might carry as many as 30.

The use of parachutists, which took on a serious military aspect last spring in the first days of the Nazi onrush into the Low Countries, has been a German stand-by ever since.

Modified Russian Tactics

Here, too, Nazi military minds modified the familiar Russian tactics of dropping 'chutists by the hundreds from huge carriers thousands of feet in the air. That gave ground forces too long a time to prepare to mop them up, or to pick them off as they drifted slowly down. The Nazis adapted a quick-action 'chute, a padded uniform, and a specially-hardened corps of jumpers so they could be popped

Training Plane Crashes Hangar At Portage La Prairie

Some Of The Aircraft In Hangar Hauled To Safety At Great Risk To Personnel

FIRE STILL BURNING

Portage la Prairie, Man., May 21 (CP)—An unidentified flier was killed and seven aircraft were destroyed today when a Tiger Moth training plane crashed into a hangar which housed airplanes of the No. 7 Air Observers School operated under the British Commonwealth Air Training plan here.

The pilot killed was at the controls of the training plane which crashed into the large double hangar and set it afire. Flames demolished the hangar along with the Tiger Moth plane and six Avro-Anson machines which were in the building at the time.

The dead airman was stationed at No. 14 Elementary Flying School here, also operated under the Commonwealth Air Training plan. It was not known immediately whether he was a Royal Canadian Air Force flier.

Airmen training at No. 7 Air Observers' School and at the No. 15 Elementary School use the same airfield here.

A Royal Canadian Air Force official said that as far as he knew no other personnel were injured in the crash or fire. He said that a number of other planes in the hangar at the time had been hauled to safety by Air Force men who rushed to the scene when the tiny Tiger Moth plane plunged onto the hangar.

The R.C.A.F. official said that destruction of the planes and hangar might interfere for a time with training plans at the Air Observers School.

The accident occurred this morning and the fire was still burning a few hours later.

British and Free French Planes Take Part in Extensive Raids

Jerusalem, May 20 (Delayed)—(AP)—More Nazi planes were reported to have arrived at the Syrian airports of Damascus and Palmyra yesterday and today and British and Free French planes again attacked both fields, starting large fires.

The raiding planes returned safely despite what was described here as German anti-aircraft fire.

French anti-aircraft batteries have fired back at raiding British planes, but this is the first report indicating German ground batteries are in operation on Syrian airfields.)

HALF OF VILLAGE OF ST. PRIME, QUE. IS DESTROYED

Ten Buildings Burned As Flames Are Spread By Strong Wind

FOREST BLAZE

Chicoutimi, Que., May 21 —(CP) — Ten buildings — representing about half of the little Lake St. John village of St. Prime—were destroyed by fire today, according to reports reaching here from the town of Roberval, nine miles from St. Prime.

The flames, spread rapidly by a strong wind, destroyed the village's telephone system and cut it off from communication with the surrounding district. Fire-fighting equipment from Roberval and St. Felicien was sent to the stricken village.

The fire was believed to have started at about six o'clock this morning in a sawmill owned by Eugne Roy. A boys' school, the telephone exchange and five or six homes, among them the houses of Arthur Neron and Arthur Grenier, were later destroyed. Neron's garage also was burned.

Information available here did not indicate whether the fire was yet under control or whether any resident of the village had been injured.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

BANK HOLIDAY

The local banks will be closed Saturday, May 24th., which is a Statutory Holiday, and will also remain closed on Monday, May 26th., which has been proclaimed a public civic holiday by the Belleville City Council.

CANNERIES INSTAL NEW EQUIPMENT

Evidence that canning factories in the Bay of Quinte district are preparing for a large pack this coming season which will assist greatly in meeting the wartime food requirements, is the fact that county canneries in both Prince Edward and Hastings are adding new equipment to hasten the processing of an expected increased crop.

Many factories in Prince Edward County are installing new pea-viners to take care of the pea crop, while additional warehouse accommodation is being provided for canned produce at other factories. At the local factory of the Canada Packers on Albion Street, preparations for canning of peas are being made for the first time in several years.

LIGHT BRINDLE DOG AWAITS ITS OWNER

City dog-catcher Thomas Thorne reports that on Tuesday afternoon he picked up a male light brindle mongrel dog in the neighborhood of Grier Street. The dog, minus a collar and the required dog tag will be kept until Thursday awaiting a possible owner and if not claimed will be disposed of.

CONSTRUCTION BEGINS ON SERVICE STATION

The second gasoline service station which the McColl Frontenac Oil Company will have either completely rebuilt or newly constructed in Belleville this year was started this week at the corner of Coleman and Moira Streets. Employees of the Harvey Construction Company, Kingston are making progress with the excavation work, preparatory for pouring concrete for the foundation while carpenters are busily engaged sawing lumber for the forms.

The service station building will be constructed of concrete cinder blocks and is to cost in the neighbourhood of $5,000. Construction of a service station on the site has been under consideration for quite some time with the city building permit having been taken out during the summer of 1940.

THIRD GROUP TRAINEES ARRIVING AT CAMPS

The third group of trainees to be called up under the four months' compulsory training scheme began arriving at Morrow Park, Peterborough, on Tuesday morning, and while camp authorities would not disclose the number of men expected it was learned they will be arriving at the centre all this week.

With the arrival of the new trainees, it is believed the camp will be up to strength and new trainees will be arriving and leaving each month. Following two months' training in Peterborough, local trainees will be leaving each month for Petawawa and other advanced training centres.

GIRL GUIDES TO TAKE PART IN ANNUAL CHURCH PARADE

Girl Guide companies of the city and environs will take part in their annual church parade on Sunday, May 25th, when six companies will march to St. Thomas' Church for service and another to St. Michael's Church.

The parade will be in charge of Commissioners Mrs. L. B. Riggs and Mrs. Branscombe.

AMERICAN TOURISTS SHOWING INCREASE

The influx of American tourists is increasing rather early this year, according to reports from Gananoque. Last week-end twenty-two automobile loads of American tourists was at one tourist home in Gananoque. The proprietor later revealed that all accommodations were utilized last week-end, while on the American holiday week-end of May 30th in 1940 only three carloads of American tourists visited the same camp. One family from Baltimore was so impressed with Canadian beauties and hospitalities they remained two days longer than had been their original intention.

REQUEST HIGHWAY BE RENAMED

The Prince Edward County Chamber of Commerce has recommended to the Department of Highways that Highway No. 22 from Kingston to Trenton, via Adolphustown, Picton and Wellington be named the U.E.L. Highway. The resolution was recently passed and presented to the Department at Toronto by the Governor Simcoe branch of the U.E.L. Association for consideration.

LABORERS FUSSY OVER KIND OF WORK THEY WILL ACCEPT

With a scarcity of labor existing in the Belleville area, laborers are beginning to be critical of the work they accept, according to Mr. W. D. Ross, Superintendent of the local Employment Service. Recently in several instances men seeking employment at the government office have been offered a few days' work by employers needing help, only to have the potential employee, after asking the rate of pay he will receive and questions regarding the nature of the work, decline to accept. In many cases employers have been noted to give a real sales talk before would-be employees accept the work.

This is in direct contrast to the situation prevalent a few years ago, according to Mr. Ross, when the local office was deluged with men willing to accept almost any kind of employment.

Mouse Gnawing Reporter's Shoe Disturbs Judge

New York, May 21 —(AP)— A duly-qualified Queens County Judge and an assistant District Attorney are prepared to make solemn affidavits it actually happened. Anyway, court procedure was interrupted when Judge Charles Colden was distracted by a gnawing sound. It was a mouse chewing on the sole of a newspaper reporter's shoe. A recess was called, and the mouse was captured.

Annual Music Festival At Queen Alexandra School

Attended by a large crowd of relatives and friends of the scholars, the annual Music Festival at Queen Alexandra School Monday afternoon showed in a very outstanding manner the progress that is being made at this school in singing, under the instruction of Miss Phyllis May, director of music in the Public Schools, assisted by the teachers of the school. The program of chorus singing was intermingled with solos, duets, quartettes and the talents of many individual singers from the smallest grades to the entrance class were revealed.

The visitors were welcomed by the principal, Mr. W. G. Anderson, who spoke of the pleasure it gave the staff and students to have such a large number of parents present. During the program Mr. Anderson called upon Mr. H. B. Fetterly, chairman of the Board of Education who was present, for a brief address. Mr. Fetterly spoke of the large attendance of visitors and said that nothing was so encouraging to the pupils as to have their own people so keenly interested in what they were doing. He congratulated the teachers on the splendid work they were doing and paid tribute to Miss May for her fine work in music. Music has not been long on the curriculum of the schools but in even a short time there has been much progress made and from the high standard of singing shown there promised to be excellent material for choirs in future years. Mr. Fetterly said he was proud to be associated with the schools of Belleville and see the progress that is being made particularly in music.

Czech Folk Dance Introduced

In the program of singing presented by the students, many appealing Spring and children's songs were heard while patriotic numbers were given prominence. All demonstrated the thorough training that is being received in music. For variety a Czecho-Slovakian folk dance was introduced and danced with much grace by the Music Appreciation Class.

A novelty number with a number of the children in costume was "Crooked Spectacles," which was particularly well done.

At the conclusion of the program Miss Eileen Comrie, on behalf of the children, presented Miss May with a basket of flowers as a token of their appreciation of her interest and guidance.

Bancroft and District

Bancroft, May 21 (Special) — A rather freak accident occurred on the main street of Maynooth Wednesday evening when Alvin Scott, son of Robert Scott who lives near the village, got into his father's car, which was parked by the side of the highway. The boy, sixteen years of age, got the car going and in some manner shoved it into reverse and finding his mistake instead of using his break he must have accelerated the machine for it shot across the highway striking a parked car broadside owned by Mr. Edward Sleeper damaging the parked machine considerably. The Scott car then shot back across the street striking a car head-on owned by Mr. Cecil Wasmund damaging the latter car extensively. Had it not been for the Wasmund car being in the uncontrolled car's path the boy would have crashed through the front windows of P. Flynn's hardware store. Provincial Constable S. W. Palmateer of Bancroft investigated the accident.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Wiggins, of Belleville, motored to Bancroft Thursday evening and will remain in town for two weeks, Mr. Wiggins relieving Mr. Clifford Broad of the Imperial Oil, the latter having left on a two week vacation.

Mrs. Reynolds, of Toronto, motored in to Baptiste Lake Thursday evening to attend the funeral of the late Mrs. George Hinds.

Mrs. George Hinds passed away at her home at Baptiste Wednesday in her eighty-second year following a lengthy illness. The late Mrs. Hinds came to Canada from England twenty-two years ago and was only in this country a few years, when she married Mr. George Hinds of Baptiste, this being her second marriage.

The funeral service was held in St. Mathew's United Church, Baptiste, Friday afternoon at 2 p.m. Interment being made in Mount Pleasant cemetery Bancroft.

The late Mrs. Hinds leaves to mourn her passing, her husband and two sisters, Mrs. F. W. Renals of Baptiste and Mrs. F. W. Moore of Exter, Ontario.

The late Mrs. Hinds will be greatly missed in the community in which she has made her home for so many years as she has been an ardent and active woman in all community activities including various branches of war work and also the church life.

The dairy on Hastings Street Bancroft, owned and operated by Mr. Cecil Barker, makes a much more attractive appearance to the passing public since it received a coat of paint this last week.

Mr. Alex Sutherland who operates a grocery store opposite the Barker Dairy has also applied a fresh coat of paint to his store frontage.

The play entitled "The Phantom Belle" which was sponsored by the Young People of St. John's Anglican Church of Bancroft made its first showing in Weaver's Hall at Maynooth Friday evening last. Following the play a dance was held the music being supplied by Mr. Jack Donaldson's orchestra. Those attending remarked highly of the talent of the play and also voiced their opinions that it was the best play they had ever seen staged.

Mrs. Harry McCaw and Grant of Belleville spent a couple of days in Bancroft the latter part of the week visiting with relatives and friends in the community.

Mr. Arnold Walker who has been conducting a garage business for a number of years at the Wiggins' Service Station, Bancroft, closed out his place of business and commenced working as mechanic for Mr. Hermon Maxwell the latter part of the week.

Mr. Alec Evans of Cheddar, and the occupants of his car which included his three brothers and William Bedford, miraculously escaped injury when the car in which they were proceeding towards Bancroft on Highway No. 28 took the ditch twelve miles west of Bancroft in the early hours of Sunday morning cutting off several guard rail posts in going into the ditch. The cause of the accident was attributed to the lights of the Evans car suddenly going out thus leaving the driver in the darkness. Although no one in the car received injuries the car was nearly a total wreck. Provincial Constable S. W. Palmateer investigated.

Plant Being Prepared For New Industry

Work in refitting and preparing the former Robb Organ Company buildings in the northwest part of the city and which have been leased by the Bristol Aircraft Corporation of Bristol, Virginia, for its new Canadian subsidiary the Bristol Air Products Company, is going along satisfactorily, it was learned today.

The new plant, which is expected to go into production sometime in June, will manufacture the new plastic veneer parts for airplanes.

As soon as the buildings are ready for occupancy, boilers and special cookers and other machinery will be installed.

Mr. C. C. Lincoln, Jr., president of the parent company in Bristol, Va., is expected in the city within a few days and will bring with him a number of experts who will superintend installation of machinery and other necessary inaugural work.

It is the intention of the company to select a group of young intelligent men, and put them through a course of instruction at the Bristol, Virginia, plant of the organization, and fit them for important positions in the Canadian subsidiary.

According to the number of telephonic and personal requests from skilled mechanics for positions in the new plant, an authoritative source said today, that present indications point to little or no trouble arising in securing the required number of mechanics and technicians here.

CITIZENSHIP WEEK CELEBRATED BY KIWANIS CLUB

Group Captain C. H. Keith, of Picton Air School, Principal Speaker

FINE DECORATIONS

"Citizenship Week" in Kiwanis will be closed by a monster Tag Day on Saturday and the luncheon on Tuesday at the Queen's Hotel was under the direction of Ray Grant, chairman of that committee and it was one of the finest meetings the club has enjoyed this season. The principal speaker was Group Captain C. H. Keith, Navigation and Armament commander at the Picton Bombery and Gunnery School and his message describing the reaction of the British people to the constant bombings was a revelation to the members of the club. He was fittingly introduced by Bernard Collins and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by A. H. Jones, a veteran of the last Great War. Group Captain Keith was accompanied by Flying Officer G. Garwood, Liaison Officer of the Picton School.

The tables were most tastefully decorated in Red, White and Blue with the flags of Great Britain, United States and Greece entwined about the room. Jack McVeigh, in charge of the Tag Day on Saturday, told the members plans that already had been made and read a letter from Mr. C. O. Knowles of the Evening Telegram explaining in detail the use for which the funds collected are put. Mr. Jack McVeigh asked for the hearty co-operation of every member in putting across this Tag Day for the people of bombed Britain. Dr. G. S. Cronk celebrated a Kiwanis birthday being introduced by Dr. R. A. Flynn and George A. Lee being the winner of the prize donated by the genial Sam.

In introducing Group Captain Keith, Mr. Collins stated the speaker was born in Saskatchewan and graduated in electrical engineering and joined the R.N.A.S. in 1915 and commissioned in the Royal Air Force in 1919 specializing in Navigation and Armament, later being appointed Assistant Director of Armament in the Air Ministry. After acknowledging the splendid welcome extended by the member, Group Captain Keith said in part:

"I feel that your choice of myself for the honor of speaking to you upon this occasion has been made because you feel I may be something of a novelty. True it is that I am only recently come to these parts, but it is a blessed feeling for any Britisher that no matter where he may go, if the Union Jack belongs there he will not feel he is come amongst strangers. Although Canada gave me birth, I have never stayed long in this Dominion, but I have been privileged to move over the face of this earth to a great many places where our flag flies, and everywhere I have found a quiet sense of decency guiding the lives of those I have met. Perhaps it is that quiet bond which has brought together men from all over the Empire to offer their all in our common endeavour to stamp out the beastliness with which the world is threatened, to defend these little islands from which the stock came to found our Empire.

"One may be amused at their different characteristics . . . . but their purpose is clear—their sincerity above doubt—their determination like rock. We have a big job on hand: we have this war to win, against an enemy which knows no scruples. This war is a national affair: no one is left out of it: no one need feel he is unable to lend a hand: everyone would suffer the consequences, if we lost. Willingly or unwillingly, we are united in the dreadful throes of war, and each of us will be wise only if he continually realizes this, and is prepared to offer his uttermost support to our common cause.

War a Frightful Thing

"Modern war is a frightful thing. No longer is it a struggle between fighting forces: it is a bestial process of destruction in which it must often happen that the armed might strikes down the aged, the infirm and the children of the race. Their plight may not impair the effort of war, but their suffering is none the less therefore. This tragedy to the innocents is not affecting our whole Empire directly, and yet of all of you here today, how many are there who have not relatives or friends or some cherished memory in our home-lands, which may not go the way of this ruthless destruction? Can you conscientiously dissociate yourselves from the pitiable havoc which brings tragedy, suffering, disaster to thousands of innocents across the great Atlantic Ocean? Are those of you who may not have lived amidst the fury of air raids in the cities of England or Scotland, fully grateful for the peace and plenty of this blessed Dominion of Canada? It is not for all to fight, nor will it happen that all shall suffer—some may actually benefit by this foul war, through the high wages paid for munition work—but I say to you that it is not only the privilege but indeed the bounden duty of those who enjoy sheltered lives, to do their part in furthering our effort by giving or loaning their uttermost cent to aid our common cause. I will not attempt to appeal to your logic by quoting figures: I prefer to appeal to your sentiment by talking of facts. Let me tell you a little of what I have so recently left — what I have left but which still goes on with unabated fury.

Life Must Go On

"The life of a great community must go on, or it perish. Have you thought of the heroes who drive those great lumbering buses which clutter up the streets of London — drive them through bomb raids, which have sent many folk scuttling into cover. An Air Raid siren wails its grim warning: the conductor rings his bell and stops the bus: "There is an Air Raid warning. Those who wish may descend and seek shelter, but the bus goes on." And the bus does go on. Or of the drivers and guards of those trains which make perilous crossings of the bridges over the Thames. I lived quite near the big railroad terminal of Victoria and often and often, between the crash of exploding bombs, I have heard a train rattling across Grosvenor Bridge. And the taxi drivers who do not gib at taking you through a raid — although you may be rushing off to a shelter—and who do not get any extra fare for behaving like heroes or of those slim trousered girls who wait, by day and by night, ready by their ambulances, to dash off to succour the victims of Hitler's vaunted military might. Driving an ambulance along the darkened streets of London — along street which may have been fouled by crater or fallen masonry—may be thrilling but it is not always a joy ride.

Falling Bomb Mischievous

"There is nothing so mischievous as a falling bomb. None shall say where it may land—unless one may give thanks to the Almighty that so few of Hitler's bombs achieve the maximum of damage. Yet once in a while some hit occurs which is devastating to the great network of underground services which are the life veins of a great city. There may be temporary dislocation, but nothing happens for which a remedy has not been planned. The Home Office is informed, and the planned bye-pass service is put into operation, and the damage is put in hand for repair. For weeks the busiest of London traffic wended its cautious way over a flying-bridge, improvised by the Royal Engineers to cross a disastrous bomb crater. London may occasionally be shaken, but it moves on its busy way.

'I had always been expecting the gas-works on the south side of the Thames, opposite my block of flats to be hit. One night it was, and a ghostly hissing sound followed the explosion. I dashed out to see what was happening: a great steam-range had been hit and a gas trunk set alight. Clouds of steam were rising more than a hundred feet into the air, and were illuminated a gory red by the flaming gas. A weird fascinating sight—and then another bomb fell into the river and we all fell flat and were soused with the water it sent up. That hit of the gas-works deprived me of gas for my cooker and refrigerator for six weeks: how I cursed Hitler.

Only One Serious

"My flat was in a very modern building, which has taken 12 direct hits up to the time I left, yet only one was serious. A 1600 kilogramme bomb penetrated from the ninth to the third floor, and opened up the side walls all the way down, yet only 8 people were killed. At least we thought it was only 8 but five weeks later a woman's decapitated head was found on the top of the elevator cage of the next house. It had been going up and down, in normal service until its presence became self-evident.

"The face of London is scarred but its people are not scared. The superlative spirit of Cockney humour counts for a lot, these days. You may have heard of the cockney in Holborn who was sweeping up the fragments of his shattered shop-front window, and who remarked to a passer-by: "Mr. 'Itler's bloomin' 'ouse-maid—that's me."

"No where in the United Kingdom can one be certain of escape from the indiscriminate fury of the raiding hun. For ten months I had commanded my bomber squadron, and then I felt a few days change of scene might be helpful. I motored right down to the end of the county of Cornwall, and there my wife and I sought a few days peace in a farmhouse in a centuries-old village, lying in a tiny valley. A sweet inoffensive place, where one need never feel the slave of Time. Our second night there a raid alarm sounded, and I could hear the shock of the first of a "stick" of bombs fall. The second told me much: it was obviously an under-water explosion, and I knew the "stick" was coming nearer. I bundled my wife into a deep cupboard in the thick old mud-and-stone walls, and before I could follow, the last two bombs fell and the whole ancient thatched house shuddered, and bits and pieces dropped away from the walls and ceiling. It was dark, and I went outside, my wife following. As I got out I smelt a foul smell, and shouted to her to stay in, as I feared a gas attack. Chemical warfare has come into my days much during most of the past ten years, but I must say this smell shook me. I felt Hitler had produced a new frightfulness—but my fears proved groundless. The last bombs had fallen into a cow-shed.

Terrifying Sound

"A bomb raid strikes different peoples in different ways. My wife is as brave as a lioness in most ways, but violent sound frightens her. The noise during a raid is stupendous, if it be near—like thunder, in the distance. The raid alarm is a terrifying sound, which is apt to set one's nerves on edge before one can possibly get hit. The ugly sound, to one who knows, is a ghostly clatter—like a bull let loose in a china-shop. That just precedes the crump of a bomb, and is the terrible clatter of falling masonry, as the bomb penetrates a building. One knows, that such a bomb has not been a miss. Fire is terrifying, and the possibility of incendiary attacks keeps many people from going out of an evening: they like to be at hand to tackle these vicious little bombs. If a big fire gets hold, it may be an ugly problem—especially as this is the time when a second attack may be expected—to create havoc amongst the gallant fire-fighters. I watched the great fire of London last December from the roof of the Air Ministry and my wife managed to gate-crash onto the roof of our flats. It was an inspiring sight—an inspiration of sheer terror. Where would it end? With a sickening feeling in my heart I saw great tongues of red flames licking in front and behind St. Paul's—yet St. Paul's was not touched. Anywhere in London one could read a newspaper that night by the rosy flicker which lit up the sky. Sad—yes, sad in very truth when one saw the lovely burnt out gems of ancient architecture—yet our war effort was not impaired and the determination of the people only stiffened.

Blackout, Unique, Gloomy

"Living in London is an experience which was unlike anything which ever happened before this war. The black-out is, itself, unique and gloomy. The process of ration-cards is unavoidably cumbersome, and often an unfortunate and weary house-wife stands in a queue to find the shop has sold out. Shopping takes much longer: one may have to try four or five shops to find what is wanted. Everything is more precious. Waste is less. Everything that can be conserved is set aside—it might save a little shipping. Children don't get as much to eat as their parents would like. Chocolates are hard to come by. Many parents are becoming vegetarians to give up their meat ration to their growing young. If one indulges in a really ample lunch, bang goes one's whole meat ration for that week: My wife and I were allowed two eggs per week.

"But these things hit all alike, and this has been responsible for the gradual development of a sublime sense of camaraderie. Gradually the greatest curse of modern life is lessening: selfishness is less evident. But, apparently, amongst the Germans this is not so. We bagged the crew of a bomber recently: three officers and two airmen. When the latter were given food, they refused to take any, as they had been told it was poisoned. When a tray of tea was given to the officers, one, seeing sugar in a bowl, immediately emptied the entire bowl into his cup, without thinking of his two comrades.

"For the first many months of this war, my wife was Commandant of about 200 Red Crorss nurses, dispensers, cooks, etc. at the Royal Herbert Military Hospital at Woolwich, and there they had some German prisoners. I am sorely afraid that it was her suggestion that these wounded were placed on the top floor, where they protested violently and when told that there was a big Red Cross painted right across the roof, they said that was no protection and the roof would be far better painted in camouflage.

Describes Charlady

At Air Ministry, at eight every morning a grand old body used to sidle into my office—the charlady: She had risen at dawn and made her way across London from somewhere near the Crystal Palace in a bus. I used to call her "Crystal Palace." It gave her great joy to explain in detail to me where the bombs fell round her during the previous night's raid. She used to set out various bits of my office furniture to represent well-known buildings in her locality—usually the public-houses, and she was genuinely disappointed when I had to confess I didn't know any of them. If there'd been no raid, she seemed glum and depressed. I think she loved raids because of the possibility of a Hun being shot down near enough for her to go and say a few words to the dying crew: Grand old woman: a splendid spirit in a body long-since only fit for the rag-bag. I gave her a bottle of Port for Xmas and God knows how many Hun aircraft she didn't see shooting across the midnight sky that night: "I don't mind if I work my fingers to the bone" she assured me, "so long as you lads keep them Spitfires spitting and the Hurricanes hurrying." Thank God London still has its "Crystal Palaces."

London Has Pride, Heart

"These days of War in England are so full of incident that I could, naturally, keep you listening—or, at least I could go on speaking, which may be a different thing—for many hours. A raid is a mental tonic to many—an agony to others. London and all the big cities are largely inhabited by small shop-keepers, whose "all" is in their little shop—and any night that "all" may be blown into little pieces, and their shop rumbled into primeval dust. What comfort is the "Raid Clear" signal to such as they?—even if they escape without physical injury. But, as London has great pride so she has a great heart, and the same is true of all the great cities of England. Amongst the civil population it is becoming a case of "All for one and one for all"—so "relief" is organized and provided. Thousands of good women in our neighboring U.S.A. are doing splendid work in their "Bundles for Britain" movement—yet more and more help is ever needed. You who live in safety and plenty in our Canada may never know the depths of misery which one night raid may bring to those upon whom it falls—please God you never will—please God we shall soon completely master the night bomber as we have the daylight raider. May I beg of you to make some thanks-offering for your own blessed immunity? I am a bad pleader—you have set me to do something which is out of my normal line of duty, but our service training teaches us to have a crack at whatever falls to us to do. May I ask your indulgence in my poor pleading—may I remind you that the greatest voice in all time said "And the greatest of these is charity" . . .

URGES BOND BUYING

In an address delivered by radio, Ignace Jan Paderewski, former premier of Poland, and pianist of world-wide fame, urges all Americans to purchase United States savings bonds. He reminded his listeners that "the money which you are invited to invest in these bonds will be put to work at once in the national defence program to protect the freedom and safety of your great and glorious country." He is shown broadcasting.

Wants U.S. Citizenship

"The proudest moment of my life will be when I can boast that I am an American," declared Simone Simon, the pert, pretty, but determined French movie star who is pictured during one of her evenings spent at the Hollywood centre for adult education at the Hollywood high school, attending citizenship classes.

AT THE BELLE

"There's Magic in Music"

One of the most delightful and refreshing pictures to come our way in quite some time will be exhibited next at the Belle Theatre. We're referring to Paramount's new comedy musical, "There's Magic in Music."

Clever, bright and melodious, the story is about a hoydenish young burlesque queen with a magnificent voice, who becomes an opera singer. It is a hilarious story that the picture tells, and the music, as played and sung by many brilliant performances, is really enthralling.

Boasting an impressive cast, the new film arrival features the golden-voiced starlet, Susanna Foster, Allan Jones, in better voice than we've ever heard him before; beautiful Margaret Lindsay and Comedian Lynne Overman. In addition to these screen favorites there are also in the cast three of opera's greatest singers, Richard Bonelli, Irra Petina and Tandy MacKenzie, all of whom make their screen debuts in this picture. Even the brilliance of these operatic stars, however, is not enough to dim the shining musical and acting talents of five teen-age youngsters who do much to brighten the picture. They are Heimo Haitto, young Finnish violinist; Patricia Travers, Dolly Loehr, Kaye Connor and William Chapman. But they are only five of some four hundred young folk performing in this new film.

Paramount Producer - Director Andrew L. Stone deserves a great deal of commendation for the extraordinary skill with which he has handled his materials, resulting in a first-rate screen job.

"There's Magic in Music" is a musical screen event that is sure-fire entertainment.

"Charlie Chan" Thriller

Who is the ghost of "Black Hook?" That's what Charlie Chan wants to know in his latest 20th Century-Fox thriller, "Dead Men Tell," announced as the companion feature.

Hailed by critics as his most thrilling Charlie Chan picture, Sidney Toler heads a cast of featured players which includes Sheila Ryan, Robert Weldon, Sen Yung, Don Douglas and Katharine Aldridge.

This mystery of murder, buried South Sea "treasure," and an eighteenth century pirate king, who returns to "haunt" his twentieth century descendant, was directed by Harry Lachman.

Popular Science, an entertaining film in technicolor, will also be exhibited.

Egypt has produced about 900,000,000 pounds of cotton in the current cotton year.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Life With Henry"

Jackie Cooper in the role of Henry Aldrich in Paramount's new Aldrich Family picture, "Life With Henry," will open next at the Capitol theatre. Blonde and vivacious Leila Ernst is his new leading lady. She was drafted from the New York stage to play the role. Also making his picture debut is Eddie Bracken, a stage comedian of great promise. Fred Niblo, former director of silent pictures, plays his first role before the cameras as Henry's father and Kay Stewart plays her first important role as Henry's sister. In addition to Jackie, Hedda Hopper is the only other veteran player featured in the cast. She plays the role of his mother. "Life With Henry" is an original screenplay by Clifford Goldsmith and Don Hartman. It continues the hilarious and sometimes pathetic misadventures of Henry as first enjoyed in "What A Life." It was produced and directed by Jay Theodore Reed.

"Border Vigilantes"

The same programme includes the latest "Hopalong" Cassidy epic, "Border Vigilantes." William Boyd again portrays the role of "Hoppy," with Russell Hayden and Andy Clyde riding at his side as "Lucky" and "California." Others in the big cast are Victor Jory, Morris Ankrum, Ethel Wales, Frances Gifford, and over fifty seasoned riders.

The latest news and the sixth chapter of Zane Grey's "King of the Royal Mounted," complete the show.

Aided financially and by experts from the United States, Costa Rica will build a section of the Pan-American highway from San Jose, the capital, to connect with the road at the border of Panama.

MANUFACTURING'S PART

C. R. Conquergood, retiring chairman of the Ontario division of the Canadian Manufacturers, recently gave an impressive picture of the Dominion since the war began. He made the statement that he did not recall a single incident where the needs of the war and the needs of the nation as a whole had not received first consideration. Further he did not recall a single case where there was anything but the most pressing urge to support those who are charged with the responsibility of carrying on the war and to maintain those ideals and traditions which are a part of our British heritage.

A great proportion of work has been allocated to factories in Ontario where work of much variety is being carried on. For instance he quoted that thousands of mechanical transports and armored vehicles had been sent abroad for the use of the Empire forces and that thousands more were on order. Among the manufactured products are universal machine gun carriers which are being delivered. Manufacturers, he said, would soon be producing medium or cruiser tanks.

In Ontario there are being produced rifles, machine guns, automatic guns, anti-aircraft guns, anti-tank guns, field guns, mortars and naval guns. There are being turned out enormous quantities of fuses, shells and cartridges.

He stated that steel mills are producing bullet-proof plate, alloy steel armor plate, alloy steel forgings and heavy plates for ships. Facilities for production of aluminum have been increased by the construction of huge new plants. He made the encouraging statement that nickel, copper, lead and zinc are being produced in quantities sufficient not only for Canada but for the rest of the empire and her Allies. Reference was made to shipbuilding and aircraft construction programs.

It is not only in these but also in food, lumber, leather, pulp and paper, clothing footwear, medical supplies and a host of other articles for war purposes that the war effort is being carried along with satisfying the domestic needs.

In an age of mechanized war, industry plays a supremely important part. It has had to change from a peace basis to one of war and has made the change with success.

SEA POWER IN HUMAN LIFE

Britain's sea power is a great source of strength and confidence in time of war. Ottawa Journal pays a tribute to the men of the Royal Navy who have given so noble an account of themselves in the great task they are maintaining successfully:

"These are the losses in men of the Royal Navy since the beginning of the war: 4,260 officers and men killed in action; 6,944 missing and presumed dead; 513 taken prisoners; 81 died of natural causes; 3,352 wounded. Apparently these figures do not include losses of the Royal Canadian Navy and the Royal Australian Navy.

"This is part of the price in human lives of Britain's sea-power, the power which gives the Empire security in peace and in war strength and unity—power which will beat the Germans again. But the grim figures emphasize the weight of the attack upon us, the vast scale of the operations in which the Navy is engaged day and night over the seven seas.

"And just as much war casualties are, of course, the men of the Merchant Marine lost through enemy action. They, too, in their thousands have given their lives that Britain and the cause of free men shall not perish from the earth. Undaunted by the terrors of brutal German war, they accept the perils of U-boats and bombers, taking to the British Isles the tools of warfare, shiploads of essential foods. They, too, live and die in the high traditions of a seafaring Empire.

Life is not so short but that there is always time for courtesy.—Emerson.

He that will watch providences shall never want providences to watch.—Flavel.

The secrecy of success is constancy of purpose.—Disraeli.

Confidence in another's virtue is no slight evidence of one's own.—Montaigne.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

THE COLORS OF THE FLAG

What is the blue on our flag, boys?
  The waves of the boundless sea,
Where our vessels ride in their tameless pride
  And the feet of the winds are free;
From the sun and smiles of the coral isles
  To the ice of the south and north,
With dauntless tread through tempests dread
  The guardian ships go forth.

What is the white on our flag, boys?
  The honour of our land,
Which burns in our sight like a beacon light
  And stands while the hills shall stand;
Yes, dearer than fame is our land's great name,
  And we fight, wherever we be,
For the mothers and wives that pray for the lives
  Of the brave hearts over the sea.

What is the red on our flag, boys?
  The blood of our heroes slain
On the burning sands in the wild waste-lands
  And the froth of the purple main.
And it cries to God from the crimsoned sod
  And the crest of the waves outrolled
That he send us men to fight again
  As our fathers fought of old.

We will stand by the dear old flag, boys,
  Whatever be said or done,
Though the shots come fast, as we face the blast,
  And the foe be ten to one;
Though our only reward be the thrust of a sword
  And a bullet in heart or brain,
What matters one gone, if the flag float on
  And Britain be lord of the main?

—Frederick George Scott.

RUDOLPH Hess helped Hitler write "Mein Kampf." Now he is writing "Mein Scrampf," says the Windsor Star. And in the meantime he is squawking about "Mein Hampf."

PRIVATE Tex Randolph, of the Lone Star State, who came all the way to Canada to enlist with a Western Ontario regiment, brought his pet thoroughbred rat with him. Dissatisfied with its name, he left it to the "boys" to get it a new one. And the "boys" obliged with the appropriate title of "Adolph."

FIFTY teen-aged schoolgirls were taken to the House of Commons the other day, and heard the "elevating" procedure of 29 divorce cases run through the mill in jig-time. Sort of reading the last page of that best-seller before you find out what the story is about.

THE FOLKS that place much faith in the somewhat ambiguous sayings of the old prophets and seers, are going around with their chins up a bit higher since an Edmonton soldier prophesied last year, "the arrival of an enemy-higher-up in Britain."

They, naturally, are taking the "higher-up" to be Hess, but it might have been one of any refugees, or prisoners of war. However, the folks are giving old Nostragamus a play now, and he seems to be the popular prophetic idol. Johannes did a swell job for a while until he came to the part where the "Black Eagle" (Russia) was to throw in her lot with the Allies. Jo has been stymied for quite some time, and unless the leopard changes its spots and starts to really quarrel with the Nazi wolf, the ancient prophet may be relegated to the seer junkpile.

BUILD a better mouse trap and the world will beat a pathway to your door, says an old adage. In Scotland people are beating a pathway to the door of David McLean, Hess captor, whose idea of a better rat trap was a common pitchfork.

WALTER Winchell, well known newspaper columnist and radio commentator, has his own ideas regarding the definition of an isolationist. Mr. Winchell says—"An isolationist is a guy who sits on the fence long after the normal man feels the splinters."

Some Of Those On the Zamzam

New York, May 21.—When I opened the paper and saw the photographs I recognized them immediately: Members of the "British American Ambulance Corps unit."

When I saw them last they were members of a French-American Ambulance Corps unit. They were on the S.S. Manhattan, a year ago last March, and they were en route to France. Some of those on the Zamzam were not with them then. Michael Kirchwey Clark, for instance, was not with them—the son of Mr. Evans Clark and Freda Kirchwey, the editor of The Nation. He was not on the Manhattan. But Charles A. McCarthy and Charles Langdon Harriss, John W. Ryan and Francis Vicovari, George O. Tichenor, George C. Finnegan and Philip N. Faversham all were. Probably some of the others, too. I did not meet them all, but these I remember.

They were in tourist class and kept rather to themselves. I looked them up because I wondered what type of young American was enlisting to serve the Republic of France, and why they were doing it.

It was easy enough to see what sort of young men they were; they were exceptionally fine young men, and well educated and well bred. Most of them had had exceptional privileges. They were graduates of fine schools and colleges. None of them looked as though he had any reason for running away from anything. When it came to handing around jobs in America, these boys would have been among the first to be considered, and some of them had left good jobs.

It was harder to find out why they were setting out on this dangerous expedition, to serve a country not their own, to enter a war for which they had not been drafted. Certainly nobody had pushed them into it. They groused about the difficulties they had had in enlisting in the corps.

They were allergic to heroics and on the defensive. I got the impression that a great many people had asked them the same question before they embarked for France: "Why do you have to go and stick your necks out?" Certainly nobody had sent them off under the taunt of "slacker". Quite the contrary. They had had struggles with their families before they got where they were.

Nor were they, for the most part, earnest young men anxious to do good in the world, or fanatically devoted to the cause of saving the world. I remember what Charlie McCarthy said when I asked him why he had enlisted. "What would you do if your name was Charlie McCarthy?" he asked ironically. At first they all wise-cracked like that.

One of them never dropped his flip manner for a second. He played the slot machine all the way over, and insisted that he was going over to help the Allies because it was an old family custom. I thought he'd crack up the first time he ever saw real action. Afterward, in Paris, I learned that he had seen lots of it. And he was among those photographed on the Zamzam. I was wrong.

But I got to be friends with three or four of the others, and eventually they talked about the whys and wherefores of finding it their business to help the French.

They hedged away from idealism as from hot stoves. They were realistic, unillusioned, candid, and straightforward. I did not hear one of them talk about saving the world for democracy. In fact, what they thought about democracy in some of its present manifestations sounded like the sort of critique I had heard from young Nazis a decade ago in Germany.

They thought most democratic politicians were "fatheads"; they thought there was something rotten about a social system that couldn't solve the question of unemployment; they weren't highly pleased with their own education; they loathed "Reds," and thought less than nothing of the results of the last war.

Yes, there they were, going over to get into another, via the Ambulance Corps. To help save Frenchmen from Germans. None of them disliked Germans or Germany. On the contrary, they thought the Germans "a great people."

Furthermore, they were highly critical of French policy, and not exaggeratedly pro-British. They also had no illusions about war. "We've been told about the horrors of the last war all our lives," they said.

To put it briefly, they came out of the same schools, had been subjected to the same influences, and had many of the same opinions as the college youths who carry picket signs at meetings of the White committee. Why had they reached different conclusions?

I wrote down some of the answers:

"It's hooey to say this is not our war. America couldn't live in a world run by the Axis powers. We'd have to go Nazi. We are going to go into the war eventually anyhow. We want to start from the outset."

"I dont hate Germany, but I loathe Nazism. It's silly and barbaric. The only thing I'd fight for is the right to a private life. If you can't have a private life, what's the use of having any?"

"I lived in Italy for a while. They open your letters."

"I can't stand the hypocrisy about our being neutral. Nobody's neutral on Fascism. You are either for it or against it. Those who pretend they're neutral are pro-Fascist."

"The United States could have prevented this war if the politicians had had more guts. Why don't any of them tell the people what they really think?"

"All the extremists are on the Nazi side. I hate extremism. Only a moderate world is tolerable."

That remark haunted me. For there was a young man taking the most extreme step of risking his life in order to defeat extremism.

I guess that is what the war is really about at that.

I heard about them afterward in Paris. The authorities said they were wonderful. Two of them got the Croix de Guerre. Vichy would have dismissed them with that honor. If it were adventure they were after, they could have quit.

But they didn't. They came home, reorganized under the British, and went out again, convinced that an American's right to a private life can be as menaced in Suez as at the Panama Canal.

Since I started to write this, the radio announces that they have been saved.

Thank God!

Snow to the Telegraph Wire In Scotland

For three nights over a hundred passengers slept in a snowbound train after a recent blizzard in Caithness and Sutherland, which trapped buses, interrupted telephone communications, and left snowdrifts 20 feet deep. The storm was the third since January.

The train left Inverness for Wick at 11.15 on a Wednesday morning, and when it reached Helmsdale it was learned that the line was blocked further ahead. The train was taken back to Rogart Station, about 20 miles south. Coats and blankets were used to induce sleep at nights.

Permanent-way men and a snowplow left Wick on the Thursday morning to clear the line.

Permanent-way Inspector Donald Grant, Wick, was in charge of a squad of 22 men. They encountered heavy snow most of the way and after being held up in deep drifts at several points, they reached the trapped snowplow and engine near Kinbrace, and got it back to Forsinard Station. Next morning they tackled the line again, and seven miles south of Forsinard the plow had to charge into 20 feet deep drifts. Engine-drivers David Lyall and William Dunnet, Wick, said. "We actually had to tunnel our way through the snow, leaving a roof above us which fell in after we passed."

Inspector Grant said his men were standing on snow and could put their arms round the telegraph wires.

Caithness main roads were blocked for days. The mail bus returning from Helmsdale to Wick was trapped on the road, and passengers were taken back to Helmsdale by motor cars, which had left there and found they could not proceed further north. The road was not reopened until the Saturday. Two other buses were blocked on the Wick-Thurso road on the Wednesday night. One had left Thurso and the other Wick. Passengers from both buses had to abandon vehicles and got accommodation in Halkirk.

Caithness received some mails by air, but no newspapers. Caithness and Sutherland suffered from a shortage of food and coal supplies and rural districts were particularly hard hit. Grocery and butcher vans were unable to visit some areas for a week.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

GO FISHING

Pack a box with bread and meat,
  Take your rod and line;
Leave the city's crowded street,
  News of Nile and Rhine;
Turn your back on greed and hate;
  Slip away from shore,
Then, as for a bite you bait,
  Be yourself once more.

Hear the cardinal as he sings
  Joy untouched with doubt.
Watch the gulls on easy wings
  Idly soar about.
Cast your bright lure here and there
  Till you feel it hit,
And where there is room to spare
  Stretch your soul a bit.

Lift the anchor now and then,
  Move from place to place,
Anywhere away from men
  And life's furious pace.
Give yourself to all that stays
  After men are gone;
Bird and bloom and tree-lined bays
  And ponds to fish upon.

Fishing is a man's excuse,
  Whoso'er he be,
Just to let his spirit loose,
  Unrestrained and free.
Fill a box with bread and meat,
  Slip away from shore,
And where all the air is sweet,
  Rest yourself once more.

You'd Be Surprised!

TERRAPINS

The diamond-back terrapin, which a few years ago was approaching the point of extinction, is said to be coming back into its own.

Terrapin is the name of various edible, small, hard-shelled, flat turtles found in salt marshes and brackish water along the Atlantic seaboard and the Gulf coast.

The diamond-back, so called from the diamond pattern on its smooth shell, is the best known and the most valuable of the edible turtles.

In Colonial days terrapins of this type were so plentiful along the Atlantic coast that the local authorities are said to have forbidden slave-owners to feed their slaves terrapin more than twice a week on the theory that it was inhuman to make the poor Negroes eat such lowly fare too often.

But later terrapin meat and terrapin soup became such favorite table delicacies among the gentry that the wild stock was greatly depleted and terrapins were raised on "farms" to supply the commercial demand.

Diamond-back terrapin, like canvas-back duck with which it was associated on the gourmet's table, acquired an international reputation as a gentleman's dish.

The most delicious terrapins are supposed to come from the Chesapeake Bay area.

Both the state of Maryland and the U.S. government have gone into the business of hatching terrapins for the purpose of restocking the creeks and bodies of brackish water along the Atlantic coast.

Thousands of terrapins are being hatched every year now at the U.S. Marine Laboratory on Pivera Island at Beaufort in North Carolina and at the Chesapeake Biological Laboratory at Solomon's Island in Maryland.

Diamond-backs grow about an inch in length a year and seldom grow larger than seven or eight inches.

Hunting terrapins is anything but a gentleman's job. The terrapin hunter, during the winter when the turtles are hibernating, probes in the mud and muck in brackish water and puts his catch in a burlap sack.

The Federalists, who opposed the second war between the United States and Great Britain, called that conflict "The Terrapin War," because they said the United States with its Embargo and Non-Intercourse acts, abandoned its foreign commerce and drew within its shell like a terrapin.

The congregation joined in the responsive service with the Superintendent. The offering was taken by Jimmy Hinchey and Austin Dow.

The Superintendent expressed appreciation of the presence of the visitors among whom was a former member, Mrs. H. Parsons of Belleville whose husband is serving in the Canadian Navy. The superintendent's address was on the importance of early training of children in Christian teaching as the Sunday School is the "nursery of the church" which fact is recognized by all worthy ministers of Christianity, this is proven by the tragic upbringing of German youth in the last generation who have been denied Christian teaching and have developed into barbarisms. Statistics establish the fact that a very small percentage of Sunday School graduates become delinquents. The Superintendent is much encouraged by the splendid co-operation of interested parents and will strive as always to implant in the minds of his charges a love for Christ and the church and all other victims will follow and worthy and patriotic citizens will be the inevitable results.

AMERICAN-MADE BOMBING PLANES USED IN N. AFRICA

Loose Heavy Attack on Nazi Columns Outside Fort Capuzzo Destroying Many Tanks

NAZIS PUSHED BACK

By EDWARD KENNEDY

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

With the British Forces in North Africa, May 21 (AP)—American-made bombing planes of the Royal Air Force have struck their first blow in the war in North Africa, having helped on May 18 to drive back an attempted Axis advance into Egypt from the Libyan border base at Fort Capuzzo.

A massed German mechanised column, including 60 tanks and 100 other armored vehicles, sallied out from the frontier barbed-wire barrier Sunday afternoon, May 18, and took up positions over a six-mile front from Fort Capuzzo to a point south of Halfaya (Hell Fire) Pass.

There British armored units and artillery brought the Germans to a halt, knocking out eight tanks.

Then, at dusk, the Royal Air Force with U.S.-built bombers loosed a heavy air attack, destroying several more tanks and sending most of the Germans back to the barbed-wire border.

The American planes were Martin bombers, which have been in use for several months, but hitherto only for long-range reconnaissance work.

Bombs Hurled on Vehicles

Heavy bombs were hurled on the German vehicles near the old Capuzzo airdrome.

It was disclosed that a United States citizen (whose name was not disclosed) is a Sergeant Air Gunner in the R.A.F. squadron. He is a holder of the Distinguished Flying Medal for gallantry in the Ethiopian campaign.

The planes are manned by crews picked from a South African squadron, but besides the American they include one Canadian member of the R.A.F., and Australians, New Zealanders, Britons, an Irishman, a Tasmanian and a Fiji Islander.

Taking off into the last rays of the setting sun, the Martins returned by starlight, leaving a number of blazing fires from German machines in their wake.

British Blenheims attacked the same targets, while fighter planes rained incendiary bullets on the Nazis.

The fighters reported destroying 19 Axis vehicles and a gasoline dump at Bir Amud, near Derna.

German planes were inactive on this side of the frontier, but launched a heavy attack on the besieged garrison at Tobruk, where Britons said anti-aircraft fire brought down three Junkers.

"DAUGHTER OF DESTINY"

By ELEANOR ATTERBURY COLTON

CHAPTER XXVIII

The telephone bell roused her the next morning just as she tried to find her way back to consciousness from dream-tormented sleep.

"Devona, darling?" Tal's voice vibrant with excitement.

"Yes," sleepily, "Tal?"

"Angel, I have magnificent news. I'm coming right down to tell you. Have breakfast with me?"

"Of course. How soon?"

"Twenty minutes should be long enough for you to get yourself beautiful. Love me this morning?"

She smiled into the receiver. "Yes, Tal—love you very much."

And the little smile lingered as she showered, dressed. How could she help loving him. High-strung, effervescent, he was like bubbling champagne himself. And some day, she promised her hollow-eyed reflection, she'd get over this silly feeling she had for his brother. Some day she'd realize how lucky how terribly lucky she was that Tal, fine and splendid and idealistic, had offered her a real love.

Tal Has News

Later, over their toast and coffee, Tal beamed at her boyishly. "Darling, you've brought me amazingly good luck already." He reached for her hand across the table.

"Have I, really? Tell me."

"John Brannon, a New York agent, saw my play last night and said it was pretty awful but he liked the dialogue—some of it. Said it showed promise of the kind of thing he wants. So he's offered me a job—in New York—with him and I'm to collaborate on a musical comedy another chap is writing. How's that?"

"Oh, Tal! How wonderful!" Devona felt her own enthusiasm skyrocket. "I knew it would have to happen eventually. But—so soon! Aren't you thrilled? Oh, Tal, darling. I am proud of you."

"Are you," tenderness flooded into his eyes, "my little guardian angel?"

For a minute, she couldn't speak for gratitude to luck or fate or that strange destiny of hers that had granted her this supremely happy moment. At least this was one thing she'd done well. She'd save Tal for this immediate reward. And this—like a good omen—assured her she could go on playing this role of guardian angel. It would be enough. If not ecstacy, it would bring satisfying peace and happiness in Tal's joys. What more could she ask of life?.

"We'll leave the middle of next week, honey," he planned rapidly. "I'll have to hang around here a few days to wind up some business. Then we'll fly to Reno and get ourselves married. No fuss and feathers. Okay?"

"Okay."

"Swell. Now suppose we trot right down to your pal Macias' place and hand in your resignation. There's nothing I'm going to enjoy more than telling that guy——"

"Oh, no. Not yet Tal," she interrupted quickly. After all, she did have a job to finish up. "I must—"

But did she? Tal would forbid it, if he knew. Dale, too, probably—much as it might mean for him at the coming primaries. She could easily report her suspicions to one of Dale's undersecretaries, she thought wryly. And let it go at that. After all, it was none of her business——

What do you mean not yet?" Tal demanded, frowning.

"I—I have a special reason, Tal," she tried to explain. "I can't tell you now—but I must stay on until—after Tuesday."

"But——"

"Please, darling. I promise that after Tuesday I'll never go near that place again. And—don't worry about Macias. He eats out of my hand."

Tal's frown relaxed into a grin. "No doubt. But why Tuesday?"

"Oh—secret."

To Help Dale

So did she, she added silently. She was insane, probably, to risk this—just for her pride's sake. And for Dale. But no one else could see this through. No one else had the opportunity to really nail this thing. She was sure of that.

Not that Tal would feel she was living up to that promise she told herself Tuesday afternoon as she stepped out of her street clothes into the costume she would wear tonight for the last time. She could hardly call this plan taking care of anybody — unless it were Dale. Who hadn't asked her, wouldn't thank her even, to butt into his affairs. Fool that she was.

Dressed finally—in the soft, red satin tonight. Macias liked it best of her costumes. She dusted the powder puff over her flushed cheeks, drew a long breath. So far she'd been lucky. She hadn't seen Macias since the night of the intercepted phone call. He'd been ill, his house-boy had phoned. Confined to his bed with a serious chest cold. But tonight he was coming back to the club.

If he really had been ill, she thought as she made her way to his office, then she was truly safe enough. But if illness had been only a blind to——

She Talks With Macias

She tapped softly at the door, pushed it open.

He'd been ill, all right. Darkened circles under his eyes, cheeks hollow, black eyes heavy. He looked up at her across his littered desk.

"Hello, Dona," and then, before he could go on, a spasm of wrenching coughs. "Wait. Want to—talk," he gasped.

Devona waited, a tight rein on her fears, a calm smile to hide behind. If he'd discovered her lie—had heard about the change in plans—the shift to No. 47 Front St.

"How's it been going?" he asked as soon as he had the breath.

"Fine."

"This damned cold's got me down." He coughed again, wiped his eyes. "Everything's in a mess. Sorry I can't take you home tonight. I wanted to talk to you. But——" He waved at he mess of papers. "Looks as if I'll be here all night."

Devona released anxiety with a long sigh. Not a trace of suspicion. So far, everything was too easy to be true!

"Please don't mention it. Some other time—when you're not so busy," she said, and hoped her exulting didn't show. "I'm so glad you're some better."

Some other time! And there'd never be another time, she told herself happily as she wandered with the Troubadours from table to table that evening. Her last night on display. Her last night as Dona Carlotta!

Covering Her Fear

Almost—she added, wryly. There was still tonight's little adventure. It wasn't quite time yet for congratulations. Not until "some time after midnight."

She sang her best that evening, gave generously of her encores and her smiles. Even Manuel noticed it.

"Why so cheerful, Sweetheart?"

"Aren't I, always?"

"Not like tonight." He studied her frankly. "Anything up?"

She shook her head. "No, why?"

"O.K., pal. Keep your little secret. But——" and he jerked his head toward the gray-paneled door, "something's up with the big chief, too. I'm guessing. Something he doesn't like. So—keep out of his way. I'm warning you."

"I'll be careful," she promised, smiling; but a little worry tagged into her mind. Something upsetting Macias tonight? Surely he couldn't have guessed—be suspicious. She'd just talked to him. He'd seemed——

Off to the Waterfront

She brushed the thought aside. She'd have seen something was wrong. One look at the dark eyes had always been warning enough before.

When it was nearly midnight she slipped to her dressing room, shed her costume. She didn't usually leave quite this early. Still, Macias, busy in his office, wouldn't miss her, and the Troubadours sometimes skipped the 1 o'clock show, if there weren't many customers. Fortunately, tonight had been slow.

Escape from her dressing room, out the back way through the kitchen to the alley, was easy enough. And from there to the street behind and a drug store where she phoned for a taxi.

"No. 47 Front St., in San Pedro," she told the driver, and discouraged his quick surprise with a frosty little nod.

The long ride down busy Wilshire Blvd. rested her a little. A fascinating street, she loved it.

Then, as they left the gay lights of the great broad street, drew nearer and nearer the San Pedro waterfront, friendliness fell behind, and a sort of sinister reticence hovered in the shadowy, winding streets, where thin, decrepit houses, poorly lit, lurked in rows just at the edge of the fringe of street lights.

"Here you are, miss. No. 47." The driver stopped the car, leaped out to swing open the door.

For the space of a sigh, she hesitated. No. 47, a narrow, two-story frame house was, like every other house on the block, an exact replica of the one next door. Unlike the others, a light burned behind a closely drawn blind in an upper room. Through the taxi's open door she felt the cold clap of the sea wind on her cheek, smelled the dank oily odor of sodden pilings of an outgoing tide.

"Here you are, Miss." The driver's voice jogged her impatiently.

"Yes. Thanks." She climbed out, pulled her jacket collar closer. "Will you wait, please."

"Wait? Sure, Miss," and closing the door climbed back under the wheel.

Into New Danger

The narrow porch steps creaked under her light step and a loose board whined. She waited a moment, fingers trembling against the old-fashioned knocker, while her breath caught up with her. Silly to be frightened at a few shadows and a creaking step, she scoffed. But—and tried to muster a little laugh—the place was so perfectly the scene for a ghost story. It would really be disappointing if something exciting didn't turn up after all this.

She pulled staunchly at the knocker.

Inside she heard its hollow thudding echo through what must be a long hall. Echoes and then—footsteps. Quick short steps of a person half running. Like the rickshaw coolies of Shanghai, she thought irrelevantly.

Suddenly what had seemed to be merely a carved panel in the old-fashioned door opend gapingly. A face appeared. A strangely familiar face. Almond eyes, close set, a cruel mouth twisted in a yellow face.

Devona's heart stopped. The face behind the gaping aperture was—Wong's!

HOLIDAY MOTORISTS CHEER THE NEW 20% SAVING IN TIRE COSTS

Demand for New "Duramin-Made" Tire Swamps Dealers of B. F. Goodrich as Motorists Make Ready for May 24

KITCHENER, Ont., May 21—Having undergone the nerve-wracking experience of driving on threadworn tires for economy's sake, thousands of Canadian motorists cheered the B. F. Goodrich announcement of the miracle discovery, "Duramin" and the addition of thousands of miles to tire life—with no premium in price asked.

The new 1941 Life-Saver Silvertown tire actually gives you five miles for every four you get from the original Silvertown. Most notable contribution to this amazing new economy is "Duramin", the name B. F. Goodrich scientists have given to a combination of chemicals that keeps rubber young and alive. "Duramin" makes rubber tougher and resistant to the grinding of the roughest roads. It fights friction throughout the tire body. It resists heat produced by fast driving. It protects against sun-checking and cracking in the side walls of the tire.

If you want the toughest-wearing, safest-riding, smoothest-rolling tire in B. F. Goodrich history, see your nearest B. F. Goodrich dealer to-day. He is waiting to explain the additional features of this great tire to you.

New "Safety-Weld" Puts "Golden-Ply" Protection in Every Ply

The safety factor in tires has been greatly increased by this exclusive B. F. Goodrich process which welds Hi-Flex Cords with "Duramin-toughened" rubber compounds.

Where the "Golden-Ply" made the original Life-Saver Silvertown the safest tire on the road, the new "Safety-Weld" process puts this "Golden-Ply" protection into every ply . . . by bonding top-quality Hi-Flex Cords with Duramin-toughened rubber into a steel-strong tire carcass. This new Life-Saver Silvertown is able to resist internal heat—withstand severe road shocks—offers a new margin of safety and protection against blow-outs and ply separation caused by high speed driving. Notable is the fact that these two sensational developments, "Duramin" and "Safety-Weld," have been added at no premium in price.

Marriage Plans Of Young Couple Thwarted By War

Cape Town, May 21—(CP)—This business of trying to get married with a war going full blast has stumped John Emery, Royal Air Force officer.

He met Doreen Turner, 25-year-old Toronto girl, some years ago aboard the liner Athenia en route to Britain.

Then he sailed from Britain to Canada to marry her, choosing the same 13,581-ton liner for his voyage. She was torpedoed Sept. 4, 1939, off Scotland.

Among other survivors, Emery found himself back in England. He joined the R.A.F. and was transferred to South Africa.

They fixed a new date for the marriage and planned to have it take place in Oudtshorn, South Africa.

Miss Turner, a graduate of the University of Toronto, left home in mid-March for New York and set out across the Atlantic for Cape Town, where Emery planned to meet her.

She chose the Egyptian liner Zamzam. Today Emery learned she is a German prisoner.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

James W. Barton, M.D.

Operation For Removal of Loose Knee Cartilage New Very Successful

One of the injuries football, basketball, baseball players and other athletes sustain is a loose cartilage in the knee. This cartilage serves as a cushion between the two bones forming the knee joint and as the knee joint supports the whole weight of the body, anything that disturbs that cushion means not only a painful knee but a knee that will not support the weight of the body. The athlete is temporarily unable to play. At times this cushion or cartilage gets torn and so gets "misplaced" in the joint.

My own treatment in "fresh" injuries was to strap the knee up with adhesive tape, replacing the tape every few days for two or three weeks. In more severe cases, the knee was placed in a plaster cast for three to five weeks.

The question naturally asked is why did not these loose cartilage cases undergo operation? To be quite frank, it was not until recent years that the physician or surgeon has felt free to recommend operation because so many operations resulted in a 'stiff' knee; in fact, very little motion remained after operation.

These knee injuries are just as common today as ever, but if adhesive or plaster cast treatment fails to give results, most physicians feel free to recommend operation owing to the satisfactory results which are now obtained. These satisfactory results have been obtained. These satisfactory results have been obtained because the patient now receives a thorough examination and any infection—teeth, tonsils, sinuses—is removed before operation. In addition, the operation itself has been changed somewhat.

In recording his results in operation of fifty of these cases, Dr. Harold R. Bohlman, Johns Hopkins University in the Journal of the American Medical Association,, outlines his method of preparation, recommends the use of a local instead of a general anaesthetic, the complete removal of blood from the joint, and injection of air, with gentle movement of the joint within a few days after operation.

The hospital stay is from three to seven days instead of the two or three weeks of former years.

I am passing this information on because "loose cartilage" occurs so often, not only among athletes but in various occupations. To know what they can safely undergo operation and be free from this disabling condition should be good news to patients with a loose cartilage.

The Stars Say

For Thursday, May 22

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

ACCORDING to the lunar aspects this should be a fairly lively and interesting day, with change, travel and all pertaining to writings, publishings, promotional enterprise and fresh adventures under good planetary stimuli. With well organized plans, sound judgment and persistent application there is no reason why all should not flourish and bring satisfactory gains and private gratifications.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a gainful and gratifying year, especially if their abilities lie in literary, professional or scientific lines in which there is much originality, perhaps genius. But hard work, stability and good judgment may win against sudden impulses or rash urges, although travel and change are indicated as advantageous.

A child born on this day should have splendid versatility, particularly in any avenues of intellectual or professional expression. These it will develop by industry, stability and sound sense.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Question of Signatures

Dear Miss Fairfax:

When I married, I understood that I was to use my husband's name (for example, Mrs. John Jones.) Now I've been told that's wrong. How, for example, should I sign my driver's licence?

What would my signature be if I were divorced and did not retain my maiden name? (Mrs). G.

I don't know if the regulations differ in various state, but it seems to me that you should sign your driver's license by your baptismal name, Mary Margaret Jones. Never sign yourself Mrs. John Jones. Put the Mrs. in parentheses at the left of a signature, and sign your name thus: (Mrs.) Mary Margaret Jones. At the end of your letter you may put your husband's name (Mrs. John Jones) in writing to a business firm.

We've discussed signatures so frequently in this column that it seems hardly necessary to repeat that such titles as Mrs., Miss or Mr. before a name are conidered bad form.

Beware of The "Time Water"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Do you think you can explain this young man to me? We met five years ago at a wedding where I was maid-of-honor and he was best man. He paid so much attention to me that evening and ever since that everyone thinks our wedding is not far off. But to tell you the truth, during all this time he has never said one word about marriage.

He has never asked me to drop my other men friends, but they have dropped themselves, seeing how attentive he was to me. Now I'm beginning to wonder if he is what is called a "time-waster," or if he thinks his never mentioning marriage excuses his particular line of conduct.

I have been invited to go away to visit some relatives and am beginning to think it might be a good time to break with this young man. Janetta

A man does a great injustice to a girl when he monopolizes her and keeps away other young men who might be serious, when he has no intention of being serious himself. Such men usually pick out an attractive girl and are so devoted that everyone expects a wedding announcement. When none comes, year after year, a girl gets to be like something with a marked-down tag on it.

I'm glad you have a chance to go visiting. Don't fail to take advantage of this opportunity, and here's hoping you find someone less selfish.

Doesn't See Him

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 17 years old and in my last year at high school. Once or twice a week, my girl friend and I go ice-skating. Recently I met a young man at the rink who skated with me during the evening, and then asked to see me home. However, I declined to let him. Next time I saw him he wouldn't even ask me to skate with him. I think he must have been angry because I wouldn't let him take me home.

I still go to the same rink, but never see him at all. He was a very nice young man, and now I'm sorry I turned him down. Too Prudent.

If you were not introduced to him by any of your friends or acquaintances at the rink, I think you did the right thing in declining to allow an utter stranger to see you home. As I understand it, young people skate together at the rink and the end of the evening sees the end of their acquaintance.

More than likely he'll come to the rink again, but it's a question of chance, as you don't know anything about him.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Queries Fiance's Actions at Public Dances

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I do wish that you would give me some advice on my problem, and thereby put an end to incessant arguments between my friend and me. We have been very good friends for quite a while, and really intend to be married when circumstances permit.

The argument starts when we go together to a public dance. My friend insists that it is correct for him to dance with other girls. I think he is wrong, I tell him that when a man escorts a girl to a dance he should be with her and dance with her throughout the evening. We are both stubborn about this, and neither of us will give in.

What is your judgment about this? Sally.

The fact that a man takes a girl to a dance doesn't necessarily mean that he wishes to have complete proprietorship of the girl; the same applies to the girl.

It apparently does mean this to you, but not to your young man friend. Don't you think that it is pretty absurd of you to be so stubborn that you are unwilling to accept his point of view? There is nothing vicious, unkind or discourteous in his point of view. Aren't you being rather short-sighted in letting such a small thing spoil what otherwise seems to be a splendid friendship? If you and this young man marry, you will both have lots of more serious things than this that will call for adaptation!

I advise you to put aside or to moderate your sense of complete proprietorship, and to hold your jealousy with a firm bit. You're being a foolish girl to exhibit either of these unattractive traits.

But one thing you should be firm about: your partner for the evening should definitely not leave you alone while he dances with other girls. He should not even ask another girl to dance with him until he has found out whether or not you have been invited by someone to dance that dance. If, for instance, you are with a group, doubtless there will be men who will invite you to dance. If you accept, then your beau may properly ask a girl to dance with him. But he shouldn't dance off with another girl and leave you stranded.

Girl is Hostess

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

After the gentleman has escorted the lady home, and it is still very early, whose place is it to suggest going into the house for a while?

You see, we both want to go in but each one thinks it is the other's place to suggest it. W.

It is the girl's home, and she, as hostess, should be the one to extend this invitation. A well-bred man would wait for this invitation from the girl, and wouldn't consider making the suggestion himself.

Fashion Flashes

ALMOST A UNIFORM for town in summer is the sheer black frock with big black hat. A new model, fashioned on shirtwaist lines, is of closely woven black silk mesh. Plunging neckline, jewelled buttons, white faille collar and flared cuffs.

IT'S REFRESHING to come across ribbon-trimmed hats after all the fruit and flower garnitures. A summer model is of natural leghorn straw made with a deep back and a dip to the wide brim in front. The only trimming is large bows of turquoise blue and blush pink velvet ribbon and a twisted crown band of the same.

SOMETHING NEW in the silver fox coat line at last. It is a full-cut cape in back, and falls in two solid skin panels in front. The front section is mounted over a silk crepe undercoat with wide fabric sleeves finished with wide silver fox cuffs.

A DASHING AIR marks one collection of smart hats created by a Danish milliner now here. One model is a big black felt profile brim hat with a bank of red roses over the upturned brim and a coarse red side snood.

GAINING RAPIDLY in the fashion race is the town coat of silk. Silk faille is used for a handsome coat in taupe crossbarred in beige, with touches of palest champagne-colored organdie at the long collarless neckline and wrists. One button closing and sloping shoulders.

A BUSY MEMBER of the wardrobe is the well-tailored dress and jacket in printed silk. Navy silk crepe with a pink flower and green leaf design has pink fagotting on the dress bodice in interesting bands, while the jacket has a collar and cuff pipings in pink silk faille.

Lack of Knowledge of Growing Habits Causes Parents Needless Worries

Unless we're in our eighties or nineties, when living to be a hundred is a goal, we elders are likely to slur over our birthdays and leave the celebration of natal anniversaries to the young. But I'd like to see birthdays assume more significance in the adult's life. After all, with so many things making life in this world hazardous, another milestone in the journey, another birthday, does represent something of an achievement worthy of note.

A birthday is a good time for the adult to sit down, consider his physical gains or losses in this last year, and make new plans or revise old ones, for improvement of his physical condition in the next year, and this should be done in connection with a thorough physical checkup by a doctor. We should have such checkups at least once a year, and the birthday can be a reminder that one is due. Checkups made at established intervals provide an interesting record and a better basis for comparisons.

Such birthday goings-over are even more significant in childhood. The child's first birthday is a particularly important time for a checkup on its progress, both physically and mentally, for the first year is probably the most important in life.

When he is 12 months old, an average child weighs about three times his birth rate, i.e., 21 pounds. In the first year of life the head, the chest and the abdomen ought to keep pretty well together in measurement until at the end of the twelve months all three are close to eighteen inches. If this proportion of growth isn't maintained fairly closely, then have reason to suspect that there is something wrong. This something is usually a fault in diet. At one year an average child measure 25 to 35 inches in height, depending on sex, race, etc., for children vary considerably according to the family type and the nationality. No two are exactly alike in growth.

No two are exactly alike in growth. If this was better known and understood, much wear and tear on the nerves of those bringing up children would be avoided. Parents have a way of worrying themselves sick if their little Billy or Nancy doesn't walk or talk or teeth as early as a neighbor child. They frequently fall into the error of demanding more of a child than he is developmentally ready to do. Around one, when the child begins to be able to act independently, is when he first comes in conflict with his parents, when he first encounters the confusing (to him) "do's" and "don'ts". This is the age at which his training in self-reliance should be under way. His parents should be teaching him how to do things for himself.

At the end of this first year the average child should be sitting up to eat and having solid foods. He may have (most children do) have six teeth. He is able to pull off his stockings and other clothes, but he cannot dress himself. He can perhaps stand alone, and if he is the small, wiry type, he can walk some. He can use his hands well, and can do things with a ball and boxes and blocks. He may be able to utter one or two words and to associate them with the objects to which they belong, such as mama and dada. He can if the mother has been training him properly, control his bowels and he may have begun to control his bladder. He should no longer be treated as a baby.

NEED STRATEGY TO GET DRUGS

Traffic Well Under Control and Wartime Has Lessened Supplies

Ottawa (CP) — Drug addicts, pinched by war conditions, are being forced to plots and stratagems which trouble Canadian police and at the same time demonstrate that control over the drug-pedlar and his victims is more stringent than ever before.

Department of Pensions and National Health officials report that one of the effects of the war had been to reduce the amount of illicit drugs entering Canada. Some of the old sources of supply in Europe have been cut off completely, and shipping controls have made the movement of any illicit article more difficult.

"Even sources of supply of drugs brought to Canada legally have been reduced, but there is no shortage of drugs required to ease pain," one official said. "Those with a right to obtain drugs, such as doctors, can obtain supplies necessary for treatment of the sick, but it has become necessary for them to exercise increased vigilance in protecting their supplies because addicts who have lost their illegal sources of supply have become desperate."

Authorities said the existing problem could be summarized thus: Illicit drug supplies have been reduced sharply, but the addict, with his craving, remains. Illegal supplies being impossible to obtain, the addict has turned his attention to the legal supplies he knows exist.

To obtain drugs, addicts try impersonation, forgery of prescriptions, theft of physicians' bags, the pretence of great pain and bribery of those with drug supplies.

Should other efforts fail, they may, as a last resort, appear in court asking for jail sentences and an opportunity to obtain medical assistance in attaining cure.

"The number of cases of forgery and theft which come to our attention in connection with drug control demonstrate clearly how serious is the shortage of illegal supplies from the point of view of the addict," said the official.

The Adaptable Beaver

Surely no wild animal has stirred more interest on the part of the nature tourist than that aquatic rodent—the beaver. He makes his presence known by hus architectural achievements and his engineering works—the lodges and dams which are conspicuous wherever old paddle-tail lives.

Some beavers excavate their homes in stream banks instead of building lodges of sticks and mud, as though there were two kinds of beavers. But reliable indications are that the same beaver will use either form of abode under different conditions.

Alberta gives an example of this. Four beaver were caught near Olds in July, 1939. In August they were released in a wilderness area east of McMurray. Soon after being liberated they built a low dam of willows across a small stream, forming a shallow pond. These four animals were taken directly from beaver lodges when they were trapped at Olds. But, in their new northern quarters, after constructing their dam, they dug into the bank of the stream for the Winter. Moreover, they dug into the bank, not above the dam, but below it.

What curious reaction was this? Perhaps there is a clue. Instead of in August, the beaver should have been planted in July to allow the animals plenty of time to build a proper dam, also a lodge, and store food for the Winter. These four emigres had to do a quick job. Their instinct probably warned them that their pond was too shallow to avoid freezing to the bottom. Also it requires much work to build a lodge. Winter was coming quickly, so into the bank they went, and lodge beaver became bank beaver. They all survived and were busy as soon as Spring came.—Calgary Herald.

Nazis Threaten Reprisals If 'Chutists Are Shot

Berlin, May 21 (AP)—Nazi spokesmen threatened today that any "brutal or illegal treatment" of German parachutists landing on the Greek Island of Crete would bring reprisals.

They denied indirectly that the parachutists wore New Zealand uniforms, as announced by Prime Minister Churchill yesterday.

(The British Broadcasting Corporation sent out a warning to Nazi armed forces that "whoever, in violation of international law, fights in an enemy uniform, must expect to be shot at once when taken prisoner.")

WOULD WIPE OUT CHIMNEY FIRES

About 75 Per Cent Get Engagement Rings These Days, it Seems

Halifax (CP) — That fireman's plague, the chimney fire may become as nearly obsolete as the horse and buggy if all goes well for a 36-year-old Liverpood, N.S., paper company employee.

J. H. E. Rogers got partial reward for three years toil recently when Nova Scotia's fire marshal, Col. S. S. Wright, lowered himself from the roof of a Halifax fire station and acknowledged that what he had just seen of Rogers' two part invention had "excellent possibilities."

What he had seen was a seemingly simple device for interior inspection of chimneys. What he still has to see is the second part, the device for interior repairing of the flaws detected by the first. For inspection, Rogers brought together an elongated arrangement consisting of a power box with an electric light which he can revolve about in the depths of the longest chimney; a mirror to picture what the light may spot, and a telescope to bring the mirror's picture into far stronger focus for the inspector at the top of the chimney.

A big problem is getting his invention — patented at Ottawa as No. 381,650—on the market. It would cost about $300 which, Rogers admits, is too steep for the ordinary householder to afford. His own suggestion is to have provincial authorities bring in legislation calling for interior inspections every five years of the chimneys in every house over 10 years old. In Nova Scotia last year there were 205 chimney fires totalling $103,549 damage.

1. Rinse pot immediately after you empty grounds.
2. Wash in water that has not been used for other dishes.
3. Scrub all parts where sediment or oil may collect.
4. Rinse with boiling water to remove all traces of soap.
5. Let separate parts air thoroughly between makings.

Selective Service Best Solution Says Board Committee

Toronto, May 21.—(CP)—The management committee of the Toronto Board of Education passed a resolution yesterday suggesting that "the most satisfactory solution of the recruiting problem, for parents and students alike will be found in the application by the government of the principle of universal selective national service".

The resolution, sponsored by Loftus Reid, was passed in reply to a request from the department of National Defence for permission to send lecturers from the armed forces into the schools to acqaint prospective recruits with the requirements of the various services.

Harold Menzies, chairman of the Board, who said he was "strongly in favor of selective service", was one of those who considered the resolution beyond the purview of the Board.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

"Law Of Averages" Is Key To Present Tailspins Of Cleveland Indians And Dodgers

Teams Cannot Expect to Maintain Clip Set in First Part of the Season

DODGERS ON TOP

By JUDSON BAILEY

Percentages control everything in baseball.

You see them in the standings of the clubs, in the batting and fielding averages and in other statistics. You don't see them but they are present when a lefthanded pinch-hitter is sent in against a right-handed pitcher, or a batter is walked to set up a double play, or the infield comes in close to play for a sacrifice, or the outfield moves around in position for a dead-left-field hitter. But the "percentage" is the reason behind every move in the game—even to the batters who never strike at a 3-0 pitch.

This "law of averages" also is the key to the present tailspins of Cleveland Indians and Brooklyn Dodgers.

Before the Indians lost their three straight to the seventh-place Philadelphia Athletics they had won 23 games and lost nine for a 714 percentage. Before the Dodgers dropped four in a row at Pittsburgh and Chicago they had won 22 and lost six for a sensational .786.

In the course of bringing the Dodgers down to earth, the Cubs made 33 hits and 30 runs in three games. They bagged yesterday's finale 9-1, bunching six hits for three runs in the fourth inning against Kirby Higbe and nicking Newt Kimball for six runs in the eighth. The series attracted 42,000 fans.

St. Louis Cardinals were cut down by the Phillies 6-4 in 11 innings and remained half a game behind the Dodgers in won-lost figuring although holding on to the official percentage lead.

Frank McCormick smacked a three-run homer with two out in the ninth to give Cincinnati Reds a 9-6 victory over Boston Braves after Ernie Koy had hit a round-tripper with one on for the Reds in the eighth. Arky Vaughan settled a see-saw game between New York Giants and Pittsburgh in favor of the Pirates, 7-5, with a two-run homer in the seventh.

The Atheltics ambushed Mel Harder, previously undefeated with four victories, and whipped the Indians 6-5. The A's gave Bump Hadley a 6-2 lead in the first six innings, but he couldn't mold it. There were eight double plays.

The second-place Chicago White Sox polished off a sweep of their three-game series at Washington with Lefty Thornton Lee holding the Senators to six hits for a 5-2 victory.

Young Earl Johnson, southpaw star of Boston Red Sox, held Detroit Tigers to four hits and shut out for eight innings to win 4-2. The feat spoiled the 20th birthday plans of the Tigers' Hal Newhouser, who allowed only five safeties himself.

St. Louis Browns handed the Yankees a 10-9 decision on a platter garnished with no fewer than six errors.

R. SMITH HURLS TWO-HITTER AND RELIANCE WINS

Winning Pitcher Retires First Twenty Batsmen to Face Him

A SMART CONTEST

With Ray Smith, their newly-imported pitcher from Kingston, hurling two-hit ball, the Reliance Aircraft downed the SACO nine 4 to 1 in a scheduled Senior City League softball game at Coleman Flats last night. The win elevated the Reliance into second place in the league standing.

The game developed into a pitchers' battle between Smith and elongated Jim Hunter, on the mound for the SACO as the latter limited the winners to seven hits, but four were of the extra base nature, including Harry Shurleff's circuit blow in the sixth.

The Reliance scored an unearned run in the second and added another when Rowbotham opened the third with a triple and scored on Smith's timely single, as the Reliance moundsman batted in what ultimately proved the winning run. Shurleff's homer came in the sixth with none aboard and the Reliance final counter was the result of Grey's triple and a fly ball.

Retired First Twenty

Smith retired the first twenty SACO batters in succession but got into trouble in the seventh with two out when Pryke threw wild on Peoples' liner, the batsman taking second. B. Thompson lined one through the box for the SACO club's first hit of the game and Peoples scored. Storey hit the next pitch and there lies the answer to the hitting garnered by the losers, as only five SACO batters reached first base during the game.

Hunter struck out eight and walked three, while Smith whiffed seven and passed only one via the four-ball route. Shurleff with a home run, Grey and Rowbotham with triples and Hamilton with a double led the winners at bat, although no player on either squad collected over one safety throughout.

Two games are scheduled in the league this evening with the Esquire Juniors at Point Anne and Corby's meeting SACO at Coleman Flats.

The line-up:

SACO: Holmes, 1b; Frane, 3b; Peoples, 2b; B. Thompson, l.f.; Storey, r.f.; G. Thompson, c.; O'Neill, c.f.; Proute, s.s. and Hunter, p.

SACO	0 0 0 0 0 0 1 0 0	1 2 4
Reliance	0 1 1 0 0 1 0 1 x	4 7 2

Umpires: Bawden, plate; Young, bases.

GIRLS' SOFTBALL LOOP REDUCED TO FIVE TEAMS

Mets Withdraw From League and Meeting Held to Prepare for Opening Friday

PLAYOFFS ARRANGED

Another team dropped from the folds of the Belleville Girls' Softball League last night when it was announced the Mets. were no longer affiliated with the loop. The remaining five clubs, Zellers, SWACO, Corbins, Vikings and Deacons voted to carry on as a five-clubbed loop when President Schwab called the team delegates into conference at the Y.M.C.A. The league will open according to schedule at the Armouries on Friday night.

The conventional opening ceremonies will feature the opening of the league with His Worship, Mayor Thompson, pitching the first ball and other softball dignitaries taking a prominent part.

With the passing of another team from the league fold, the executive voted all players over 20 years of age and who had participated in the league in 1940, would be eligible to play for the Deacon Shirt club, including Pitcher Jean Muir, formerly of the Mets.

A 20-game schedule was adopted with an extended play-off series to declare the league champions. At the termination of the regular schedule the teams finishing first and fourth will meet in series "A" while the second and third placed clubs will play in series "B", these to be of the best-in-five nature. The winners of series "A" and "B" will then meet in series "C" for the league championship, this series to be the best-in-seven.

May 23—Vikings at Zellers.
24—Deacons at Corbins.
26—Zellers at SWACO.

These young people have given freely and on a schedule, of their time and ability in assisting the staff with physical and club activities, and all without hope or expectation of reward. Special thanks of the Association and expressed by both Jos. E. Shortt, General Secretary, and J. Ed. Shortt, Secretary for Physical Education. Miss Bernice Saunders, and Messrs. Clark James, Rod Cameron, Stan Wiggins, and Ben Ogilvie were the honored members.

WHIRLAWAY WINS FROM MIOLAND

$2,500 Overnight Allowance Race Brings Field of High Calibre to Post

By SID FEDER

(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, May 21—(AP) — The hilarious story back of the $50,000 race Belmont Park got for $2,500 was told today after Whirlaway had won the "preview," of what might well be a good-sized piece of the year's racing championship.

After his easy decision over Charley Howard's Mioland yesterday, the only horse still standing in whacky Whirly's way this year appeared to be George D. Widener's Eight-Thirty. The chances are the two won't tangle until the Pimlico Special in November, for Whirlaway will spend the next couple of months banging at his own three-year-old league.

But behind yesterday's race itself were (1) the frantic efforts of at least two trainers to scratch their horses, because they hadn't realized what they were running into, and (2) the lucky break for Belmont when a $2,500 overnight allowance affair popped up with a field that would have done credit to any $50,000 stake.

As for the race itself, Warren Wright's whacky Lightning Streak just showed the older boys how he did it in the Derby and Preakness. With young Wendell Eads doing a creditable job in the saddle, the balmy son of Blenheim II. hit the leaders at the head of the stretch and won in a breeze over Mioland.

The mile and a sixteenth affair was listed as an overnight allowance, with no importance. But Trainers Ben Jones for Whirlaway, Tom Smith for Mioland, Bill Mulholland for Your Choice and Jim Gaver for Hash all got the idea it was a good opportunity for a "conditioner" for the campaign ahead. The only thing wrong with the idea was that all of them got it at the same time. Since the winner's end of the thing amounted to only $1,650, they didn't figure it was worth running for, but Belmont officials said there could be no scratches unless the condition of the track changed before post time.

Here are some N.H.L. statistics to peruse over, even in the off season. "The Toronto Maple Leafs and the Boston Bruins played out the only scoreless tie of the 1940-41 professional hockey season at Toronto. The date was March 1st last and the tie was the third scoreless one in three seasons. The other two were played in the 1939-40 season at Detroit when the New York Rangers were the visitors and the other in Boston between the Rangers and the Bruins. There were no scoreless ties in the previous season. Despite rumors to the contrary emanating from the recent meeting of the National Hockey League board of governors, some experts are of the opinion that the N.H.L. will be operated on a modified scale next season, but they won't give a guess as to what form of modification will be attempted.

Speaking of hockey—Ray Smith, who barely missed hurling a no-hitter for the Reliance softball squad last night, is none other than the same Smith who played wing for the champion Kingston "Combines" last winter. Smith retired the first 20 SACO batters to face him last night before he got into trouble in the seventh when the SACO scored their only counter of the game, as the Reliance won 4 to 1. Last night's game was as thrilling a pitchers' battle as one could desire, with Jim Hunter firing 'em quite effectively for the losers, although extra base hits coming from the bats of Gray, Rowbotham and Shurleff, (the latter getting a homer) proved the difference, as Smith was always on top and only in trouble in one frame. Last winter the Reliance Hockey Club was in difficulty regarding their failure to procure releases for some of their pucksters. The O.A.S.A. demands a similar procedure and it is hoped the Reliance club has Smith's current release if only for his own protection.

Do you remember when Sammy Mandell successfully defended his lightweight boxing title against Jimmy McLarnin at New York 13 years ago tonight. The champion poked and slashed his way through a bristling 15 rounds and kept the Vancouver Irishman bottled up. Mandell was dethroned two years later by Al Singer.

Luke Hamlin's 1941 contract with the Dodgers, it is reported, calls for a salary of $5,000, half of what he drew last year. However, under a bonus arrangement, the pitcher receives an extra $200 for each game he wins until he has ten to his credit. Thereafter, Luke is to collect prize money at the rate of $400 a victory. If he wins 20 games, as he did in 1939, the Hot Potato will receive a total of $11,000 in salary and bonuses, or $1,000 more than he was paid last year. "We give him the bonuses in cash," explained Prexy Larry MacPhail. "It seems cash looks better to Luke than a check."

Commencing within a week, six articles will appear on the sport pages of the Ontario Intelligencer dealing with tennis. The title of the articles is—"The Six Fundamental Strokes in Tennis" and are written by Roland Bloomstrand, well known tennis pro. and an instructor of the game for many years. The articles will be illustrated and should prove of some value to the local tennis realm. The articles are instructive and will no doubt tend to improve your tennis immensely. The proper tennis strokes, pivots and manner in which the racquet should be held to obtain the greatest accuracy and power are only a few of the instructive lessons included in the six illustrated articles. Forehand and backhand drives receiving and serving are only a few of the fundamental features of the service to be provided by the Ontario Intelligencer for the benefit of the local tennis clientele.

Only five clubs will face the barrier in the City Girls' Softball League, now that the K-Nines and Mets. have withdrawn from the league. Earlier in the season the league voted restrictions pertaining to age limits and the question of employing players, both of which proved hardships to the charter members of the league. However, it looks as though President Ted Schwab and his cohorts have at last moved the league out into calmer waters and everything is in readiness for the week end opening with three games commencing Friday night at the Armories. One good motion was passed when the executive met last night, that being the voting of all over-age players, plus pitcher Jean Muir, to the Deacon team. Now the league should boast of five equally strong teams to create more interest all around.

After winning over such nags as Mioland and Hash, Warren Wright's Whirlaway has only to win the Belmont Stakes to breeze into "the horse of the year" bracket. Racing against older horses and literally running all over the track, Whirlaway won and without Eddie Arcaro in the saddle. If Whirlaway wins the Belmont event he should be classed as one of the fastest horses ever and even if he never wins another race, the horse has vindicated Trainer Eddie Jones' contention when he was a wild two-year-old. So hot is this horse today, that over 16,000 racing fans, the largest week-day crowd turnout of the season, were on hand at Belmont track yesterday.

BUFFALO BISONS IN SECOND PLACE AHEAD OF ROYALS

Virgil Trucks and Freddie Hutchison Carry Load for the Bisons

LEAFS LOSE

(By The Associated Press)

Now that Freddy Hutchinson and Virgil Trucks are getting more help from the rest of the Buffalo Bison's pitching corps the Thundering Herd is going to be mighty hard to stop in the International Baseball League.

During the first two weeks of the campaign this duo carried the burden to keep the Bisons around the .500 mark, winning seven of 10 games, while a half dozen other hurlers were losing 10.

Since then the others have been pulling their own weight and the Bisons have won eight games in nine starts and their last seven in a row.

"Hutch" pitched the Bisons into second place in the standings yesterday, beating Montreal Royals 3-1 for his sixth victory of the year. The young right-hander allowed seven hits and struck out seven.

The victory put Buffalo a half game ahead of Montreal and one game behind the leading Newark Bears, who dropped the odd game of a three game series 6-1 to Jersey City last night.

The fourth-place Rochester Red Wings maintained a one-game margin over Syracuse Chiefs, defeating Toronto Leafs 7-4 while the Chiefs were winning their fourth straight from Baltimore 9-4.

Each of the first four Red Wings batters collected three hits in the 14-hit attack on Walter Lanfranconi and Joe Vance. Charley Brumbeloe was credited with the victory although he had to be rescued by John Berly, former Leaf, during a Leaf uprising in the ninth.

CHRISTOFORIDIS MEETS LESNEVICH

Light Heavyweights Will Hook Up in 15-Rounder in New York

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, Jr.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, May 21 (AP) — The sight of a couple of husky punches fighting for a National Boxing Association championship in a state which has no truck with the N.B.A. is just part of the entertainment in store for the fans at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night.

The principals in this odd bout are Anton Christoforidis of Greece, who was one of Europe's most prominent boxers five years ago, and Gus Lesnevich of Cliffside, N.J. They'll go 15 rounds for the light heavyweight title or a part of one, depending upon the point of view.

Christoforidis earned N.B.A. recognition as champion when he outpointed Mello Bettina last January in Cleveland.

In New York, however, Billy Conn still is the official champion, as he hasn't surrendered the title formally though he's aiming only at the heavyweight crown.

Another oddity is that Lesnevich is being piloted by a "substitute" manager while his regular handler, Joe Vella, is serving a hitch in the army. Vella, now private Nicholas Iacavella of Port Eustis, Va., wrote recently that he couldn't even get off to serve in Gus' corner for the fight unless he first passed a markmanship test. And he moaned by mail, "I never had a gun in my hand before I was inducted into the army."

Later word is that Vella has been granted 48 hours leave, so it may be that he can show Lesnevich how to hit the bull's-eye tomorrow.

Christoforidis, a one-time Athens bellhop, has been fighting since he was 14 years old.

Ki-Y League

Coming from behind with a ninth inning rally, the Orioles eked out a 15 to 14 win over the Tigers in the opening Juvenile softball game of the Ki-Y League played at Pine St. school grounds.

The Tigers took the lead with a six-run splurge in the second frame, but four runs each in the third and fourth saw Orioles' big bats put them in the lead, only to have the Tigers rally in a see-saw affair. Down one run in the ninth, the Orioles pushed two across the home plate and then held the Tigers scoreless to win.

The line-ups:

Tigers: Ellis, Yorke, Way, Reid, Ostrom, Greatrix, Phillip, Marsh and B. Reid.

Orioles: Drohn, Adams, Clarke, Shepherd, Meagher, Adams, Lynch, McQuaid and Wilson.

Umpires—G. Hyde and R. Lancaster.

Tool Makers May Be Taken Out of U.S. Army

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Canadian Columnist

Washington — Now there's talk of drafting men out of the U.S. army.

It's a sequel to President Roosevelt's call on Defence Production Chieftain William S. Knudsen to speed up machine tool manufacture to the last fraction of an ounce of our national possibilities.

Soldiers do not fight with machine tools but the tools are absolutely necessary to turn out the arms that they do fight with. Consequently, without enough machine tools, arms can't be delivered to soldiery (and to the other democracies' soldiers) at a swift enough rate. Well, a machine tool shortage does actually exist. Hence an arms shortage. Our machine tool insufficiency constitutes one of the worst bottlenecks we hear so much about.

Acting Chief A. Ford Hinrichs of the Bureau of Labor Statistics explains. According to his account, 75 per cent. of our machine tool factories work only one eight-hour daily shift, six days per week. Twenty per cent. work two shifts daily. A skimpy 5 per cent. work three shifts. The 75 and 20 per centers may work a little overtime, but it doesn't amount to much. There's a limit to the number of daily hours that a machine tool maker can stand, even with extra pay.

The president's proposition is that 100 per cent. of those factories ought to run on a three-shift basis, seven days per week. It's agreed that a worker needs a weekly day off, but there should be a sufficient number of extras to permit that without interfering with the three-shift, seven-day schedule. There should be no break except for servicing the machinery, which need not involve any considerable delay.

Skilled Labor Needed

Most of the plants' managements are said to be amenable. Just give 'em the necessary skilled labor, they say (it's got to be reasonably skilled or it can't make machine tools; it's quite a technical job), and they don't care how many daily shifts or days per week their factories operate.

But skilled labor? Ah, there's the rub.

A one-shift, six-day plant is available to operate seven days weekly, all day and all night, all the time; the plant doesn't get tired; all it requires is a few minutes occasionally to be swept out and have its bearings oiled. And why should its management kick on keeping it going, so long as the government pays it under its contract, plus a moderate profit?—it's assumed that it isn't an emergency profiteering concern.

But its skilled hands? Trebling its shifts will call for multiplying the boys' number by three — and then some, for there'll be the seventh day to reckon with.

And the management's story (a plausible-sounding one) is that every unattached skilled tool machinist in the country already is on the job.

This, they relate, includes oldsters. As for kids, taken in as apprentices?—they won't be very useful for quite awhile. In fact, the managements contend they'll be a nuisance to the skilled craftsmen, while the latter are educating 'em.

Commenting on the situation at one of his press conferences, President Roosevelt gave it as his opinion that some skilled chaps (youngish ones) of the right sort aren't yet at the bench.

How Many in Camp?

Possibly that's true, answer the managements, but, if so, Selective Service has scooped 'em in; they're in the army now.

That's where the scheme of drafting 'em OUT of the army comes in—drafting 'em out of it to put 'em on to machine tool jobs. The war department's making a check-over of the selectees at present, to determine how many machine toolers have inadvertently been assimilated into their ranks. Such as are found will be unloaded in hot haste, to be grabbed by Bill Knudsen to go to machine tooling.

How these selectees will like it remains to be seen. Machine tooling will pay 'em better than being militarily trained. Nevertheless, having been selected involuntarily for one thing, and then to be more or less involuntarily selected for something else, may strike 'em as becoming monotonous. How they feel about it won't signify much, though.

Trenton and District

Famous Salvation Army Band To Visit Trenton District

One of the outstanding Salvation Army Canadian Bands known as the North Toronto S. A. Silver Band will be visiting Trenton, Frankford, Brighton and Colborne this week end May 24, 25.

The band under the direction of Major Robt. Watt will arrive in Trenton Saturday afternoon and will be welcomed by Mayor H. Cory and other civic officials. Captain Fred Hewitt of the Trenton corps is in charge of the arrangements. A band concert will be given Sunday afternoon in Trenton on St. Peter's church lawn at 2.45 p.m.

Trenton, May 21—George Sprentall, who retired as station agent at Trenton for the Canadian National Railways, was the guest on honour at a dinner tendered on Saturday evening by friends of the railwayman.

Canadian National Railways officials from Toronto and other points and employees from Maynooth, Picton and Kingston were among the guests present at the banquet. During the course of the evening he was presented with a radio and a purse of gold. Mrs. Sprentall was presented with a lovely basket of roses.

W. A. Fraser, M.P., was the guest speaker of the evening and paid glowing tributes to Mr. Sprentall's service to the railways which he had served and to the town of Trenton in whose service they had worked together for many years.

His Worship, the Mayor of Trenton, H. R. Cory also praised Mr. Sprentall's citizenship and community service.

Navigation Opened

Navigation on the Trent Canal system and Bay of Quinte waters was officially opened for the 1941 season on Friday last. Bridge tenders lockmaster and assistants along the waterway are now at their posts ready to handle boat traffic on the scenic Trent.

The government steamer "Grenville" has set out all the buoys in the district to make navigation safe.

Mr. A. C. Salisbury was presented with a silver tea service on Saturday by members of the Trenton Cold Storage staff, on the occasion of the silver wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Salisbury.

Graham's Win Tilt

The Century Graham softball team handed the airforce team 6 A.R.D. a 25 to 3 trimming here last night in the second game of the Trenton Softball League, played this season.

The Centuries clicked in the second frame to score nine runs and kept adding to this number every inning with the exception of the sixth. Two hurlers for the Aircraft Repair boys failed to stop the parade at the G.G's clouted the ball all over the lot.

The 6 A.R.D. boys collected the first run in the initial frame when Harnden clouted out a double and then came home on a single by Sponarski. The other two runs came in the second and third frame of the game but from then on Burtt, on the mound for the Centuries, held the airforce boys scoreless. The lineups:

Centuries: Niddery 3b; Morin lf; T. Ellis ss; H. Long c; S. Ellis 1b; Watson 2b; Davis rf; Cook cf, and Burtt p.

BANKS INSTAL CURB SERVICE

Memphis, Tenn., May 21—(AP)—Two Memphis banks came up with a new wrinkle today—curb service banking for busy motorists. They announced plans for construction of "outdoor windows" to which motorists could drive up, hand their deposits over to a teller and drive away without getting out of their automobiles.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Toronto, May 21 (CP)—Alexander Moore, 35, Ottawa, was committed to trial on a charge of manslaughter in County Police Court here yesterday. The death arose out of the death of Gordon Parkes, 22, of suburban Birch Cliff Heights, on May 7, as a result of injuries suffered April 25.

Resident Believes Stolen Flowers Are Being Sold From Door to Door

A suggestion as to a possible solution to recent raids made by persons on flowers in city parks as well as on private flower beds where the flowers have been either wilfully destroyed or stolen, was forwarded by a city resident this morning and it may be that the lady has put her finger right on the trouble.

The lady in question suggested that in all likelihood the flowers stolen from flower beds were taken by children who later endeavour to sell them from door to door and thereby make enough money to go to a show or take in some other form of amusement. "If people would only refuse to purchase flowers from these door to door peddlers, I think that the trouble of flower gardens being robbed would cease," she said. "In many cases where children have come to the door with seasonal flowers. I have felt sure that they had been stolen."

Although there is a possibility there may be a few legitimate cases of children selling flowers, it is quite probable that in many cases of flower beds being robbed during the night, children, with this motive in view can be held responsible. If such is the case a refusal on the part of householders to purchase them would clear up the trouble.

Trenton Will Give Visiting Regiment An Official Welcome

Trenton will go all-out in its officials and citizen receptions to one thousand members of the Grey and Simcoe Foresters' Regiment which ends a long marching trek across Ontario there on Tuesday. May 27, Captain Fred Hewitt, of the Trenton Corps of the Salvation Army, said today.

Following a civic reception the soldiers will be entertained at Hanna Park, where townspeople will show their appreciation of the visit of the troops. The soldiers are equipped with heavy marching kit and will give residents a sight of a completely equipped infantry battalion under war conditions.

The boys will be made pie-conscious while in Trenton, Captain Hewitt said. "I have been placed in charge of women's organizations of the town and all are now planning making pies for the troops."

In Oshawa, each man was given a quarter of a pie.

The Salvation Army is erecting a large marquee tent where refreshments will be served to the soldiers.

Officials Meet To Consider Strike

Toronto, May 21 (CP)—Officials of the Incorporated Canadian Racing Associations met today to consider a strike threatened by the Thoroughbred Breeders' Association unless a representatives of the breeders to the I.C.R. board is recognized.

The breeders said last night they had elected Ryland H. New of Oakville as their representative to the I.C.R.A., replacing Jamee Jeffering of Toronto, but that the replacement had not been recognized. They said they would call a strike among horsemen with stock stabled at Woodbine Park in Toronto unless their representative was recognized.

The statement issued by the breeders said that the Breeders' Association "have agreed that they will not enter or race any horses after Charities Day, May 22, "unless their duly elected representative is afforded "full recognition" by the Incorporated Canadian Racing Associations.

Striking Machinists Turn Down Request

San Francisco, May 21.— (AP)—Striking A.F.L. and C.I.O. machinists early today overwhelmingly rejected Gov. Culbert L. Olson's personal plea that they recede from their wage and hour demands and go back to their jobs in 11 Bay Area shipyards.

San Francisco machinists voted 1,307 to 292 against the Governor's plan, while Oakland members turned it down, 395 to 63.

The Governor, appearing before a meeting of the striking unions last night, asked the 4,000 members to give up their demands in the interests of urgent national defence work.

The machinists, however, agreed by resolution they would not hinder other crafts from returning to work if they wished to pass through picket lines and that they themselves would return to work when the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Company signs a Union contract.

Officials of other unions said a back to work movement would begin today at at last two shipyards "with the fewest cracked skulls possible".

Darlan Booed And Hissed In Occupied France

London, May 21 (CP Cable)—A correspondent of the Free French newspaper in London reported today that Admiral Jean Darlan, Vice-Premier of the Vichy Government, was booed and hissed at Beauvais, occupied France, when he stopped there to lunch with Nazi officials on his way to meet Hitler 10 days ago.

The correspondent wrote that men and women shook their fist when Darlan advanced to speak, and shrieked "Who opened the door of France to the Germans?" and "Who signed the Armistice?"

The arrival of Nazi military police ended the half-hour demonstration, the correspondent added.

Rome Communique

2 Taxi-Drivers Convicted On Murder Charge

Clearwater, Fla., May 21 (AP)—Frank Hogan and Earl J. Allen were convicted today of second degree murder by a Circuit Court jury in the slaying of Mrs. Ruth Rawlins, wife of a wealthy Toronto nickel company executive.

The jury brought in the verdict an hour after resuming deliberations this morning. The jurors were locked up at 1.45 a.m. after failing to reach an agreement in more than four hours of deliberation.

Second degree murder in Florida carries a penalty of 20 years to life imprisonment.

Charged with murder are Frank B. Hogan, 27, and Earl J. Allen, 35. Hogan said in testimony last night before the jury retired that he had nothing to do with the beating of Mrs. Rawlins following a drinking party, except to help Allen place the body in a shallow grave near a road outside nearby Gainesville the night following the slaying March 12th.

Police have charged that Hogan and Allen drove the body to Gainesville in their taxi from a St. Petersburgh apartment in which the alleged beating took place.

The defendants previously signed statements, police said, in which it was written that Mrs. Rawlins, whose husband was a former executive of the International Nickel Company, died in Allen's garage apartment at St. Petersburgh, but each accused the other of the actual slaying.

Mr. and Mrs. Rawlins were holidaying here.

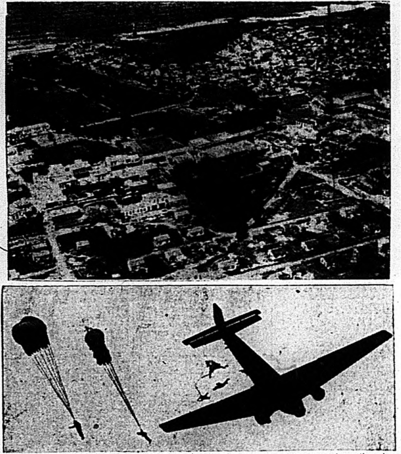
NAZIS LAUNCH PARACHUTE ATTACK AGAINST CRETE



Following days of air bombardment, German parachute troops were dropped on the island of Crete in an attempt to gain a footing on the Greek stronghold where parts of the Greek armies, aided by Empire troops are continuing the fight against the invaders. This was announced by British headquarters in Cairo, who also asserted that the parachutists had "been accounted for." The town and harbor of Canea as seen from the air are shown at TOP; BELOW German chutists are pictured being dropped from big transports. The Crete attack is considered a possible rehearsal for parachute attacks against Britain.

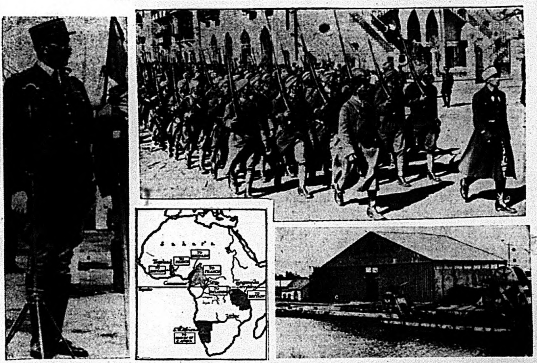
Scores of aliens were apprehended and will be questioned by the authorities.

ANGLO-FRENCH TENSION GROWS IN SYRIA AND AFRICA



Growing tension between Britain and her erstwhile ally was heightened by bitter denunciations by Gen. Henri Dentz, LEFT, Vichy's commander in Syria, of R.A.F. attacks on French Syrian airfields sheltering German planes on their way to help Iraq rebels, and by Vichy threats to hand back former German colonies in Africa as part of an attack on Gen. Charles de Gaulle's Free French movement. Togoland and the Cameroons were split between Britain and France at the end of the last war and the French areas, plus all of French Equatorial Africa, are now held by De Gaulle. (Map shows the former German colonies.) At TOP RIGHT French colonial troops, whom Gen. Dentz says will fight any British effort to take over Syrian territory, are shown marching through Beirut, Syria. Dispatches indicate that Vichy has already handed the important West African port of Dakar—the harbor of which is shown, LOWER RIGHT—to Germany as part of her scheme of "collaboration."

Cheese Production For April Increases By 12,000 Pounds

Hastings County cheese makers made 12,000 pounds more cheese in the month of April than they did in that month a year ago, but their total output for this year up to the end of that month is down approximately 9,000 pounds, H. L. Fair, agricultural representative stated today.

Total production for the month of April, 1941, was 73,337 pounds, as compared to 60,434 pounds in April, a year ago. The total manufactured up to the end of April, this year, is 102,012 pounds as compared to 111,305 pounds for the corresponding period in 1940.

Ontario Production Down

Production of the province is down three million pounds from last year's figures, up to the end of last month. Ontario made 7,925,155 pounds in that period last year as compared to 5,002,753 pounds this year.

However, May production is coming along fine, Mr. Fair stated, as a number of factories are now making as many cheese per day as they were at their peak in 1940. When May figures are released it is expected that a considerable increase in Hastings County production, over the month of May last year, will be noted.

HANSON SUGGESTS NATIONALIZATION OF OIL INDUSTRY

Gasoline Tax Made Applicable to All, Farmers, Fishermen and Tourists Not Excepted

SENATE MEETS

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

Ottawa, May 21 (CP)—Nationalization of the oil industry in Canada was suggested to the government by Conservative House Leader Hanson last night as the House of Commons considered the new Federal tax of three cents a gallon.

This clause in the Special War Revenue Act brought the House, in committee of the whole, to a stop just short of final consideration of the budget taxation resolutions.

Finance Minister Ilsley told the House that after "long weary hours" it was decided to make the gasoline tax applicable to all instead of exempting farmers, fishermen and tourists.

If a satisfactory method of exempting those classes could have been worked out the tax would have been much higher, he said.

Before the gasoline tax measure was reached, heavy increases in taxation had been accepted with comparatively brief debate. The last remaining clause in the income tax resolution was approved yesterday, along with the succession duty and changes in the War Exchange Conservation Act which makes tariff concessions in favor of United Kingdom commodities.

The Senate met briefly last night, adjouring to next Tuesday after withholding second reading of a bill to amend the Divorce Jurisdiction Act of 1930 after Sir Allen Aylesworth (Lib. Ontario) urged changes in the measure.

Not Discussed at Length

Government Leader Dandurand told the Upper House he understood "an effort will be made" to end work of the present sitting of parliament by the end of next week to provide for adjournment of the session.

Mr. Hanson's idea of nationalization of the oil industry was not discussed at length and he said at once it was too large a subject to be gone into at this time. But, he said, other countries had nationalized universally-consumed products and Canada might have to give consideration to it eventually.

"If it could be done here it would yield huge sums of money to the treasury without adding one cent to the cost to the consumer," Mr. Hanson said.

Mr. Ilsley said that before the gasoline tax resolution was drawn up much study was given to means of avoiding extra burdens to farmers, fishermen and tourists.

No Rebates Given

"The more the matter was studied, the more the operation of provincial systems of refunds was examined into, the more it became apparent that unless we wanted to embark upon a system which would bring about wholesale evasion in all parts of the country we had better keep away from the rebate or refund system," he said.

There had been suggestions that rebates be allowed farmers and fishermen for gasoline used for purposes of production but administration difficulties made that undesirable.

In some provinces gasoline of a certain color was sold to farmers and fishermen tax free, and if they were found using it for pleasure purposes they were prosecuted. He had been advised by the provinces that the rebate or refund system was more satisfactory than the use of colored gas.

Require Many Inspectors

"I am told that in one of the provinces where the colored gas system is in effect they have from 100 to 200 prosecutions a month and require a large number of inspectors," Mr. Ilsley said.

"There are members of this administration who have had experience in provincial administrations and from their experience they told us that it would never do for the Dominion Government, so far away from much of the country as it is, to be trying to check up on the use of tax free gasoline."

"The people should be conscientious about these things but a great many of them are not," he added.

The Minister said the Government would prefer to make the tax much higher and impose it only on gasoline used for pleasure purposes, excluding tourists. But such a system was considered non-administrable.

T. C. Douglas (C.C.F. Weyburn), M. J. Coldwell (C.C.F. Rosetown-Biggar), Victor Quelch (N.D. Acadia) and many others, including Liberals, spoke against the tax as applied to farmers and fishermen, but nobody spoke against the principle of the tax as it affects pleasure use.

But Rev. D. McIvor (Lib. Fort William) and G. E. Wood (Lib. Brant) said the only farmers who would be hit by the tax were those who could best afford it.

Mr. McIvor said it was the tractor farmer who made it hard for farmers using horses. Mr. Brant protested what he said was the tendency of many members to depict the farmer as a medicant needing charity. He said he had not a single protest from the farmers in his riding.

A Vigorous Appeal

Percy Black, (Con. Cumberland) made a vigorous appeal on behalf of farmers and fishermen and declared his experience was that a system of rebates to that class worked well.

Mr. Hanson said the provincial gasoline tax in Nova Scotia, now 10 cents a gallon, was the highest in the world.

During afternoon several members suggested provision should be made in the Succession Duty Act to alleviate distress where two or three deaths in quick succession might cause tax payments to eat deeply into estates.

Mr. Ilsley said he expected some system of paying Succession duties in instalments might be permitted but expressed opposition to any exemption for tax in the case of quick successions.

The Minister announced an amendment to the income tax resolution to meet the case of a property-owner outside Canada whose rents from Canadian properties go largely into maintenance of the properties.

The resolution imposes a 15 per cent withholding tax on all rents and other revenues payable to non-residents. Mr. Ilsley, following a suggestion from Howard Green (Con. Vancouver South), said this would be changed to permit persons drawing rents from real estate to file an income tax return showing their net revenue.

USE OF GLIDERS

out from low-flying planes close to their objectives.

British and Greek reports said Nazi parachutists were used in the first drive into Macedonia from Bulgaria, and the Germans said parachutists won the first foothold on the Peloponnesus in the last days of the battle of Greece. They were used, too, in the Axis counter-drive across Libya.

The British and Italians also tried parachutists.

Took Fancy Way

Fascist airmen, who dropped onto Cephalonia and other of the Greek Islands, did it the fancy way. They jumped in "color waves"—the first group with green parachutes, the next with white, and the last with red in a sort of silken flag of Italy floating down.

In the British venture, 20 parachutists landed at night last Oct. 10 in Southern Italy to destroy certain objectives.

Prime Minister Churchill's statement that 1,500 air-borne attackers of Crete wore New Zealand uniforms recalled that the Nazi 'chutists landed in the Netherlands wore army uniforms of that country while those in France wore French uniforms and more often civilian clothes.

Fire Spreads Fast in St. Donat Area

St. Donat, Que., May 21 (CP)—A three-day-old forest fire in this scenic Laurentian Mountain district was reported today to be spreading "very fast" through an area of cut slash northeast, east and southeast of nearby Lake Ouareau.

A fresh wind, which sprang up after 24 hours of calm weather, fanned the flames out over an 80-square-mile area towards L'Assomption River to the northeast, the village of St. Michel Des Saints to the north and Chertsey to the south.

The villages were reported to be in no immediate danger.

At noon today, the fire was reported to be burning over an area 10 miles long and eight miles wide.

Other major fires in the Laurentians, a district which has had no rainfall since Easter, were burning near St. Michel, 25 miles north of here, and in the Black Mountain Lake region southwest of Lake Archambault. About 60 other smaller fires have been reported in the province.

Soldiers' Aid Sought

Hector Bilodeau, Government Inspector of Forests, said Ottawa officials had been asked to send about 500 soldiers from Joliette Military Camp, about 35 miles southeast of here, to help the some 300 Rangers working night and day for three days. He expected the soldiers later today.

The flames have already caused damage estimated at more than $150,000, while destroying about 3,000,000 feet of timber.

Veteran Journalist Dies In Calgary

Calgary, May 21.—(CP)— J. H. Woods 73, veteran journalist and publisher, who for more than a quarter of a century played a notable part in the development of Western Canada, died at his home here late last night.

Mr. Woods, president of South Western Publishers Limited, publishers of the Calgary Herald, had been ill for several months. He retired from active newspaper life in 1936, but retained the presidency of the Calgary Herald, a link in the Southam newspaper chain.

His interests ranged far beyond the newspaper field, and he was internationally known, not only as a publisher, but as a Goodwill Ambassador for Canada, a position attained as chairman of the Canadian section of the Empire Press Union and as President of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

In the Empire countries and in the United States he had striven to improve trade relations, urging the expansion of Canada's commerce "to make Canada a great nation".

AIR-BORNE PHASE

No Confirmation

Military men here said a German air-borne division, such as the one reported engaged in the attempted invasion of Crete, consists of two infantry regiments, one artillery regiment armed with 75-millimetre guns, an anti-tank artillery battalion with 37-mm. guns, a motorcycle reconnaissance unit, a signal corps and a detachment of engineers.

Such a division, it was said, probably uses about 250 planes, each of which is expected to make three or four trips carrying troops and towing gliders.

Technique Described

The technique is to drop parachutists first. If they are successful in establishing a base they put out signals and the troop-carrying planes attempt to land.

Thus far there have been no reports that the Nazis have landed tanks in Crete by air.

The British Broadcasting Corporation, following up an assertion by Prime Minister Churchill that the invaders wore New Zealand battle-dress, broadcast this warning to Germany's armed forces:—

"Every German soldier must know that whoever, in violation of International law, fights in an enemy uniform must expect to be shot at once when taken prisoner".

1,200 Planes Available

Germany is known to have approximately 1,200 tri - motored transport planes and hundreds of gliders available for an aerial offensive on a grand scale.

The size of the force defending Crete remained a military secret, but it was understood it included two full Greek divisions in addition to large numbers of British and Imperial troops.

Maj.-Gen. B. C. Freyberg, of New Zealand, in command of the defence of Crete, was said to have anticipated just such an attack as that which developed yesterday and to have made careful preparations to meet it.

As a result, a considerable number of German invaders were said to have been disposed of as fast as they landed.

Recalling Mr. Churchill's pledge to the House of Commons May 7 that Crete would be defended "to the death and with no thought of retirement," informed quarters said the Allies were determined to wage a battle in which "no Dunkerque is visualized."

Aerial Bombardment Possible

If German attempts to invade Crete fail, the Nazis probably will subject the island to violent aerial bombardment in an effort to make it untenable or useless as a base, British military men said.

They gave the following reasons why capture of Crete would be of great strategic importance to the Nazis and why the island must be held at all costs:

1. It would give the Germans a base from which they could attack the British fleet more effectively in an effort to keep it bottled up at Alexandria.
2. It would complete the defensive circle guarding the entrance to the Aegean Sea, filling in the gap between the Italian Dodecanese Islands and the Greek mainland.
3. It would help shield the movement of Axis troops and supplies from Italy to North Africa, where British forces are now fighting a German-Italian thrust aimed at the Suez Canal.

These sources expressed belief that Nazi attacks on Crete would be followed up by an attempt to seize the British island of Cyprus, approximately 325 miles to the east.

Broadcast Heard

New York, May 21—(AP)—The British Broadcasting Corporation indicated today that air-borne German invaders had gained at least a temporary foothold on part of the Greek Island of Crete, including fields on which planes can land.

The broadcast reiterated reports that "the situation is in hand," however, and said "there is no lack of control of very large areas of the island, although parachute troops may be fighting in groups at various points."

Some German planes are known to have been shot down before they could land, the BBC added "and there is ample reason to believe that large numbers of the German troops were captured alive."

A BBC commentator, Maj. Alan Murray, predicted that the Germans would use the many ships now in Greek and Dodecanese harbors, but declared "such an attempt on the part of the Germans is just the sort of operations the navy would welcome."

He acknowledged the possibility that some sea transports might get through and added that "it looks rather as if one or two already have."

The broadcast was heard here by the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Verbal Pledges Useless

In the broader field of Vichy-American relations, the United States was understood to have lost faith completely in verbal pledges transmitted to the State department by the Vichy Envoy.

The reported reason was that the pledges have not prevented the Vichy Government's pro-Hitler elements (as Hull is understood to call them) from forcing obedience to Nazi demands for increasing "cooperation".

Permitting Nazi warplanes to use airfields in French-mandated Syria for operations against British forces in Iraq was cited as a specific example of Vichy's acquiescence to demands beyond requirements of the Armistice.

In this connection, informed quarters said that Vichy's action might constitute a violation of the 1924 convention between the French and American Republics, which stipulated that no part of the mandated territory should be "placed under control of a foreign power" unless the United States assents.

Henry-Haye set the diplomatic pot boiling yesterday when he conferred for an hour with Hull, seeking to ascertain why Vichy-Berlin "collaboration" had caused an "explosion of emotion" here and inspired President Roosevelt to warn the French people against allying themselves "with a military power" bent on "the utter destruction of freedom".

USUALLY BRIDES HELP BUY RINGS

Maritime Man Shows His Scheme for Spotting and Repairing Causes

New York (CP) — Sentimental June weddings are likely to be a bit more expensive than the casual kind, what with lacy veils and diamond rings and multiple bridesmaids, but nobody seems to mind.

About 75 per cent get engagement rings. The engagement ring isn't necessarily expensive. A survey of jewelers shows that about half of all engagement rings are priced at $50 or less. Only once in five years do the jewelers find a bridegroom willing and able to buy a $100,000 ring.

Wedding bands, too, are sentimental once again after about ten years of severity in styling. New ones, made of gold or platinum, are elaborately carved and often set with diamonds. Engagement ring and wedding ring band often are selected at the same time, in related styles—and usually the bride helps with the selecting.

POLICE PRESSING

New light on the case was shed yesterday by Dr. E. R. Frankish, Ontario medico-legal expert, who said after a post-mortem examination that "marks of violence" had been found on Walton's body.

Police Cite Several Facts

In addition to this statement, police cited two other facts as strengthening their belief Walton was slain some time after he was last seen May 5 outside a club at Aylmer, Que.

Walton's body was found behind the Parliament Buildings, 27 miles upstream from the spot, where his abandoned automobile was found May 6.

No money was found in his clothing although when last seen he was believed to have had about $80 on his person.

Deputy Attorney-General C. L. Snyder of Toronto and Inspector W. H. Lougheed of the Ontario Provincial Police arrived here yesterday with Dr. Franish to take charge of the investigation.

Dr. W. T. Shirreff, chief coroner, opened an inquest yesterday and adjourned it indefinitely.

Since Walton was last seen alive police have questioned more than 100 persons. At one stage the investigation extended to Montreal.

When 'The Rock' Resisted A Four-Year Siege

By HORACE WYNDHAM
in The Navy (London)

Since the year 1704 the British flag has floated over the ramparts of Gibraltar, despite several attempts to supplant it by that of another country.

"The Rock," as Gibraltar is always known, was secured for England by the daring of Admiral Rooke. Cruising off the northern coast of Africa in the Summer of 1704, he led his fleet into the Bay and called on the Spanish garrison to surrender. When the summons was ignored, the admiral beat to quarters, loaded his guns with grapeshot, fired a succession of broadsides, and landed an armed party of seamen and marines. Their cutlasses and bayonets soon proved effective, and within three days the fortress was handed over to Admiral Rooke, who took possession of it "in the name of our Sovereign Lady Queen Anne."

As may be imagined, the loss of "the Rock" was a sore point with the Dons. Some years later, accordingly, in 1727 to be exact, they made an attempt to recover it. This time they were better prepared, and the siege that ensued lasted six months. The Spaniards had a force of 20,000 men, together with a number of battleships, while the British garrison numbered scarcely 6,000, the majority of whom were raw recruits. Still, they gave such a good account of themselves that the enemy, after suffering heavy losses, abandoned the struggle.

For the next 50 years Gibraltar was tranquil enough, and the British garrison there settled down to the routine of sentry-go, pipe clay and barrack square drill. But the Dons and Hidalgos still nursed a secret desire to get the fortress back again. What they considered a good opportunity presented itself in 1779. This was certainly the case, for England just then had three campaigns on her hands, being at war with France, Holland and the American colonists. Thinking the opportunity not one to be missed, King Philip of Spain joined with France, and, assembling an army of 60,000 men and hundreds of guns, began what has become known to history as "the Great Siege."

The commander of the British troops charged with the defence of Gibraltar was General Elliott. A veteran of many campaigns, he had "smelled powder" at Dettingen, and was what would now be called a "scientific soldier." Since he knew very well that valor alone would not be enough, on being appointed to his new post, he set to work to improve the fortifications; and it was under his care that the famous galleries adjoining the Moorish Castle were constructed and guns mounted in them. The largest of these galleries is known as St. George's Hall, and its embrasures are directly opposite the approach from Spain by land.

The construction of the galleries and their magazines, cut high up in the solid cliff and extending for more than 300 yards, involved immense labor. Much of it was performed by soldiers who, ordered "the cat" for misconduct, were permitted to count a day's voluntary work with pick and shovel as the equivalent of 100 lashes. Full advantage was taken of the concession; and many an ill-behaved warrior thus avoided a sore back. General Elliott, determined not to be caught napping, also busied himself with building bomb-proof batteries and mounting guns in hidden positions at points of vantage along the front. They rendered good service when tested, for the enemy had no knowledge of their existence.

At the word of command, "Britons, strike home!" the first round from the garrison was fired on a September morning. This was the signal for the enemy, who replied with a salvo. Guns roared and boomed, and a rain of shot and shell poured into the fortress, continuing day and night, with scarcely an hour's pause.

But shot and shell were not all that the garrison had to meet. Before long another danger confronted them. This was the spectre of famine. Gibraltar had not been provisioned for a prolonged siege. Supplies were scanty, and fresh ones from England had to run a blockade. As a result, everybody was soon on short commons, with half rations followed by quarter rations, and quarter rations by a good deal less. The soldiers' hair powder was even used for puddings, and thistles and dandelions for broth.

General Elliott set an example, and insisted on living on the same fare as the troops serving under him.

The hard-pressed garrison did not concern itself merely with defence. If there were attacks, there were also counter-attacks. On several occasions sorties were made under cover of night, and small parties would penetrate into the enemy's camp outside the lines. This was specially hazardous work. Yet everybody was so anxious to share it that it became necessary to announce "no volunteers will be permitted."

The siege dragged on, month after month and year after year, the enemy, assisted by France, continually bringing up fresh reinforcements. "Gibraltar must be captured. See to it," was the peremptory order of King Philip. "We'll do our best, sir," returned the commander of the Spanish troops, "but the Rock is a tough nut to crack." This was certainly the case, for, pounded and battered as it was by shot and shell, and the garrison decimated by wounds and sickness and hunger, the British flag still floated triumphantly above the ramparts.

A student of the art of war, General Elliott was in advance of his period. Always ready to try experiments, he had one of the batteries loaded with red hot shot, heated in furnaces. This gave the attackers a warmer reception than they had bargained for, and they withdrew in haste.

Another surprise for them was when, mixed with bullets, a shower of dollars and doubloons fell in their midst. The explanation of this novel and unauthorized ammunition puzzled the Governor. Inquiries were set on foot and revealed that a soldier had found a bag of coins among a heap of debris, and, looking for a place of concealment, had hidden it in the muzzle of a cannon, meaning to retrieve it at the first opportunity. Much to his dismay, however, this particular cannon was the next one to be fired.

As time went on several attempts were made to run the blockade and bring the defenders much-needed help. Some of the attempts were successful. One such was that of a squadron under Admiral Rodney, and on board his flagship, serving as a midshipman, was the future King William IV. "When that youthful hero," says a chronicler, "returned to England and laid his laurels at the feet of his royal father, he brought with him an account of the garrison's situation." The Spaniards were much impressed. "Well does Great Britain merit her empire of the sea," announced a despatch, "when even the humblest position in her navy is occupied by a Prince of the Blood."

During the third year of the siege Lord Howe arrived off Gibraltar with a convoy bringing fresh provisions. "It is almost beyond our power," declared a famished warrior, "to describe our transports of happiness when the ships were signalled and the supplies safely landed."

This timely help proved effective; and the enemy, convinced at last that "the Rock" really was impregnable, abandoned the attempt to wrest it from England. Accordingly, they sued for peace; and in April, 1783, the "Great Siege," which had been in progress for three years and seven months, came to an end. From that moment the British flag has never been hauled down on Gibraltar.

As a reward for his prowess, a peerage was conferred on General Elliott; and the regiments which served under him during the defence still bear the word Montis insignia Calpe for their motto, and the Castle and Keys for their crest.

Radio "Ham" Honored

Pictured among the gadgets of his home-built station in Olathe, Kan., is Marshall H. Ensor, school teacher, cited as the amateur radio operator who "contributed most usefully to the American people." Ensor has voluntarily conducted code practice over the air on regular schedule for the past 10 years, performing a valuable service in training men for vital communication posts in defence work.

Little Benny's Note Book

Today in school Miss Kitty told us all about the birds being some of nature's most wonderful things, saying, So now I hope you all understand what a wonderful instinct promps the birds, from the tiny humming bird to the mitey eagle, to build nests for their eggs so their young ones will have a comfortable home, and how birds all through the ages have inspired poets with their song and painters with their plumage, and how even the humble sparrow deserves the undying gratitude of the farmer for making ceaseless war on harmful insects, and now if there are any questions on the subject of birds please ask them andotherwise we will go on to the spelling period.

Sounding like a perfect time for questions, and different fellows hurry up waved their hands, Miss Kitty saying, Well, Howerd?

Meaning Shorty Judge, and he said, Could an ostritch and a sparrow be friends?

Well, nature is wonderful, and we've all heard stories and seen pictures of remarkable friendships among animals, so why not among birds? Miss Kitty said, and Sam Cross waved his hand, saying, How would the farmers feel if the humble sparrows and the harmful insects got too friendly?

I hardly think we need worry on that score, Miss Kitty said.

Meaning it wasn't very probable and Raymin Levy waved, saying, What's the best thing for a lady to do when a bat gets in her hair?

O deer, let's not even think of that, Miss Kitty said, and I waved, saying, Would a mother bird reckonize one of her own eggs after about 2 years?

Even if she could I'm afraid it wouldn't be much use, and now that will end the questions, Miss Kitty said.

Wich it did.

TOO MANY WOMEN IN BARS

Chicago, May 21.—(AP)—Alderman Jim McDermott can remember the days when a woman would sooner admit her age than be seen in a barroom—and he intends to bring them back. Alderman Jim, sponsoring a city ordinance to prohibit the sale of liquor to women unless they are seated at tables, said today it's getting so a man can't find elbow room at a bar anymore.

BRITISH FRUSTRATE NAZI ATTEMPTED LANDINGS

* * * * * * *

EDEN WARNS VICHY AGAINST 'COLLABORATION'

Efforts To Support Air-Borne Attacks On Crete Repulsed

Military Men Express Belief Worst Phase Of The Struggle Is To Come

CYPRUS REINFORCED

London, May 22 (CP).—German troops pouring from the sky on the third day of a mass aerial invasion of Crete have wrested two footholds from the Greek island's British and Greek defenders, it was announced today.

Prime Minister Churchill informed the House of Commons that Nazi parachutists had taken the town of Heraclean (Candia), but that British troops still held the airport there.

The Middle East Command in Cairo announced that the town of Malemi was in Nazi hands.

Both reports, however, called the German gains only isolated successes in the fierce, guerilla-like warfare against German soldiers dropping from the skies in transports and floating down by glider and parachute.

Both also said that attempts by the Germans to put supporting forces ashore from the sea had been frustrated.

'At Malemi airdrome, 10 miles southwest of Canea," the prime minister disclosed, "it appears that the enemy are now in occupation of the airdrome and of the area to the west of it, but the airdrome is still under our fire."

The Cairo war bulletin said "operations to deal with this situation are now in progress.

Of the naval phase of the invasion, it said merely that, "as a result of determined action by the Royal Navy, attempts by the Germans to support their air-borne troops by landing from the sea have been dispersed or sunk."

In greater detail, Mr. Churchill told parliament:

"Last night the enemy began to try sea-borne landings.

"A convoy making for Crete was intercepted by our naval forces. Two transports and a number of caiques —Greek boats—which probably contained troops was also sunk, but during the course of today very much larger attempts have been made by the enemy to carry an army into Crete and a convoy of 30 vessels was discerned by our forces this morning an dwas presumably attacked by them."

At the same time, the Royal Air Force Middle East communique said in Cairo that British bombers had renewed heavy raids on German-held Greek airdromes, springboards for the aerial assault on Crete.

British military men expressed belief that the worst of the struggle for the Mediterranean island stronghold, seat of the Greek government since its flight from Athens, still was to come.

Declaring that Germany's military prestige demands swift decisive action, these sources said they believed the Nazis would fall back on their familiar plan and unleash an all-out bombing attack in an attempt to blast a path for fresh waves of "sky troops."

Writer Warns Against Sentimental Response To Whines Of Germans

Toronto, May 22—That Germany's "organization of compassion" has already begun is the assertion of Douglas Reed, quoted in the current issue of the "Canadian Churchman". It is by this means, says Mr. Reed, that Germany hopes to evade the penalty of losing a war wantonly begun. Whining about German sufferings and injustice to Germany is resorted to, he declares, in order to soften the hearts of those against whom she nas offended.

Bearing out his contention that the process had already started, Mr. Reed points to the fact that while, on "Heroes' Day", Hitler promised the German people victory in 1941, he also complained bitterly that England, which had waged a war of starvation against German women and children in the last war, had "begun" the air war against peaceful towns and villages in this war.

By Autumn, he predicts, these cries will have become intensified and he warns against sentimental response to this cowardly device to escape punishment.

Appeal Is Made To Chinese Communist Eighth Route Army

Chungking, May 22 (AP)—An appeal to the Chinese Communist Eighth Route Army to aid Chinese Central Armies battling the Japanese in Southern Shensi Province "before it is too late" was issued yesterday by China's leading daily, Ta Kung Pao.

Thus evidence of further friction between the Central and Communist troops was indicated. The editorial addressed to the Communists said:—

"We've heard many unfavorable rumors about you, but believe them to be Japanese-inspired. However, one fact cannot be denied—you presently are not helping the other government forces fight the Japanese.

"Your non-cooperation has given the Japanese an initial success. In behalf of all the Chinese people we appeal to you to join in the fighting before it is too late...... You are well known for your wonderful spirits as guerillas and also you are within easy striking distance of the Japanese behind their lines."

St. Louis, May 22 (AP)—You've heard the assertion of singers that when they hit that "perfect pitch" the tone vibration will shatter a glass? Well, a St. Louis orchestra went them one better. It hit a terrific pitch and the resultant vibrations shattered a huge window pane 12 feet above the dance floor.

FIRE FIGHTERS HOPE FOR RAIN TO QUENCH FIRES

More Than Sixty Blazes Reported In Province Of Quebec—Soldiers Assist Fighters

FIRE NEAR TIMMINS

(By the Canadian Press)

Weary and smoke-blackened forest rangers and volunteers hoped for rain today to help them fight a chain of fires stretching from the Laurentians almost to the foothills of the Rockies. Manitoba was the only province between Quebec and Alberta not reporting fires.

Thunderstorms brought rain to the Laurentian hills around St. Donat, Que., yesterday to aid fire fighters in preventing spread of flames which they had been battling for three days. But it did not last long enough to quench the fires.

The flames rolled through an 80-mile square woodland area which has had scarcely any rain since Easter. It was only one of the 60-odd blazes reported throughout the province. One fire in the northwestern section of Quebec almost wiped out the village of St. Prime.

Authorities said they had asked for an airplane to make observation flights over the St. Donat area because the smoke was so dense fire tower watchers could not locate the fire heads. A group of one hundred soldiers was sent into the area and more troops were expected momentarily.

One fire touched Canada's war effort. Near Aylsham in northeastern Saskatchewan attempts were being made to move 15,000,000 board feet of lumber, cut to be used in ammunition boxes, from the path of a raging forest fire.

Many in Saskatchewan

There were numerous fires burning northwest, west and southwest of Edmonton in the bush. Loss of green timber, however, was said to be practically negligible and unless strong winds sprang up, it was believed the fires could be kept under comparative control.

Serious fires were burning in Northern Ontario which has had the earliest and dryest spring in years. One fire which Rangers had been battling since Sunday turned back on its tracks and headed towards the village of Gogama, 70 miles south of Sudbury. Bushmen, rangers and mill-workers fought half a dozen other serious fires in the area.

Another bad fire raged through Murphy Township near Timmins but Rangers expressed belief it would be brought under control before valuable property was endangered. At one time the flames were heading for the Abitibi timber limits, one of the most valuable timber stands in Northern Ontario.

Men with pump equipment were rushed to a fire front near Kirkland Lake when flames threatened to cut a power line feeding the area.

R. A. F. Makes Heaviest Attack On Nazi Concentrations In Libya

By EDWARD KENNEDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

With British Desert Forces in North Africa, May 22 (AP).—The Royal Air Force has unloosed its most intensive effort of the war so far against German concentrations and transport columns in Libya.

In the past 30 hours eight German planes have been destroyed—five on the ground and three in the air—and an ammunition dump and a gasoline dump have been exploded.

As flight after flight of British bombers showered missiles through the day and night, R.A.F. fighter planes skimmed over the roads and desert trails sending thousands of incendiary bullets into Axis vehicles.

German aviation in the desert is remaining strangely inactive. Among steps to counter the British air offensive, however, the Nazis are said to have stationed tanks at regular intervals along the roads and trails to shoot at low-flying, strafing British planes.

The main target of British air attacks has been a concentration in the Capuzzo-Bardia area, just across the Libyan frontier from Egypt, which is said to be made up of about 2,000 vehicles.

Supply transportation to this concentration, however, is regarded as only normal and British opinion is there is nothing to indicate the Nazis plan an imminent offensive.

The only land action of the last 30 hours was some ineffectual artillery fire from German batteries.

While British air losses so far have been relatively light, the pilots say German anti-aircraft fire is superior to the Italians and is improving.

Hess Bailed Out After Hot Pursuit By RAF Plane—Sinclair

London May 22.—(CP)—Rudolf Hess, the runaway No. 3 Nazi of Germany, bailed out of his Messerschmitt May 10 after hot pursuit by a Royal Air Force Defiant fighting plane, Air Secretary Sir Archibald Sinclair told the House of Commons today.

The Sinclair statement, one of the most revealing official announcements so far on the Hess case, thus contained a possible explanation of the bullet holes which were found in the tail of Hess' wrecked Messerschmitt.

The Defiant was 'hot on the trail' of the Messerschmitt, following it in the darkness, when Hess bailed out, Sir Archibald said. He did not say definitely however, whether the Defiant fired on the Messerschmitt.

Duke Had Never Met Hess

The Duke of Hamilton, Premier Scottish Peer and an Air Commodore in the Royal Air Force, for whom Hess is said to have asked when he was picked up injured from his parachute jump, never met the Deputy Fuehrer before the night he confronted Hess as a prisoner of war, the Air Secretary said.

Answering a welter of parliamentary questions about the Duke's connection with the startling flight by Hitler's former "shadow", Sir Archibald Sinclair, the Air Minister, said the Duke did not even "recognise the prisoner" when he first faced him.

Purpose Still Mystery

This statement, promised the House by Prime Minister Churchill last Tuesday, further cloaked the mysterious purpose who prompted Hess to risk the 800-mile flight from Southern Germany to Scotland in a Messerschmitt plane.

Because Hamilton was known as a "Sporting Duke" and had served on the 1936 Berlin Olympic Games Committee, there had been reports in the British press that Hess and the Duke, now a Royal Aid Force Wing Commander, had been in correspondence before the flight. Sir Archibald denied this.

Hess Gave False Name at First

He said: "When Deputy Fuehrer Hess came down with an airplane in Scotland on May 10 he gave a false name and asked to see the Duke of Hamilton. The Duke of Hamilton, on being apprized by the authorities, visited the German prisoner in the hospital. Hess then revealed for the first time his true identity, saying that he had seen the Duke when he was at the Olympic games at Berlin in 1936. The Duke did not recognise the prisoner and had never met the Deputy Fuehrer".

SOME CANADIANS ABOARD TANKER BELIEVED LOST

Thirty Persons on Canadolite Feared Sunk Off West Coast of Africa

SOME INTERNED

Ottawa, May 22.—(CP)— Thirty persons, including a number of Canadians, are feared to have been lost aboard the big Canadian Oil Tanker, Canadolite, it was learned here today.

Officials said reports had been received from London that the Canadolite was feared sunk off the West Coast of Africa.

It was said here that thirty persons were listed as having been aboard the vessel, that a number were Canadians but that it was impossible to segregate them.

An official statement on the vessel is expected later in the day from the office of Prime Minister Mackenzie King after all checks on information available have been made.

The list of those aboard and feared missing will be made public then.

Pending the official announcement no details were available here as to the circumstances of the loss.

News of the Canadolite became available only a few hours after loss of the steamship Portador formerly

AXIS SEAMEN TO BE SENT HOME

Costa Rica Government Rules Men Must Leave the Country Immediately

San Jose, Costa Rica, May 22 (AP)—The Government last night decreed general amnesty for all German and Italian sailors arrested on arson charges in connection with the burning of the Italian steamship Fella and the German vessel Eisenach several weeks ago at Puntarenas, Costa Rican Pacific Coast port.

The Axis seamen will be freed on condition that they immediately leave Costa Rica and go beyond the bordering countries of Panama and Nicaragua, and that they remain away from these countries for the duration of the war.

The decision to free the German and Italian sailors was reached in conversations between Costa Rica's foreign minister and Axis diplomatic representatives. It was believed they would be sent to their respective countries aboard a Japanese steamship, by way of the Orient.

FRENCH TROOPS NOW ON MOVE IN SYRIA, LEBANON

Little Hostility Toward Britain Found in French-Mandated Territories

BORDERS OPEN

Editor's Note: J. Reilly O'Sullivan, Associated Press Foreign Correspondent, travelled across Syria and Lebanon to see how those French-mandated territories have been affected by the spreading hostilities in the Middle East. He was refused permission to stop.

By J. REILLY O'SULLIVAN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Jerusalem, May 22 (AP).—French troops are on the move in Syria and Lebanon and long-idle French warships in Beirut harbor have started exercises—lending point to the declaration by the Vichy government high commissioner in Syria, Gen. Henri Dentz, that his army is ready to meet force with force.

On the other hand, little hostility toward Britain is to be found in these French-mandated territories of the Middle East, and although the army generally is counted as loyal to Gen. Dentz, some Free French sentiment is known to exist. Some French airmen are said to have gone over to the Free French.

(Reuters News Agency and Radio Brazzaville, Free French station in French Equatorial Africa, reported that a full regiment of French regulars in Syria was believed to have deserted to join Free French troops declared to be advancing into Syria from Palestine.

Highways Guarded.

(A Reuters quoted the independent French agency A.P.I. as saying the regiment which deserted to Gen. Charles De Gaulle's forces comprised the rearguard of a large army ordered into Lebanon to forestall possible intervention from Palestine.)

Highways are guarded and blocked but the borders remain open and there is no blackout in the cities despite Royal Air Force bombings of airfields used by the Nazis in sending aid to Iraq. Gen. Dentz has protested these bombings as acts of aggression.

His broadcast warning to Britain, in which he said Syria would not "endanger its just cause by aggressive actions" but stood "ready to meet force with force", was interpreted as an indication of a prior Vichy-Berlin agreement permitting Nazi use of airports in Syria and Lebanon.

Unofficial reports said a German demand for use of the airfields had been rejected a fortnight ago but that Nazi planes began to land anyway.

BRITISH BOMBERS LEAVE HELIGOLAND A SWIRL OF DUST

Direct Hit Made On An Anti-Aircraft Battery Of Four Guns—Many Fires Started

OIL REFINERY HIT

London, May 22 (CP)—British bombers which attacked the naval base, docks and centre of the town at Heligoland left that German island stronghold in the North Sea shrouded in a "swirl of dust and smoke lit here and there by flames," the Air Ministry News Service said today.

A football game was in progress when the bombers swooped over the base yesterday, the report added, but the game quickly broke up and anti-aircraft batteries went into furious action while the bombers swept over at a height of only 40 or 50 feet.

Bombs from one plane made a direct hit on an anti-aircraft battery of four guns, it was said.

Bad weather forced cancellation of all air operations last night, but another daylight attack was made yesterday on a power station and oil refinery at Gosnay, near Bethune 40 miles south of Dunkirk.

The navigator of one plane said that after dropping his bombs on the power station he saw "dozens of small white mushrooms of smoke, followed by many yellow and green explosions all over the target area."

The raiders flew straight to their target even though aid battles were in progress all around them as a result of encounters with Nazi fighters.

Two bombers and six fighters were lost in the two operations, but five German fighters were shot down.

One of the bombers, it said, was lost in a small scale attack of Heligoland, island base in the North Sea; the other aircraft shot down or missing, both British and German, fell during the sweep into France by British bombers, escorted by a large formation of fighters.

"Shortly after crossing the French coast," an Air Ministry communique said, "enemy fighters engaged our aircraft and a number of combats ensued.

"In spite of this the enemy was unable to prevent success of the attack...."

The Air Ministry News Service said German fighters "were unable to shake off our Spitfires and Hurricanes" escorting the bombers in the Bethune attack.

The wing commander who led the fighter escort squadron said:—

"I know that when we used to attack fighter escorts in the battle of Britain, it almost invariably ended in enemy bombers being left to the mercy of our fighters.

On the home front, the Air Ministry announced last night its decision to discontinue giving details of Nazi plane casualties lest the information benefit Nazi strategists. The number of raiders shot down over Britain will be given as usual, it said, but not the place or the manner in which they are downed.

If Policy Pursued, U.K. Will Strike Enemy Anywhere

Whether In Occupied Or Unoccupied Areas, Says Eden, Advising House On Possible Action

FRENCH PEOPLE'S VIEW

London, May 22—(CP)—Britain warned Vichy today that if France pursues her "declared policy of collaboration" with Germany, British forces will strike "the enemy wherever he may be found," without "any distinction between occupied and unoccupied territory."

In advising the House of Commons of possible war action against any part of the French empire, Foreign Minister Eden said the Vichy Government had embarked on a course which must place the resources and territories of France increasingly at the disposal of Germany.

The British Government was confident, Mr. Eden said, that the French people themselves look upon this policy as "incompatible" with honor.

Pointing out that President Roosevelt had called German occupation of Syrian airdromes a "sinister development in Vichy policy," Mr. Eden added that French statements that only "political and economic" collaboration between France and Germany was taking place were unsatisfactory.

"These explanations," he said, "cannot conceal that they have embarked on a course which must place the resources and territories of France and her empire increasingly at the disposal of a power which is the enemy not only of France's former ally but of France herself."

Report of Developments

Mr. Eden's statement was made as the following developments heightened feeling between London and Vichy:

1. Free French forces of Gen. Charles de Gaulle, fighting on the British side, were reported unofficially to have crossed from British-mandated Palestine into French-mandated Syria, where the Germans already have established a foothold.
2. Reports to Vichy from German-occupied Paris said the French had ordered preparations for a defence of the Caribbean island of Martinique against possible United States attack.
3. British naval patrols in the Atlantic have intercepted the French tanker Sheherazade with a cargo of United States oil for French North Africa, it was announced officially, because of the actions of the Vichy government.

DEAD THREE MINUTES

Rotherham, Eng. (CP)—From a heart condition, Frederick Blair, 46, was reported dead, but three minutes later after heart massage by a surgeon, he was "living again" and recovered.

G. Graydon Appointed National Chairman Of Conservative Party

Ottawa, May 22—(CP)—Appointment of Gordon Graydon (Con. Peel), to the position of National Chairman of the Conservative party of Canada was announced today at conclusion of a caucus of Conservative members of parliament.

Mr. Graydon will take over the organization of the party, headquarters' administration, publicity and the proposed nationwide survey.

John R. MacNicol (Con. Toronto - Davenport) will remain as President of the Dominion Conservative Association.

Mr. Graydon's post is a new one in the Conservative national organization.

Following the last general election Dr. J. M. Robb of Blind River, Ont., resigned as Conservative organizer and that position has remained unfilled.

Mr. Graydon's duties will include that of organizer but his powers will be considerably enlarged.

In announcing the decision of the caucus Acting House Leader Hanson said, "Mr. Graydon will have wide powers over virtually all the Dominion party affairs outside of the House of Commons except the Dominion Conservative Association which will continue to function under its president, Mr. MacNicol."

"Mr. Graydon has been pressed into this wartime national service by insistent and unanimous demands from practically every section of Canada. On several occasions, previously he has declined, but during the past week, my colleagues and I have been able to prevail upon him to accept the position as part of a wartime duty. The acceptance of the position involves a considerable personal sacrifice for Mr. Graydon and he has only undertaken the task out of his high sense of duty in this watrime period."

BOMBER CONTRACT EXPECTED SOON

Contract Nears Signing Stage With National Steel Car Corporation

Ottawa, May 22 (CP).—A "go ahead" signal has been given National Steel Car Corporation of Montreal to start tooling up their plant and ordering material for new bomber production while negotiations are moving toward completion on a contract that probably will run to some $30,000,000, it was learned today.

The contract, it was learned, is close to the signing stage.

It was believed here the undertaking to build the bombers in the Canadian plant would be under licence from the Glenn Martin Corporation of the United States.

The bombers would be the Martin B-26 type, a medium bomber, said to be the fastest plane of its type in the world and capable of making about 400 miles an hour and 350 miles an hour with a full bomb load.

This aircraft is a twin-engined bomber.

Heavy Raids on Greek Airdromes

Cairo —(AP)— Renewed heavy British air raids on Greek airdromes from which the Germans are basing their attack on Crete were reported by a British Middle East air communique today.

The communique also said the Germans raided the British cantonment at Habbaniyah airdrome, in Iraq.

HYDRO POLE BROKEN ON BLEECKER AVENUE

While turning his taxicab around on Bleecker Avenue, at noon today the vehicle, driven by James H. Duesberry, Herchimer Ave., struck a Hydro pole and broke the pole some ten feet from the ground. Mr. Duesberry reported the accident to the police and stated he was backing up at the time of the impact. Hydro officials were notified.

Otherwise activities in loval police circles were quiet and serene during the past 24 hours, one drunk and a speedster being the only persons to run afoul of the law.

SCHOOLS IN CITY AND DISTRICT DOING THEIR BIT IN WAR

Conclusive proof that the public schools of Belleville are doing their bit for their country in the purchase of War Savings Stamps is the fact that from January to April, inclusive, the four public schools of Belleville, Thurlow Township and Frankford schools have either purchased or sold $7,402 worth of stamps.

Queen Victoria School, the largest school in Belleville, naturally topped the list, purchasing $2,035 worth of stamps. Queen Alexandra School $1,807, King George School $1,583 and Queen Mary School $1,090. Frankford Village school is credited with selling $252 in stamps and Thurlow Township schools $635.

FIREMEN DECORATE LOAN HEADQUARTERS

The exterior of the local office being used as headquarters for the forthcoming Victory Loan drive commencing June 2nd, took on a rather decorative aspect on Wednesday afternoon when members of the fire department proceeded to decorate the building with long streamers of appropriate red, white and blue bunting, thus accentuating its appearance and bringing the campaign more strikingly into the eyes of the public. A large thermometer upon which is marked the amount of money raised in the County of Hastings through the sale of victory bonds in the last war and the objective of the forthcoming drive is given a central position on the facade. An appeal for the people of the county to again go "over the top" in subscriptions to the war loan is included in the wording on the thermometer.

LOCAL BUYER SHIPS 500 CRATES OF EGGS

With the shipment of a carload of eggs from the Belleville district intended for overseas consumption, poultry raisers in the Bay of Quinte area will be helping relieve the food situation in beleaguered Britain. On Wednesday, Mr. Roy Bartlett, local egg buyer, loaded a car of 500 crates of eggs from Graham's Cold Storage, these eggs being part of an order received by Canada from the British Ministry of Food.

All eggs included in the shipment were Grade "A," coming up to the British specification of 15 pounds per 10-dozen eggs and were packed in new cases with special fillers. Every egg for overseas must bear an official "Canada" stamp, thus designating the dominion from which it was shipped. A further order for an additional 5,400,000 dozen eggs has been received by Canada from Britain. These eggs will go into cold storage for autumn shipment.

DR. W. C. MORGAN JOINS ARMY STAFF

Major Dr. W. C. Morgan of this city, was appointed to the medical staff of the Officers' Training School at Brockville, this week, and immediately took up his duties at that training centre. HUNDREDS OF DUCKS SEEN FLYING NORTH

The ducks are on the wing.

Last evening several large flocks of wild ducks were seen flying northward the sky being literally blackened by the hundreds of ducks heading towards Northern Canada and the mating season

The ducks were flying in their usual conventional formation and attracted the attention of many local hunters, who eyed quite enviously Mallards Blacks or Canvts Backs, as the case may have been, flying at such a low height and in such large numbers.

SUMMER COTTAGES AT WELLINGTON, PICTON, RENT AT HIGH PRICES

Summer cottages in the holiday resorts of Prince Edward County are said to be at a premium, according to a resident of Wellington.

Cottages in that village, he said, were scarcer than the teeth of the proverbial hen, and some owners are taking advantage of the heavy demand to increase their ordinary rates. In some instances prices ranging between $75 and $100 have been asked.

A number of the summer residences in the county are being occupied by members of the Royal Air Force at Picton, many of whom are experiencing Canadian camp and cottage life for the first time.

A number of structures are in the process of construction and all over the county where land meets water, new summer homes are beginning to make their appearance.

Passenger Hurt In Car Collision

Joseph McQuaid, Geddes St., Belleville, sustained a fractured collar bone and serious hip injury as the result of a two-car motor accident at Chatterton, on Highway No. 14, shortly before midnight Wednesday night. McQuaid was removed to the Belleville General Hospital, where the fracture was reduced by Dr. G. S. Cronk.

McQuaid was a passenger in an automobile being driven northerly by Donald Lewis, 24 Dunbar St., when their motor car was in a sideswipe collision with a southbound automobile driven by Harvey Corneau, of the R.C.A.F., at Trenton. Both vehicles were rounding a sharp curve at Chatterton when the collision occurred. Extensive damages resulted to both vehicles as they careened into the ditch following the impact. Provincial Constables R. S. Patterson and J. McKenzie investigated and today reported that charges are pending.

JURY RETURNS OPEN VERDICT IN SHARPE'S DEATH

Traffic Officer Testifies Brakes on Sharpe Car in Poor Condition

JAMS INTO WHEEL

Investigating the death of Harvat E. Sharpe of Deseronto, who died in the Belleville General Hospital as the result of a motor accident which occurred on Highway No. 2 a short distance west of the city on the night of April 20th., a coroner's jury, at an adjourned inquest held at the court house last evening, retured an open verdict.

Deliberating only a few moments after the evidence of two witnesses H.T.O. Jack Hatch and Dr. J. B. McKay, pathologist at the Belleville General Hospital, the jury returned the verdict of: "We find that Harvat E. Sharpe came to his death in the Belleville General Hospital as the result of personal injuries received on the night of April 20th on Highway No. 2 when the car he was driving struck the rear of a car owned by Murray Henderson, which had been stopped to effect temporary repairs".

Traffic Officer Hatch testified that he had been called to the scene of the accident and had found the Sharpe automobile stopped a distance of approximately ten feet behind a car owned by Murray Henderson with evidence that a rear-end collision had taken place between the two vehicles Brakes on the Sharpe automobile were found to be in a poor condition and there had apparently been no effort to avoid a collision as the car had crashed directly into the rear of the Henderson vehicle. He had been informed that Mr. Sharpe had suffered slight injuries in the crash and that he had been taken to the hospital, the injuries having been received apparently when he was jammed against the steering wheel. Mr. Sharpe died shortly after being admitted to the hospital.

Autopsy Report Given

Dr. McKay stated that he had performed the autopsy on Mr. Sharpe and had found only one slight abrasion above the knee. This was the only mark of violence on the body but six pints of blood had been found in the abdomen. Tissue in the man's abdomen had been broken and Mr. Sharpe had died as the result of hemorrhage. There was no indication of alcohol in the stomach, he said.

To a query by one of the jurymen, Dr. McKay stated that it was quite possible to sustain injuries such as had caused Mr. Sharpe's death without there being any visible outside evidence of the blow.

The inquest was held under Coroner, Dr. J. J. Robertson, with acting Crown Attorney, Gordon S. Robertson conducting the investigation.

Quinteside Kennels Win High Honors At Quebec Show

Quinteside Kennels, Charlotte Street, carried off first prize in the open male class and first and second prize in the female class at the dog show sponsored by the Province of Quebec Kennel Club which was held in Montreal last Saturday, May 17th, it has been announced by Mr. Roger Parks, proprietor of the local kennels.

Demonstrating the class for which the local kennels are noted, Mr. Rogers' imported "Blencathra Brandysnap," won handily in the male class, while Quinteside "Black Tulip" won first in the female class with another Belleville dog, "Quinteside Glenora Lass," taking second in the same class. A Quinteside-bred puppy also won first in the Canadian-bred class.

All recent dog shows held by the Province of Quebec Kennels Club during recent months have benefited various charity funds with the proceeds of Saturday's show, after expenses were deducted, being forwarded to the Overseas Parcel League. Prize monies are kept as low as possible at these shows in order that more money may be forwarded to charity.

POLICE BLOTTER

Belleville police have been instructed to check all bicycles being operated in Belleville and upon which are not displayed the necessary 1941 City of Belleville bicycle licence plate. "The response for the purchase of bicycle licences is far below the corresponding period of 1940, according to City Hall officials, and unless cyclists procure their plate immediately, action will be taken against all delinquents," police authorities warned today.

James Mills, 16 Chatham St., reported to police the theft of a flashlight, stolen from off his parked bicycle on Front St. last evening. Young Mills had the flashlight secured to the front of his bicycle in order to provide light and comply with the law, while cycling after sundown.

Not a single arrest has been necessary in Belleville for the past 48 hours, while the summer-like weather has tended to reduce the number of transients seeking shelter at the city hostel, only two being accommodated last night.

The promotion of War Savings Certificates was somewhat delayed at the Trenton port because of pressure of routine work.

PLANS COMPLETED FOR TAG DAY

Kiwanis Club Sponsoring Project to Aid British War Victims

Plans for the holding of a Kiwanis Club Tag Day for the British War Victims' Fund, sponsored by the Toronto Evening Telegram are nearly completed and a final meeting of the committees will be held on Friday night. The committee in charge of Jack McVeigh has received from Mr. C. O. Knowles, Editor of The Telegram, a letter expressing the delight of that paper in the Kiwanis Club taking hold of such a worthy project. Mr. Knowles stated in his letter that the fund was started through a patriotic desire to assist our hard-pressed kinsmen in the Old Land, who are literally in the front line of action. Nearly $710,000 has been raised by purely voluntary donations and the fund is rapidly increasing every day. No overhead expenses are deducted from these contributions and the Kiwanis Club will not deduct any of the expenses incurred in the Tag Day on Saturday.

The ladies of the Kiwanis Club have kindly consented to assist in this worthy project and will act as taggers accompanied by members of the Kiwanis Club. These members are taking time out from a busy Saturday to also assist in this worthy cause, believing it a small gesture to those who have suffered so much in bombed torn Britain. The address given at the club on Tuesday and fully reported in Wednesday's issue of The Ontario Intelligencer gives one but a slight idea of the havoc wrought in this glorious Little Island but they are not complaining, only having a deeper resolve to see the "thing through" and it is up to those on this side to assist in every way. The taggers and the members will be out bright and early on Saturday and if stopped, drop in the nickels, dimes and quarters and the Kiwanis Club will see that it reaches the proper source.

CRETE

The Island of Crete which has been in the public eye since the evacuation of Greece lies 81 miles from the south extremity of that country, and is 160 miles long and from seven to 35 miles broad. A chain of mountains runs the whole length in two ranges, declining on the north side moderately to a fertile coast provided with good harbors and on the south side steeply to a rocky shore. The air is mild, the summer cool by the north winds and in winters there are only showers of rain. Numerous springs give fertility to the valleys. The island's principal products are olive oil, wheat, oranges, lemons, silk, grapes, wine, valonia, carobs and honey.

Crete naturally was famous in antiquity. Greek mythology made it the scene of many of the adventures of the gods and heroes. It is said Zeus, the chief of the gods, was born there, and that King Minos ruled there in 1300 B.C. Strangely enough the island appears little in Greek history and it took no part in the Persian wars. Homer, the Greek epic poet, says that King Idomeneus sailed from this island to the famous city of Troy with 80 ships.

Crete was conquered by the ancient Romans in 67 B.C. In 823 it passed from the Roman emperors of the East to the Saracens, who built the capital Candia, the Greek Heraclea but were expelled by the Greeks in 961. The Byzantine sovereign sold the island in 1204 to the Venetians who fortified it and won the goodwill of the inhabitants by a mild government and repelled all the attacks of the Genoese and Turks into the middle of the 17th century. In that century the Turks besieged the capital and took it after 20 years, the longest siege in modern history in 1669. In the ninteenth century after an insurrection, the Turks granted the Cretans a degree of autonomy. In 1898 the leading powers demanded the complete withdrawal of Turkish troops who had aided and abetted the rebels and the sultan complied. In that year Prince George of Greece was appointed high commissioner or governor of the island. In 1905 the Cretans revolted demanding union with Greece. In 1913 Greece claimed the island and was granted it. The population is about 386,000 people.

SAY ICELAND TO DISSOLVE TIES

The Parliament of Iceland last Friday resolved to dissolve the union with Denmark existing since 1918, says a delayed dispatch from Reykjavik. The only bond of union has been that the King of Denmark was also King of Iceland, for in 1918 it became a sovereign state, though it had been a part of Denmark since 1380. A temporary chief of state has been named to take the place of King Christian, who stays in Nazi-held Denmark.

The war had brought this northern island much to the fore in the struggle in the spring of last year when the Nazis began their drive into the small nations of northwest Europe. British troops have garrisoned the island since that time to prevent domination of the North Atlantic trade routes. Canadian troops served there. Germany included Iceland in the sphere of her war activities in the Atlantic and warned navigators in March of this year against approaching the island.

The treaty with Denmark was to run for 25 years. Now it is said it will not be renewed upon its expiration, Iceland deciding to become a republic.

The Iceland Parliament is said to have reached agreement on a number of points:—

Inasmuch as the King of Denmark is unable to execute his functions as head of the Iceland government under the treaty of 1918, Iceland must be entitled to declare herself independent.

Iceland does not desire to prolong the treaty. The necessary procedure for cancellation can not take place before the war is over, but parliament now wishes to take the aforementioned step.

A regent is to be chosen.

A republican constitution will be introduced as soon as the connection with Denmark is discontinued.

The Iceland government decided to take over the King's functions following the severing of communications April 9, 1940, when the Nazis entered Denmark.

TAKE A WALK AROUND YOURSELF

When you're criticising others and finding here and there,
A fault or two to speak of or a weakness
you can tear;
When you're blaming some one's meanness
or accusing some one's pelf,
It is time you went out to take a walk around yourself.

We need so often in this life this balancing of scales—
This seeing how much in us wins, and how much in us fails
But before you judge another, just to lay him on the shelf
It would be a splendid plan to take a walk around yourself.

WHAT SAY GALS?

WOMEN are like newspapers because:
They have forms,
They are bold face type,
They always have the last word,
Back numbers are not in demand,
They have a good deal of influence,
They are well worth looking over,
You can't believe anything they say,
They carry the news wherever they go,
If they know anything they usually tell it.
They are never afraid to speak their own minds.
They are much thinner than they used to be,
Every man should have one of his own, and not borrow his neighbor's.

A WORD TO THE PARENTS

Front Street shop windows are showing displays of firecrackers of all sizes and descriptions. On Saturday, May 24th., and the ensuing weekend, children of the city will delight in the pyrotechnics that are becoming a tradition with this holiday. But in the joyfulness and excitement of the occasion children should not be allowed to let their exuberance be greater than their carefulness. Grownups with common sense will not do it. Accidents can and will happen. The other day a young lady received slight injuries to her eyes when a firecracker exploded in her face. Fortunately her eyesight was unimpaired. But it could easily have been worse. A few minutes brilliancy is not worth a lifetime of darkness. National blackouts are imperative in these times of war. Personal blackouts which will last a lifetime for our children can be prevented by a few minutes care and thought.

Do not, by any means, deprive the children of their fun. But exercise the greatest caution when firecrackers and rockets are being set off. Do not let the kiddies get too close. A moment of forgetfulness may mean a lifetime of sorrow and handicap.

The letter "K" stands for Kiwanis—and also for kiddies. On Saturday, members of this fine service club are taking a day off from their business, and devoting it to the raising of funds for the kiddies of Britain—the little heroes whose rattles are the staccatos of machine-guns, and whose drums are the reverberations of bursting bombs and anti-aircraft fire. Their playgrounds are the rubble and debris of their homes. Their beds air-raid shelters, underground railway stations, or the ruins of their own rooms.

Saturday is Kiwanis Tag Day. The entire proceeds will go to the British War Victims Fund sponsored by the Toronto Evening Telegram. Knowing the residents of this city as we do, we venture a guess that $1,000 will go into the club coffers Saturday. Remember the courage of the British people, then rattle those coins in your pocket. They smile and bear it with thumbs up. We should smile and help them—with hands down—in our pockets. Anything from $50 to a big nickle is welcome. Remember the three K's. "Kick in with Kiwanis for the Kiddies."

Clothing the Victims Of German Raids

Three presences establish the character of the centres opened in bombed areas for the distribution of clothing to meet the immediate needs of homeless people. There are the honorary customers, a great many of them with several small children and are ready to tell of their experiences as of their requirements: there are the voluntary helpers, whose strenuous but comparatively leisurely work of unpacking, sorting, counting and booking garments has been done before the rushed days of relating these to wearers; and three are, in spirit, the donors and providers of the array of old and new stock that is of great (and sometimes possibly peculiar) interest to those who handle it, and that therefore seems to contribute the dominant personal influence.

When the centre is in action these elements are confused — or, it may be, fused; people and clothing are almost inextricably mixed and the air is full of talk of bombs, ages, shapes, sizes, colors, and American Red Cross labels. "Isn't it lovely?" a mother will say of a hand-knitted pullover for one of her children. "Isn't it good of them?" a neighbor is exclaiming.

The demand for clothing (which is in fact less a demand than a grateful acceptance of goods urgently wanted by bewildered and uncomfortable people who are surprised to find things waiting for them) is a multiple one. Apart from a trickle of earlier raid victims belatedly aware of the centre, the dispossessed families arrive during the first days after a raid in a stream with authoritative notes from various local officials.

They wait in silence, even the small children, until someone is free to attend to them. And then, as interest is shown in their individual wants and measurements, they gain confidence and apparently cease to feel themselves outsiders in several senses. They have, most of them murmur, nothing but what they stood up in at the times of the raid.

And what they stood up in then they have in the main lived and slept in since. Above everything else they want a change of clothing; secondly, perhaps, things of their own, for many come in borrowed coats and dresses. In any case their bundle is appreciated as the beginning of a new lot of possessions.

One girl, with her face wrapped up because the shock (she said) of a direct hit on the building in which she was sheltering had given her toothache, could not go to work because she had no suitable clothes. She was brought by a married sister who said, "We none of us know what we are going to want, do we? I sent a parcel of things here only a few weeks ago," and kept saying, "Now, Peggy, no picking and choosing. You're lucky to get set up like this."

Peggy had naturally mentioned her preference for a blue jumper, and for one with a collar if possible. However busy the helpers are, their customers are always encouraged to have what they like of the things available. Small preferences, vanities, and weaknesses can be sympathetically regarded as signs that a raid victim is feeling fairly normal again. The relationship of a person to her clothing is surely one factor that determines personal stability.

A shawled old woman who would only whisper her need for "everything" did not pluck up courage until her bundle was complete to ask, puzzling her server for a moment only, "I suppose you haven't got a shemmy, love? I don't feel dressed, like, without. Don't they make them now?" She accepted as the next best thing a white shirt, partly worn. A stock of old-fashioned under-garments would meet the needs not uncommon among old people.

On the other hand, a most attractive shirt, white dotted with small, clear blue flowers, that was the only one of the size a woman wanted for her husband, was rejected. "He'd never wear it," she said with an aplogetic laugh. The United States will have put some innovations across the Atlantic before the war is over, but the plain man here will not yet have flowers instead of checks and stripes on his shirt.

Shoes raise several problems. It is difficult enough to step into other people's, but many steppers are spurred with prejudices that one feels will have to be overcome. "I couldn't wear those," exclaims a young woman for whom a new pair of strong brown shoes, coveted by their holder, has been discovered. "It is the heels," she explains; she could never walk in low ones. She has been bombed out twice and has an injured foot, but she means to put her better foot forward on a high heel.

One woman after another rejects good "sensible" shoes and chooses a shabby, even a split or otherwise badly worn pair with high heels. For the time being, one reflects, it may be best to let them regain their familiar balance. When the day's clients have been satisfied and the list of contents of given bundles collected the clothiers begin to put the room to rights and to assess their greatest shortages.

Fortunately they are able to replenish many stocks of old and new clothing from a regional depot that deals tirelessly with generous gifts of clothing from people in this country and organizations in the United States and of money which is spent on garments least likely to be provided second hand in due quantity and condition. Stocks are also increased by gifts from the neighborhood.

Stacks of coats will have to be picked up and redisposed, odd shoes and socks will cause despairing sighs. So much time and energy would be saved if donors would fasten the two parts of any pair—whether of shoes or pyjamas—so that they would stay together after one of the two has been tried on repeatedly.

Many old socks and stockings, too, cause a waste of time because, when unrolled and inspected, they prove to have been already on their last legs. The people who need these things have no work-baskets and darning needles, and it is garments and accessories with plenty of the right sort of wear in them that they need.

Givers who can put themselves in the place of receivers—and they may very well be there at some time—will give only what will delight a wearer who stands up in all she had and asks of her new outfit, "Can I put some of the things on here?"

There has been such excellent provision of warm and attractive clothing for children that in some districts one may justifiably assume that the well-dressed children in the streets are the ones who have been bombed out of their Homes—which compensatory state is as it should be.—Manchester Guardian.

Normandie Pride Of French Service

The luxurious Normandie was the largest and fastest liner afloat when she arrived in New York harbor after her maiden voyage on June 3, 1935. She came in after a record breaking trip from France in 4 days, 11 hours and 35 minutes at an average speed of 29.68 knots.

And proudly from her main truck she flew the blue pennant of speed spuremacy after her record became official. It was to be lost and regained several times in transatlantic contests with the Cunard liner Queen Mary.

But for luxury there was nothing quite like her. Within her overall length of 1,029 feet and 83,423 tons of elegance, the Normandie had—and still has despite her idleness and a certain amount of stripping—many unique features.

Has Broad Promenades

She has promenades as broad as some city streets; a hospital, library, drug store, theatre, a church and a variety of shops such as one once saw in Paris. She has a power plant capable of producing sufficient electricity for a good size city and has one of the largest swimming pools afloat.

In her spacious grand foyer, three decks high, are walls of Algerian onyx and massive bronze doors. There are fourteen passenger and freight elevators.

The liner has a passenger capacity of 2,170, of which 930 are first class, 680 tourist and 560 third class. She has her own fire department, whose members were trained by the Fire Department of Paris.

The Normandie was built in the Penhoet Yards at St. Nazaire and was launched with much fanfare and considerable French dignity.

When she was put into service at Havre on May 23, 1935, some 2,000 persons were brought down from Paris in special trains to participate. In her theatre, Gaby Morlay and Victor Boucher, two of the best-known stage personalities of Paris, played for the first time a comedy by Francis de Croisset. On another part of the ship there was a variety show in progress. Later the President of the republic, with 2,000 guests, sat in the great dining room, which is more than 100 yards long. The room was decorated in the manner of the famous Galerie des Glaces in the Palace of Versailles.

Carried Many Notables

After a colorful career during which this flagship carried many notables in a ferry service between this country and the continent, and on cruises to South America and the West Indies, the Normandie settled down at her Forty-eighth Street pier in New York to idle away her days after war was declared.

The once magnificent ship suddenly appeared to passersby one day with a sombre coat of gray paint on her sides. Daily there were rumors, always promptly denied that because there was smoke wisps to be seen from her huge stacks, she was about ready to sail. In truth, she was always kept ready for a departure within forty-eight hour. On board is a skeleton crew of a little more than 100 men and others always are available.

It has been estimated that the Normandie's daily upkeep runs to almost $1,000 while she is in dock. This includes berth fees, fuel costs, rations for the crew, wartime crew salaries, policing by private detectives and the cost of maintaining a fire department on board. More than 9,000 barrels of fuel oil are used each month to keep the turbines turning and the 160,000 horsepower motors in trim. The ship has been tied up at Pier 88 since Aug. 28, 1939.—N.Y. Times.

THE BEST OF LIFE

Out of the hours and days and weeks,
Out of the flying years,
Out of the far goals which he seeks,
His hurts, his doubts and fears,
Man takes, if but his work be true,
Shelter and food and friends a few.

Man knows his sorrows by their sting.
Of loss he's soon advised,
But happiness — a different thing—
Goes oft unrecognized.
Or thinking greater joys await,
He scorns the lesser, till too late.

Oh, whether rich or poor he be,
Or much or little gains,
All-centred in his family
His peace of mind remains,
And nothing's right when falls
the gloam
At evening, save all's right at home!

And looking back across the years,
Man soon or late will find,
Delight lies not in high careers,
But deep in heart and mind.
All happiness begins and ends
With loved ones, shelter, fire and friends.

MEET MONSIEUR MARTINET

An army officer who enforces discipline rigidly is called a martinet.

The term martinet is generally used in a disparaging rather than a complimentary sense.

It is applied especially to an army officer who is punctilious and who makes a point of seeing that every detail of the army regulations are strictly followed.

The word comes from the name of Jean Martinet, a French army officer in the time of Louis XIV.

Between 1660 and 1670, while lieutenant-colonel of the king's regiment of foot and inspector general of infantry, Martinet remodelled the French foot soldiers and drilled and trained them along new lines.

Up to that time the French army had been composed largely of soldiers of fortune, who provided their own arms, clothes and other equipment and who generally refused to submit to discipline.

Col. Martinet substituted regular recruits in the infantry and provided them with pay, uniforms and other equipment at government expense and trained them into an efficient fighting arm of the regular service.

Martinet appears to have devised the copper pontoons on which the army of the Grand Monarch crossed the Rhine in 1672.

In the same year Martinet was accidentally shot and killed by his own artillery while leading an infantry assault at the seige of Duisburg in Prussia on the right bank of the Rhine.

Parisian wisecrackers rewarded the gallant officer by saying that all France lost in the battle was "a little martin," the literal meaning of the name Martinet.

The young French colonel, who had become the Marquis de Martinet before his death, suffered the unjust fate of having his name handed down to posterity as the type of the over-officious and unduly strict disciplinarian.

"Prince of Peace" as the title of Jesus Christ does not occur in the New Testament. It occurs only once in the entire Bible — the Book of the Prophecy of Isaiah, Chapter 9, Verse 6. That verse reads as follows

"For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder, and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counseller, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace."

Good Moos by Elsie THE BORDEN COW

VULNERABLE!
I dealt a lady thirteen Hearts
And served her snacks of Chateau Cheese,
She dropped the cards and grabbed the snacks
And made a Little Slam on these!

I was at a big bridge-party this week, and was it fun! My last bid was 7 Spades. "I don't think you can make it," my partner gnashed at me. "Certainly I can make it!" I countered sweetly. "I can make any party a success by serving sandwiches made with Borden's Chateau Cheese." Chateau is blended from costly well-aged Canadian Cheddar, rich in milk minerals and proteins . . . it makes moo-velous sandwiches and cooked dishes!

Moo-lodiously yours, Elsie

Weddings

FINKLE—LANGABEER

A pretty wedding took place at two o'clock on Saturday afternoon at the residence of the officiating minister Rev. W. D. Harrison, when Ferne Eileen, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Langabeer, Belleville, became the bride of Mr. Ralph Finkle of the R.C.A.F.

The bride was charming in Airforce blue with hat to match and wore a corsage of American Beauty roses. Her bridesmaid was Miss Kay Finkle, sister of the groom, who was gowned in teal blue with black accessories and corsage of roses.

Mr. Robt. Whittle of Toronto, was best man.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride to twenty-five relatives of the bride and groom.

The three-storied wedding cake centred the table, with pink and white streamers caught up with white bells.

Amid showers of confetti and good wishes the young couple left by motor to Ottawa, the bride travelling in a costume of rose with hat to match and black accessories.

The young couple will reside in Rossmore.

The 'Iron Duke' Will Visit City May 26th

The "Iron Duke", the first major war relic from the Battle of Britain to visit Canada will come to Belleville and Trenton on May 26 during the course of its 2,000 mile tour of Ontario and Quebec it was learned today by local representatives of The Queen's Canadian Fund for Air Raid Victims which is sponsoring tour. It will arrive here in a few days.

The "Duke", a bomb-scarred, flame-scorched mobile tea car—one of the most effective influences in supporting civilian morale in modern warfare—was in active service for six months before crossing the Atlantic. It travelled a total of 11,000 miles in London and East Anglia and was under Nazi fire 33 times. Its burns were received last December as it kept up a ceaseless flow of hot tea and food to exhausted firemen fighting the City of London blaze set by German incendiary bombs.

The veteran tea car will be accompanied by Mrs. Lionel Gibbs of London and Winchester who is acting as hostess during the tour. A young English matron who was engaged in relief work until she came to the United States recently to visit her two children, Mrs. Gibbs is the daughter of Sir Harold Snagge, chairman of the works which manufatures the motors of the new R.A.F. Typhoon fighter plane. She has experienced some of the worst raids of the entire war.

Has Been on U.S. Tour

The veteran tea car has been on tour of the United States for the British War Relief Society, through whose cooperation The Queen's Canadian Fund are enabled to show it in Canada. It will give contributors to the Fund an opportunity to see at first hand one of the important uses to which their donations are being put

Like hundreds of other mobile tea cars in constant service throughout Britain, the "Duke" is equipped with a compact cooking unit which provides tea and hot food to bombed-out civilians, fire-fighters and soldiers.

The "Duke" last saw service in the ravaged areas along the eastern coastal sections of Britain, one of the focal points of the long-awaited invasion attempt by the Nazis.

Throughout that sector, it was on 24-hour call, reporting to bombed areas no matter how remote, detouring over marshlands and frequently arriving on the scene while raids were still in progress.

Except for the usual camouflage and steel helmets provided for the occupants, this car afforded no protection; but it was dubbed the "Iron Duke" by English Tommies because of its charmed existence.

Strafed Many Times

Subjected to repeated bursts of shrapnel, strafing raids by low-flying Messerschmitts and attacks by the Stuka dive-bombers, the "Duke" was shaken but never knocked out.

During the last week of its active service in December, according to a report made by its driver, Jim Cash. "It became a daily habit of ours to dive underneath the Duke for shelter until the machine-gunning from the Messerschmitts ceased. We had to do it three and four times a day, and I don't think I'm exaggerating when I say that many times we were literally inches from death".

At one time, Cash reported, the "Duke" was crossing the marshes when an outsize bomb crashed into the railway barely 50 yards in front of him.

"It was odd, what happened then", Cash said. The Duke's luck held. Instead of knocking us to kingdom come, the force of the explosion acted as a brake. I never stopped so fast in my life. We must have come to a dead halt within the length of the old bus. "The windscreen was damaged, and the shattered roadway seemed to settle all around and on top of us. When I got out and looked around, I found we were inches from the crater.

"In a statement commenting on the value of the mobile tea cars, an officer of The Queen's Canadian Fund stated that the Lord Mayor's Fund, through which The Queen's Canadian Fund operates in Great Britain, has bought over a hundred such cars. In future, some would bear the name of The Queen's Canadian Fund.

Fill Great Need

"These cars are one of the unprecedented requirements of this war. The bombing of civilians has presented a difficult problem from the standpoint of emergency communal feeding. From reports of civil authorities on the value of the tea cars' service it is evident that they are as important in their sphere as tanks and airplanes in that of the fighting services.

"Arriving on the spot when distress is at its height, these tea kitchens give a lift to inhabitants of the immediate area. The tea and hot food goes a long way to bringing these people back to normal and sustaining morale. The estimated cost of upkeep of one car is $1,000 a year".

The Stars Say

For Friday, May 23

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

QUICKENED energies, high hopes and greatly stimulated optimism in the direction of new and expansive propositions may be read from this day's lunar as well as mutual operations. It should be a time for making a direct and powerful attack on such major projects or objectives although there is urgent demand for more than ordinary vigilance against fraud, trickery, pernicious entanglements and subtle and crafty attacks on profits, personality and integrity. Snares and double-dealing abound where least suspected, possibly through perfidy of public agents, or when traveling, through communications or correspondence. With precaution there should be unlooked-for success and fine cooperation from those in power.

If It's Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is should be on the eve of a year of excellent progress with some surprising denouement to advance the position, increase finance and credit as well as bring unexpected benefits of large and important scope. New plans and projects should flourish, although there is a strong menace of treachery, fraud, sinister intrigue and misrepresentation from sources least suspected. Beware expressly of public agents, servants, communication or transportation officials. Precaution, keen judgment and hard work should pay heavy dividends.

A child born on this day should have a steady and shrewd mind, with much stability of character, yet may be intrigued into dubious entanglements through fraud.

(the exact method used by Mrs. J.S. O'Brien, Beverly Hills, Chicago)

SEE FOR YOURSELF HOW MARVELOUS OXYDOL IS FOR REMOVING GREASE

TODAY'S rich, soapy OXYDOL contains an extra special ingredient that most soaps don't have.

When you try it tomorrow, look for these things: More Suds—up to 3 times the suds of many soaps by volume measure! Lasting Suds—so rich you won't have to add soap.

What Oxydol's extra ingredient does to grease in the dishwater is a perfect wonder to see. You don't work with flat suds and greasy dishwater. You fairly zip through the dishes. Note the quick, easy way it washes and scours greasy cooking things.

Note the time you can save in drying. Glasses, china sparkle almost at a touch—no over-and-over polishing!

With its extra ingredient, Oxydol is mild as ever. Try it. You'll be through so fast you'll say it's swell for hands.

Wonderfully free from sneezy dust, too—but with no loss in washing performance. No granulated soap is more "sneeze-proof" than today's Oxydol. More important, we guarantee there's been no coarsening of product, no loss of sudsing speed, of washing efficiency or mildness.

Done In Brown

By ALICE ALDEN

BROWN is forging ahead in the color card competition and appears for both day and evening wear in some of the most important collections. Evening dresses of brown marquisette, tulle and lace are starred and for daytime wear there are browns in sports, casual or dresswear. A delightful shade of brown is used for this grand aroundtown dress, the sort of thing that fits into any daytime picture. It is of Celanese and is a mossy sheer woven with a minute shadowy check. Beautiful draping is a detail of this frock that features the dolman sleeve and a new twist in the front treatment at the neck and midriff.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Best Solid Foods in Which to Start Out The Baby Told

Second of a series on the normal progress of the child in the first year.

By the time the child reaches his first birthday, he should have passed the breast-fed and bottle stage, and should be learning to hold his cup of milk and perhaps hold a teaspoon, as he sits up to eat.

This is the time to prevent him from becoming a food faddist. Too many adults are finicky about their fare. The new generation ought to be better trained, and the time to begin is in the high chair.

It can be assumed that the child will eat with pleasure any food he ought to eat, if only he is introduced to it properly. Use salesmanship! For example, as each new food is introduced, the mother can take a bit herself, smack her lips and express delight. The child will emulate her and smack its lips with equal satisfaction. Similarly, he will acquire food dislikes by imitation of elders.

In his twelfth month he may have added to his diet such things as scraped beef, cream cheese, bacon, scrambled egg. Besides these he may be getting such things as banana, apple sauce mashed potatoes, strained vegetables, cooked oatmeal, chopped liver, bread or perhaps hard crackers, apple, orange juice, tomato juice, honey, milk and of course cod liver oil.

The best way to prepare his first beef is to take a small piece of the meat, scrape it with a spoon or a knife, pat these scrapings into a little cake, and brown them in a dry hot pan. Then add a little water to the pan, and cook the patty for about five minutes longer. A tablespoonful of this at his dinner is enough in the beginning.

The scrambled egg, if properly prepared, will become one of his favorite foods. Here's the way I like my scrambled eggs, and it is the best way to prepare them for the baby:

Beat up the egg with two tablespoonfuls of milk, a pinch of salt, and a little butter, perhaps in a wooden bowl with a wooden spoon. The wooden bowl and spoon treat the egg particles gently and keep them soft and creamy. Cook the egg, not in a frying pan, but in a double boiler. As the eggs cook slowly, stir them occasionally. Eggs prepared in this way will be smooth, creamy and easily digested.

Bacon, too will become a favorite food with the child, if it is well prepared for him from the first. Bacon should be fried to a crisp, and he ought to be given only one piece to begin with. If this rests well with him, doesn't bother his digestion and he likes it, then he may get two small rashers.

Some doctors recommend that a little of the fat from the bacon be poured on a piece of soft bread and fed to the baby. This fat is very nourishing and some children thrive on it. If the weather is cold, the baby might eat some bacon and some bread with gravy on it at breakfast, right after he has his cereal. In the summertime this would be a bit too heavy, so it is better given at the mid-day dinner.

How to Answer a Formal Wedding Invitation

A formal invitation to the church only—the invitation that "requests the honour of your presence"—does not require a reply. If, however, you receive a formal invitation to the reception or wedding breakfast, or to a house wedding or a wedding in a hotel or club, you must write a formal answer.

The rule about answering invitations, of any kind, is that they should be answered in kind: a formal reply to a formal invitation; an informal reply to an informal invitation.

A formal invitation is worded in the third person, and your reply must be written in the third person also. Your reply, although written by hand, should as nearly as possible follow the spacing of the words on the invitation. Write your reply on the first page of double-sheeted letter-paper of good quality. The writing should be in the centre of the page, with even margins on all sides.

Your answer should be sent promptly, and should be addressed to the person or persons in whose name the invitation is issued, usually the bride's parents.

This is a typical formal acceptance:

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Robinson accept with pleasure
Mr. and Mrs. John Lee Clark's kind invitation for
Tuesday, the tenth of June

If you are declining the invitation, this is the correct form for your reply:

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Robinson regret that they are unable to accept
Mr. and Mrs. John Lee Clark's
kind invitation for
Tuesday, the tenth of June

Alumni Dance

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. A junior class alumni association is sponsoring a dance. It has been planned to have a parade of classes in the nature of a grand march. How is such a parade organized with respect to order of classes and leaders? The association has officers, and there will be hosts and hostesses from representative classes. How should the leaders be chosen?

2. Also, do the hosts and hostesses have any specific duty or duties, line, or do they simply mingle with the guests? Y.

1. The march should be held by the oldest class in the association, and should progress in the order of seniority of class, the youngest class being the last in the march. Leading each class should be the officers of that class, in the order of their importance. After the officers, the hostesses and hosts chosen from that class, and then the members of the class.

2. If there is to be a receiving-line, the hostesses and hosts should be members of that line. If not they would mingle with the guests, making introductions.

Home Treatment of Tuberculosis

A young woman with a persistent cough went to the tuberculosis clinic of a large hospital for examination. The examination showed that she had active tuberculosis and she was advised to enter a sanatorium at once. The examination had included Xrays.

In her distress she consulted her physician whom she had not visited for a couple of years.

The physician, knowing her since childhood, told her that the sanatorium treatment was best in that she would be where she could get the best attention should an emergency arise, but advised her to go home and to bed and he would call the next day. His advice was based on his knowledge that the patient would be greatly worried if she entered the sanatorium and would be unable to sleep and eat, the two essentials in the cure of tuberculosis. Arriving the next day he outlined plans for home treatment and for the next month he visited her two or three times a week, gradually getting her accustomed to the idea of entering the sanatorium where her recovery would be more rapid. In due course, the patient willingly entered the sanatorium.

Dr. Maurice Kovnat, Staten Island N.Y., in Medical World, states that there is usually no need for a hasty removal of a case to a sanatorium. "The day when a patient was picked up and transported to a sanatorium immediately it was discovered that he had tuberculosis is past". Of course there are cases where surgical or other treatment is only possible in a sanatorium.

By beginning the treatment in the patient's own home, the patient does not have to undergo the shock of being separated from his family before he had adjusted himself to the fact that he is in for a prolonged illness.

However, Dr. Kovnat points out that before one can treat the patient at home, certain conditions are necessary. "These include a separate room cheerfully located and permitting adequate sunshine and fresh air, and an intelligent household that will carry out the instructions of the physician".

The three basic principles of home treatment are Rest, Diet, and Fresh Air.

Rest means complete bed rest at first— no unnecessary visitors, no talking, two hours in afternoon of complete rest, with room darkened.

Diet. Efforts are made to increase weight— three regular meals and three small trays at 10 a.m., 4 p.m., and 9 p.m.

Fresh Air. Proper ventilation and room temperature at 68 to 72 F.

DO YOU aspire to be a complexion counterfeiter? Do you lay on the fluffy powder, the synthetic blush, the rosy glow on your lips, and consider your art work first class? If so, there's no need of your reading this, because we are set upon the task of bawling out the young lady who makes a mess of her face and looks like a colored funny picture. It is being done all the time, which is not to the credit of our sex.

It is the aim now to look human, to follow nature's complexion patterns. One should no longer place carmine circles on one's cheeks, but fluff on only the lightest glow up near the temples. The lipstick is calling a halt on itself, vivid reds giving way to softer, more subdued tones of the raspberry type. Penciled eyebrows are out of date and they never were much good, anyway. Darken the silky threads with mascara which does not touch the underlying skin surface.

Many a woman who put on make-up in wholesale lots has found to her satisfaction that she looks younger, and fresher when she uses restraint. Features appear more delicate, too. That brittle appearance does a disappearing act.

Keep the skin conditioned; that can be done by using creams and oils freely. Apply a cream after the nightly face washing. Use a thin oil for removing make-up before soap is used.

Don't fancy that make-up will hide imperfections; it won't. If the skin is sallow, cut down on rich foods, drink orange juice every day. If small pustules are present, get after them; it may be best to consult a medical man who specializes in diseases of the skin and scalp. If pores are coarse, have two ice rubs every day, following each one with applications of witch hazel.

If make-up does not impart an appearance of freshness, it misses the mark and is a grand fizzle.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Girl Friend Makes Other Dates

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young man of 23 and as my girl friend lives a distance from my home, and my work is such that I can't get away as much as I'd like to, I see her only on week-ends. Lately she has seemed to want to make other dates, and whenever I go there she is ready to go out with someone else. Of course, she asks my permission and, wishing to be generous, I said yes.

When I have a little extra money, I take her out, but as I have to help at home, I don't have much.

Unhappy.

When a young man goes to see a girl for the week end and she makes excuses to go out with someone else, the case doesn't look very hopeful. I'm a great believer in direct action, and you might ask this young lady if she cares enough for you to have you continue your visits to her, and if she's serious.

Husband Won't Even Let Her Go to a Dentist

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a woman of 45 and have been married 25 years. I do all my own work, including the heavy cleaning, and also take care of my garden. But right now I'm on the verge of collapse.

My husband is one of those big bullies who is liked by all his friends outside the home. He ridicules me in front of any visitor we may have, and although I was very ill with the flu, he won't give me credit for trying to keep on my feet most of the time and getting meals.

He never takes me anywhere. I enjoy shows and dancing, but all he wants to do is stay in evenings, reading the paper or going to sleep on the davenport, or he may go to the pool hall and play cards with the men. He expects me to be right at home when he returns.

He's a skilled worker, makes $30 a week but $10 of this must be saved. He's a good provider for our 15-year-old daughter and me, but he won't allow me to go to a dentist for much-needed work. He just laughs at me when I go all to pieces. All I know is work and save. We own our home and have a car. If he'd give me an occasional word of praise, it wouldn't be so hard. But all I get is criticism and sarcastic remarks. I have done some outside work but had to give it up on account of my health.

Just a Constant Reader.

Be thankful that this 'bully' as you call him, stays at home evenings on the davenport and you don't have to worry about a possible other woman. And may I tell you that you are very foolish to leave your bed before you have completely recovered from the flu, to attend to your housework". There are some husbands who have to pay and pay through the nose, before they appreciate the gratis services of a good wife around the house. I beg you, don't belong to the "doormat" class.

Why not go to the movies occasionally with some woman friend or your daughter. There's no sweetening of a sour domestic atmosphere like getting away from it occasionally. Go to the public clinic and consult the dentist in charge. Don't be foolish and go to pieces when your husband laughs at you.

Don't live on that withheld word of praise. Try to be a little independent. All men respect a woman able to stand on her own feet.

A Sweater worn day after day without a wash keeps Beaux away

Here's how to keep woolens dainty . . . new-looking
Want lots of dates? Then never risk daintiness by wearing a sweater day after day without washing it. Wool carries perspiration odor . . . it's never safe to take a chance!
Dip sweaters in Lux often — to keep them fresh, to protect your own daintiness! A dip in Lux and horrid odor vanishes. And Lux keeps wool soft and fluffy, colors bright. Sweaters dipped regularly in Lux keep in shape, stay new-looking far longer.
SEE HOW QUICK LUX DOES THE TRICK
1. Whip up rich suds with fast-dissolving Lux and lukewarm water.
2. Squeeze garment gently through suds. Do not stretch or twist.
3. Pin into shape and dry flat, away from heat.
Doesn't your sweater NEED a DIP in Lux TONIGHT?

Britain Negotiating To Purchase 100 Ships

Washington, May 22 (AP)—Great Britain, it was learned authoritatively today, is negotiating with Latin American nations for the purchase of some of the 100-odd refugee foreign merchantmen now idle in hemisphere ports.

The negotiations, it was learned, parallel existing discussions between Sir Arthur Salter, head of the British Shipping Mission, and the U. S. Maritime Commission, whereby Britain hopes to obtain some merchant tonnage when the United States formally requisitions the 84 foreign ships now under official surveillance here.

Success of British efforts, it was said, would hinge largely on the deliberations of the Inter-American Financial and Economic Committee representing all 21 American republics, which convened today to consider the ship seizure question.

The envoys o the American nations will present their government's views concerning the most feasible ways in which refugee foreign ships may be utilized for the benefit of trade and defence of the western hemisphere. A unified hemisphere policy on the subject is the objective.

300 Iraqis Captured When British Take Post

London, May 22—(CP)—British forces in Iraq have captured a post on the Mosul-Haifa oil pipeline 25 miles northeast of Rutba and taken the entire Iraq garrison, authoritative sources said today.

Imperial troops which seized the town of Fallujah, 40 miles east of Baghdad three days ago captured 300 Iraqis, including 27 officers and considerable quantities of stores and equipment, these sources said.

RECTAL SORENESS AND PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY RELIEVED

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any druggist and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results, your druggist will gladly return your money.

Noranda and Nickel posted minor recessions and in the Golds a loss of 5 cents to 5.05 for Wright-Hargreaves was the main change.

Western Oils were almost dormant. Anglo-Canadian came out at 53, unchanged.

Egg Prices Show Further Improvement

Toronto, May 22.—Further slight improvement was reported in egg prices on the Toronto produce market yesterday as good demand prevailed. Butter showed no change.

Light arrivals of fresh supplies continued to move well on the egg market, resulting in prices to shipper on Grades "A" large and "A" medium improving 1-2 cent a dozen. This increase was reflected in the retail section of trading.

Scarce offerings of second-grade butter were in demand at unchanged prices, but otherwise the market was quiet. Sellers offered No. 1 grade Ontario creamery solids at 30 1-2 cents a pound in sufficient volume to satisfy local needs. The production in this Province is still running ahead of last year, with output for the week ended May 10 reported by the Ontario Creamery Association at 1,024,042 pounds, against 952,977 pounds a year ago.

First Canadian Tank Rolls Off The Line

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

Montreal, May 22 (CP)—The first Canadian-built heavy infantry tank rolled smoothly out of Angus shops today, made a few turns in the shop yards and then was inspected by government and general staff officials.

"By gosh! There she is," exclaimed Munitions Minister Howe as workers in the Canadian Pacific Railway Company shops pulled back a white curtain and the tank emerged from big doors.

"Look at her go," Mr. Howe called to Defence Minister Ralston who came unexpectedly to Montreal to watch the rugged, khaki-painted machine come off the assembly line.

Newspaper photographers swarmed over the tank to get pictures of the Ministers shaking hands with cheering workers, examining the tank and chatting with Cpl. Colin Stirton of the 7th Royal Tank Regiment who was in charge of the trials.

Sir Clive Baillieu, head of the British Purchasing Mission in the United States, attended the demonstration with Brig. K. Stuart, Vice-Chief of the General Staff.

CAPTURE 5,000 MORE ITALIANS

British Draw Net Close About Fascist Divisions in Southern Ethiopia

Cairo, Egypt, May 22.—(AP)—The capture of 5,000 more Italian troops with 42 guns and 19 tanks in Southern Ethiopia, where north and south British forces were reported drawing the strings of a net around Fascist divisions, was announced by the British Middle East Command today.

In addition 300 more Italians were reported captured in the Gondar area of Northern Ethiopia.

British troops attacked the main defences in Southern Ethiopia West of Sciasciamanna and repulsed an Italian counterattack.

The Italians lost 100 dead and 600 prisoners in the action a communique said.

Further south, a complete rear guard was overwhelmed with the capture of a brigade headquarters and three Colonial battalions. Prisoners numbered 4,400 in this area.

Belleville, Trenton Included In Probe Of Walton's Death

Ottawa, May 22 (CP)—The cause of his death still unknown, Charles G. Walton was buried today, three days after his body, bearing marks of bruises, was recovered from the Ottawa River.

He had been missing since May 5.

Meantime investigation into his death reached to the Royal Canadian Air Force training centres at Belleville and Trenton, Ont., with visits there by city and Air Force police.

Constable Herman Boehmer of the Ottawa city police and Flt. Sgt. R. Howson of the R.C.A.F. Provost Corps, visited the stations in search of a clue to the identity of two Air Force men said to have been with Walton before he disappeared.

Six persons, four of them women, have been arrested in the Walton case and will appear in court May 28 on charges of obstructing justice by withholding information.

Report Free French Troops Have Crossed Border Into Syria

Cairo, Egypt, May 22 (AP)—Military sources here were unable today to confirm radio reports that the Free French forces of Gen. De Gaulle had crossed the Palestine border into Syria.

Nevertheless, news of the Free French agitation in Syria recently has been most encouraging to the British authorities and observers pointed out that, with German air troops engaged fully in Crete, this would be the most opportune time for outright De Gaullist action.

Renewed precautions by Vichy authorities in Syria now include establishment of a total blackout, authoritative sources said.

BRITISH INTERCEPT FRENCH TANKER

13,467-Ton Vessel Fully Loaded Sailed From U.S. for Casablanca

London, May 22 (CP). — British naval patrols have intercepted in the Atlantic the French tanker Sheherazade, bound for Casablanca, North Africa, with a cargo of oil from a United States port, it was learned officially in London today.

British authorities granted the Sheherazade a navicert "some time ago" to carry the cargo, it was stated, but "actions of the last day or so by the Vichy government, particularly in Syria, had a very sharpening effect, not only in London but in Washington."

One of World's Largest.

The 13,467-ton vessel, one of the largest oil tankers in the world, left Houston, Texas, on May 10 for an unannounced port.

She had been repaired at New Orleans where she tied up after the fall of France.

She was built in 1935 and was in the gulf trade with France before the war.

SOME CANADIANS

in the Canadian Great Lakes trade, was made known by the Transport Department.

The Portadoc was among a group of lake vessels made available to the British Shipping Ministry last year and from London it was reported several of her crew had been interned in French Guinea though the entire crew of 22 were saved.

Built in 1926

The 11,309-ton Canadolite was built in 1926 and was owned by the Imperial Oil Company of Montreal.

Some days ago she was reported "overdue."

Meantime External Affairs Department officials said they were seeking confirmation in London of reports that three of the seven men who reached Scotland following torpedoing of the former Great Lakes ships, Portadoc, were Canadians.

London reports today said that the three believed to be Canadians were First Mate C. H. H. Rowe, and two firemen, A. MacDonald and J. Arnold, whose home was thought to be Prince Edward Island.

London reported the entire crew of 22 was saved but all except the seven over military age were interned in French Guinea, and a statement by the Transport Department in Ottawa last night said that eight Canadians were among those held by the French as "prisoners."

Only external affairs comment on the situation was that a Canadian, along with some British, had been interned in unoccupied France previously, and it seemed as if seamen of military age might be interned in the future if they landed on French soil.

No Tractors On His Farm Says Gardiner

Ottawa, May 22 (CP)—Agriculture Minister Gardiner told the House of Commons today his Saskatchewan farm is typical of a good many farms in Western Canada in that it has not, never has had, and, while he owns it, never will have, a tractor as part of its equipment.

His remarks came in committee of the whole while the Budget proposal for a three-cents-a-gallon tax on gasoline was under consideration and Opposition members were urging exemption from the tax for farmers.

Victor Quelch (N.D., Acadia) said Mr. Gardiner knew the position of the farmers in the West and should oppose the tax.

If the Agriculture Minister would state his opposition in the House other Western Liberals would get some courage.

"May I say that I farm in Western Canada and I have never owned a tractor," said Mr. Gardiner.

"The Minister is not dependent on his farm for a living. He has a large salary," said Mr. Quelch.

"If I was dependent on my farm for a living, and I have been at different times, I would not have a tractor on my farm," said Mr. Gardiner.

"The Minister just means his farm is not suitable for a tractor," said Mr. Quelch.

"It is typical of a good many farms in Western Canada," said the Minister.

THE WAR TODAY

By DON GILBERT
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The British forces in the Middle East continue to hold their own, and more, on all fronts. The news today from Crete, Iraq, Syria, and North Africa contained nothing of an unfavorable nature.

Of course, the German attempt to subjugate the island of Crete is only beginning. German prestige, on which the Nazis place so much emphasis, demands an all-out effort. The enemy will seek to inundate the island with a flood of manpower.

And as the battle of Crete intensifies, the Middle East command quietly reinforces the garrisons of Cyprus, the British island off the Syrian coast 350 miles east of Crete. That likely would be the next objective of the Germans were they able to make a showing in Crete. Possession of the two islands would aid immeasurably the German march to the east.

In Syria, unconfirmed reports said Free French forces had crossed the frontier from Palestine into the Vichy-administered mandate and had been joined by a regiment of French regulars which defied the authority of Vichy's commander-in-chief, Gen. Henri Dentz.

Little Hostility Toward Britain.

An Associated Press correspondent reaching Palestine after a journey across Syria reported that despite Gen. Dentz 'efforts to whip up enthusiasm for Vichy there is little hostility toward Britain and many natives openly express delight at the difficulties of the French administration.

If Allied forces could gain control of Syria without weakening their position too much in other sectors a strong protective wall guarding Iraq would be established. From Iraq today came news of further success against Rashid Ali's Nazi-aided rebels. British troops captured a further post on the Mosul-Haifa oil pipeline 25 miles northeast of Rutba, which was captured last week.

The German forces on the Egyptian-Libyan frontier are still stalled and are getting the worst of the day to day skirmishing.

E. JOSE PURCHASES CATTLE FOR C. SCOTT

In a news item from Massassaga in the Wednesday issue of The Ontario Intelligencer it was stated that Mr. Ernest Jose of Massassaga was buying cattle for Scott Brothers of Belleville. This was an error as the Scott Brothers' partnership has been dissolved for some time. Mr. Jose is purchasing cattle for Mr. Charles E. Scott and no. for Scott Brothers.

FRENCH TROOPS

Express Delight At Discomfiture.

"In view of the situation, especially at home, what could we do?" some Frenchmen asked me.

I heard the hope widely expressed during my trip through Syria and Lebanon from Turkey that these lands would be spared conflict beyond that at the airdromes and many natives openly expressed delight at the discomfiture of the French in the current situation.

There is talk of an infiltration of Nazi "tourists" but foreigners to whom I talked said they had seen no indication that any Nazis were present, except aviators.

Most Britons and Americans are holding themselves in readiness to leave if the situation makes it imperative. A hundred of them, including students and staff members of the American University at Beirut crossed into Palestine yesterday en route to Jerusalem and Cairo.

Geo. Drohan, 15, Drowns In Harbor

Was Swimming From Victoria Park to Yacht Club Premises When He Suddenly Sank

Belleville firemen fought a losing fight with death early last night when eighty minutes artificial respiration and an inhalator failed to revive fifteen-year-old George Drohan, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Drohan, 57 George Street, who drowned in twelve feet of water in the harbor off the Belleville Yacht Club's premises.

The body was recovered by dragging operations conducted by Fire Chief William Lynch, William Fry, Police Constable Horace Wright, City Firemen Jack Grills and Maurice Callaghan, about seventy-five minutes after the boy sank to his death at 6.15 p.m. It was found about fifty feet from the club shore lying in twelve feet of water.

Fire Lieutenant Stanley Pomeroy and City Firemen Grills, Frank Post and Joseph Adams applied artificial respiration, with Chief Lynch, and Deputy Chief Gerald Vance operating the inhalator, for an hour and twenty minutes, without success. Chief Coroner Dr J. J. Robertson and Dr. G. S. Cronk then pronounced the youth dead.

The drowned youth was swimming with three companions, Glen Lewis, Harold Bentley, and Clifford Cook shortly after six o'clock when the quartette decided to swim from the park retaining wall directly opposite to the club float, a distance of approximately 200 feet. Drohan stated that he could not swim the entire distance but would attempt it by negotiating short distances between boats anchored in the harbor.

Was Clinging to a Boat

When his companions reached the club side of the harbor, Drohan was seen clinging to a large boat about fifty feet from shore. He suddenly shouted for help, but his mates thought he was fooling and paid no attention.

Orliff Smith, Bridge Street West, heard the cries and saw Drohan sink. He secured a boat, and went to the scene. He dived in the deep water about a dozen times but failed to locate the body. Exhausted, he was relieved by Eugene Rosebush, whose efforts were also futile. Morgan Jarvis, C.D.S. employee, who was cruising down the harbor, also heard the boy's cries for help, and rushed to the scene but could offer no assistance.

Young Drohan, his mother, two sisters, Donna and Patsy, and a brother, William, arrived in Belleville, four weeks ago from their home at 94 Curzon Street, Toronto. George Drohan, Senior, is a soldier in the army and is stationed at Lansdowne Park, Ottawa. The family moved here to be near relatives.

The drowned youth was employed with White's Butcher Shop and was popular with his employer and members of the staff.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, until late this Thursday evening, then at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cousins, South George Street. The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

Province to Begin Highway Repairs

Toronto, May 22 (CP).—A program of general repair of highways throughout the province damaged by frost this spring was announced today by the Ontario Department of highways. Damage in many sections is reported to be severe due to a dry spring, resulting in highways actually bursting.

One of the chief pieces of highway to be repaired is the Kingston Road between Toronto and Oshawa, particularly between Pickering and Dunbarton. This section is to be put into first class condition.

R. M. Smith, Deputy Minister of Highways, said work on the dual highway is proceeding. The dual road will be travelled and in use this fall with paving commenced next year.

All sections of the province where damage has been done will be covered in this program.

FIRE FIGHTERS

No Lives Lost

A bush fire spreading along part of the Trans-Canada highway in northwestern Ontario was burning only a short distance from the mining centre of Geraldton. It brought home to the people of the settlement memories of that day five years ago when, surrounded by forest fires, they loaded belongings on a train in preparation for evacuation.

So far no lives have been reported lost in the fires and outside of Quebec, where damage in the St. Donat district was estimated at between $150,000 and $200,000, the loss has not been high. Most of the fires burned their way through bushland and slashings.

EFFORTS TO

By noon London authorities said there was nothing more to report on the Crete situation than that the invasion of the island still was being attempted and fighting continued.

Key Points Held

British sources acknowledged the possibility that "comparatively strong detachments" of these invaders who have floated down on the island during the past two days might be holding out in some areas but declared all key points remained in control of the British-Greek defenders.

"The invasion attempt appears to be in hand," one source said.

Information 24 Hours Late

Public information lagged about 24 hours behind the fighting, but responsible Britons were quietly optimistic this afternoon.

The fate of the island and its garrison is believed to depend largely on whether the Germans knock out the Royal Air Force's fighter stations, for these are the backbone of the defence against the repeated air assaults.

Since Britain's air bases on the African mainland and the Island of Cyprus are out of fighter range of Crete all British fighters thrown into the battle have to be based on the Greek Island except for naval planes that might be flown from aircraft carriers.

The assault on Crete, seat of the Greek Government, was described in military circles as "the first round in an all-out battle for Suez," and they expressed belief the Nazis were operating on a schedule which called for capture of the island before the end of the week.

Cyprus Reinforced

(The British Broadcasting Corporation, in a broadcast heard last night in New York, reported the British garrison on the island of Cyprus—350 miles east of Crete—had been reinforced by Australian and New Zealand troops. British sources said yesterday they believed Cyprus would be the Nazis' next objective.)

Official sources made no attempt to estimate Nazi casualties thus far, but Cairo dispatches said that 1,000 Nazis were killed or captured in the first day's fighting alone.

Whole Air Division Involved

Estimates on the number of troops the Germans had actually landed on the island varied, but authoritative sources said that a full air division numbering 7,000 men certainly was involved.

The Nazis also were reported to have made an unsuccessful attempt to land shock troops on the north coast of the island from small boats.

It was believed the heaviest fighting had taken place around Canea on Suda Bay, and Malemi, which is situated 12 miles to the south and is the site of one of the island's few good airports. Sharp fighting also has been reported around Rethymno and Candia, farther east.

Whether the Royal Navy had taken an active part in the Defence of Crete was not disclosed and official sources remained silent on Nazi claims that their air force had damaged a British battleship, five cruisers and a destroyer in the Eastern Mediterranean.

Turkish-Syrian Passenger Train Service Closed

Istanbul, Turkey, May 22 (Delayed)—(AP)—Passenger train service between Turkey and Syria was reported Wednesday to have been discontinued.

It was not disclosed whether freight traffic had ceased.

The Taurus Express, which formerly ran twice weekly from Turkey through Syria to Iraq, now halts on the Turkish side of the Syrian border.

Turkey's isolation made her food supply problems more urgent. In an effort to accumulate a reserve of wheat, the Government ordered a decrease in the weight and price of bread loaves.

A Turkish commercial delegation which has been in Bucharest returned today with a new agreement providing for exchange of Turkish cotton for Rumanian oil.

The newspaper Yeni Sabah observed that "our borders with Germany are lengthening daily," and urged that "at all costs Turkey must prevent the Germans from settling down in Iraq and Syria. We must keep our routs to the outer world open, and not let ourselves be cut off from our British allies.

Corby's A. C. moved into undisputed lead in the City Softball League as they downed the SACO 11 to 0 at Coleman Flats last night, while the Esquire Juniors were losing by the identical same score at the hands of the "Cementmen" in Point Anne. On the home lot it was too much Johnnie Bawden for the SACO as the veteran Corby moundsman pitched three-hit ball while his teammates made merry to collect 17 safeties and coast in to win. At Point Anne the "Cementmen" scored eight runs in the third inning, following which Bubby Gaulin's charges eased in to win without effort.

At the Flats it was all Johnnie Bawden as the Corby moundsman let the SACO down with three singles, struck out an even dozen and walked but two as he eased off in the latter innings. Jimmie Barriage led the Corby's on the attack with four hits in five tries, Ted Henn and Cy Barriage collecting a trio of hits each while Lunberg had a double and single. Other extra base hits were collected by Moon and Ronsky as every starting player on the Corby squad counted at least one hit, except Bawden.

One Double Play

Kerr, starting his first game in the City League for SACO, was touched for 17 hits, but struck out seven and only walked two. Errors behind him accounted for several of the winners' runs, however. O'Neill, Holmes and Frane were the only SACO batters to count hits off Bawden, all being of the one base nature. The SACOS completed the only double play of the game when B. Thompson, in left, took Ronsky's fly and then threw Cy Barriage out of the plate. Corby's scored in every inning, except the second, third and seventh and had no less than 15 men left stranded on the runways.

The line-ups: Corby's A.C.—J. Barriage, lf; Chuck Barriage and Kiser, rf; Cy Barriage, ss; J. Bawden, p; Henn 2b; Ronsky 3b; Whalen, c; Lumberg, cf; Moon and H. Bawden, 1b. SACO—O'Neill, cf; G. Thompson, c; Kerr, p; Holmes, 1b; Peoples, 2b; Frane, 3b; B. Thompson and Hinton, lf; Prout, ss; Storey and De Leeuw, rf.

Score by innings:

Hurls Five-Hitter

Down in Point Anne the winning pitcher, Al Barnhart, was equally as good as Bawden in Belleville, as he blanked the Esquire Juniors and hurled five-hit ball in a masterful mound effort. Coach Townsend's kids looked woefully weak before Barnhart's fireball, while Bubby Gaulin's charges clubbed two junior pitchers for a total of 15 hits and drove Doug Adams from the hilltop with a barrage of hits in the third, Mike Powers being rushed to fill the breach, but the damage had been done by the powerful Point Anne slugging crew. On Monday next the Cementmen battle it out with the Reliance for second place at the Flats.

League Standing

As the result of last night's dual games Corby A.C. are leading the league with two wins in as many starts, while Point Anne, Esquire Juniors and Reliance are tied for second with a win and loss each and the SACO nine are in the cellar with two losses.

Score by innings:

Juniors	0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0	0	5	5
Pt. Anne	0 0 8 0 1 0 1 1 x	11	15	1

CHRISTOFORDIS 5 TO 8 FAVORITE OVER LESNEVICH

Winner Will be Recognized as Lightweight Champion Except in N.Y. State

15-ROUND BOUT

By SID FEDER

(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, May 22—(AP)—The prophet without honor has nothing on Anton Christofordis and Gus Lesnevich in their fight tonight.

The Greek and the Russian from Jersey bang each other around Madison Square Garden's ring in a bout that is recognized for the world light heavyweight championship in most every place except where they're fighting.

Just how this came about, the fellows who run those old feuding partners, the National Boxing Association and the New York State Athletic Commission, can't exactly tell you. Promoter Mike Jacobs turned the trick and he expects some 10,000 fans to watch it.

It's much too long a story to explain in detail. It started when the N.B.A. took its title blessing from Billy Conn last winter and matched Christofordis and Mello Bettina, the ex-champ, in Cleveland, with the stipulation that the winner would be recognized as head man, but would have to meet Lesnevich in a few weeks.

Had First Call

Of course, the N.B.A. expect this tussle would come off somewhere in its own territory. But Jacbs already had first call on Lesnevich's services, a hangover from Gus' two previous futile attempts to win the 175-pound crown from Conn. So Gus couldn't fight for any promoter but Mike, who doesn't bar N.B.A. territory as a field of operation, but who has to fill his dates in the Garden first.

As a result, while the N.B.A. is more or less forced to look upon tonight's fight as a title affair, the New York Commission only regards it as the first in a series of two to decide the new champion. The winner will be paired some time next summer with Jimmy Webb, a pretty fair country flailer from St. Louis and Texas, with the ultimate survivor taking over the championship.

Christofordis, who is making his 13th start since coming to the United States a year ago—he won the other 12—is a 5 to 8 favorite to end Lesnevich's hopes for the title tonight.

HORSEMEN READY TO BOYCOTT MEET AT WOODBINE

Nominee to I.C.R.A. Must be Allowed to Take His Seat on Board

NASTY SITUATION

Toronto, May 22 (CP)—Members of the Thoroughbred Breeders' Association held forth today the threat of boycotting racing at Woodbine Park if their nominee to the board of the Incorporated Canadian Racing Association was not recognized by the Directors of the I.C.R.A. The boycott, if applied, would seriously curtail activities at the palatial track in Toronto's east end where the spring meet is due to end Saturday.

Meeting last night the breeders decided that if Ryland H. New of Oakville was not accorded official recognition by the I.C.R.A. they would refuse to enter their horses in races after today. The owners backed up their stand by subscribing $3,000 to assist smaller racing men who might be in need of financial assistance if the threatened breach materialized.

New was named by the Breeders' Association to replace James Heffering of Pickering, Ont., as one of its representatives to the I.C.R.A., the governing body of Ontario racing. George Hardy, President of the Breeders' Association and R. S. McLaughlin, Oshawa, are other owners on the I.C.R.A. directorate.

The I.C.R.A. directors held a meeting yesterday following which Albert E. Dyment, Ontario Jockey Club head and I.C.R.A. President, announced "the present board was confirmed in their position." At the same time he announed Heffering had been elected Vice-President.

Dyment's statement said a motion had been made to elect New to the board in place of Heffering but no seconder was found. It expressed the view of directors "that they cannot insist upon any owners racing on tracks under our jurisidction, if they do not wish to do so."

Today is war charities day at Woodbine when the proceeds from all the general admissions will be turned over to the British War Victims' Fund, sponsored by the Evening Telegram.

Proposed New Setup For Eastern Allan Cup Playdowns

Halifax, May 22—(CP)—A proposed new set-up for the eastern Allan Cup playdowns was outlined at the annual meeting of the Maritime Amateur Hockey Association yesterday by President Frank Gallagher of Moncton.

Gallagher, re-elected as President said present plans call for the Maritime champions to meet the Quebec winners in the opening round, with the first two games of the best-in-five series in the Maritimes and the others in Quebec. If the Maritimers won, they would meet the Ontario Hockey Association champions, again with the first two of the best-in-five rounds on their home ice and the remainder in Ontario.

This year, Sydney Millionaires, Maritime champions, played all their first-round games at home. Then they played all remaining games outside the branch.

Gallagher said the new proposal would be brought before the next meeting of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

BUFFALO BISONS AND ROCHESTER ARE MOVING UP

Newark Being Threatened by Two Clubs for Top Position

LEAFS SHUTOUT

(By The Associated Press)

Similar to the first tenant in an apartment house watching others move in around him, Newark Bears are beginning to feel a bit crowded at the top of the International Baseball League.

A couple of weeks ago the Bears, who jumped into a quick lead at the start of the season, were out in front by three games. Since then that margin has been cut in half and three clubs are threatening the Bruins' position where there was only one before.

Buffalo and Rochester have shown marked improvement lately and trail Newark by 2 and 2 1-2 games respectively, while Montreal Royals, clinging doggedly to second place, are a game and a half out of first.

The Royals regained the runner-up spot yesterday by trouncing Buffalo Bisons 10-1 as the Bears defeated Syracuse Chiefs 9-5 to maintain their margin.

Rochester stretched a winning streak to four straight with a 3-0 conquest of Toronto Leafs and advanced to within a half game of third place.

Montreal's victory over Buffalo snapped a seven-game Bison winning string and brought Ed Heath his fifth straight triumph.

Max Surkont turned in one of the best performances of the year in blanking the Leafs with two hits. No Toronto player reached second base. Pat McLaughlin went the distance for Toronto, permitting seven hits.

Jersey City Giants handed Baltimore Orioles their ninth straight defeat on home grounds, beating them 11-5 last night.

St. Louis Cards Beat Dodgers Taking Top Place In National; Feller Scores First Shutout

Cleveland Indians Now Secure on Top Rung of American League

YANKS MOVE UP

St. Louis Cards, carving with as much delicacy as so many carpenters, have completed a serious operatin for the removal of excess wind from the Brooklyn Dodgers.

A few stitches remain to be taken but there is no chance that the patient will recover in St. Louis, because even a victory in today's final game of the western trip won't save Brooklyn from returning to the banks of the Gowanus canal in second place in the National League.

The Cardinals clubbed the Dodgers into their fifth straight defeat yesterday 9-3 with a vicious 13-hit assault. The chief slasher was a young outfielder named Herman Coaker Triplett, who once failed to meet the dubious standards of Chicago Cubs and passed to the Cardinals through the American Association.

Coaker treated the Cardinals to a home run, a single with the bases loaded and an extraneous double and single. Meanwhile Harry Gumbert, whom the Redbirds acquired last week from New York Giants, kept nine Brooklyn hits satisfactorily scattered to go the route.

While the Cardinals were emphasizing their intention of controlling the senior circuit, Bob Feller pitched Cleveland Indians back to victory and security in the American League.

He tangled with Southpaw Ken Chase of Washington Senators in a sensational pitching duel that went scoreless for 10 innings before the Indians exploded four runs in the 11th to win 4-0. Feller allowed only four hits in scoring his eighth victory and first shutout of the season.

The give-game winning streak of the second-place Chicago White Sox was snapped by Philadelphia Athletics, whose 7-6 victory was their fourth in a row. The game included six home runs, and a two-run round tripper by Wally Moses in the ninth settled the issue.

New York Yankees knocked Detroit Tigers out of third place with a 10-inning 5-4 victory achieved on a two-run rally that tied the score in the ninth. Red Rolfe's triple scored the winning run in the 10th.

St. Louis Browns banged out four home runs in the first five innings but were beaten 8-6 by Boston Red Sox, who bunched their hits for five runs in the seventh and eighth innings.

New York Giants solved the pitching magic of Bucky Walters and cuffed Cincinnati Reds 6-3 in 10 innings.

Pittsburgh Pirates spotted Boston Braves a four-run lead in the first inning and then battled back to an 8-4 decision. The Cubs pounced on the Phillies 7-3 with a grand-slam homer by Bill Nicholson in the fifth.

GOSSIP NEWS COMMENT

Perhaps the reason the Chicago Cubs signed Jerome "Dizzy" Dean as coach was simply because "Ol' Diz" has lent more color to the game than any other individual in the past decade. (And he's still good copy).

Dean literally carried the Cardinals' "Gas House Gang" of a decade ago on his proverbial shoulders and his love for the game and courage will never be disputed. Perhaps if he had had less courage, he would probably be pitching today.

Then there was the occasion when he reported to Manager Harnett with a gashed arm, remember that famous telephone incident in 1939? Upon being sent back to Chicago to recuperate Dean's story broke the front pages and as he arrived in Chicago "Ol' Diz" cracked — "I never thought a little scratch on my arm would push Hitler and the WPA off the front page."

The All-Star game of 1937 was really the turning point in Dean's career as a pitcher. He was trying to pitch that game with a broken toe, when one of Earl Averill's hard drives hit the fractured toe and the pain was doubtless unbearable. Dean pitched to Gehrig and the rest is history. Columbia Lou blasted the pitch for a mighty homer and Dean was never the same on the hilltop again; it was the end of Dizzy Dean as a pitcher batters could fear. However, he did everything in his power to throw 'em just as he had always done. As a pitcher, Dean was never at a loss for words. You can wager that he still won't be as a coach. Last summer he was pitching a game against the Pittsburgh Pirates, and his old boss, Frankie Frisch, hollered out of the dugout:

"Hey, Diz, how about the old high, hard one?"

Said Dean: "Do you think I'd throw it at MY salary?"

Do you remember when Ted Lyons, 37-year-old righthander, scored his 200th American League victory when Chicago White Sox defeated Washington 9-2 three years ago today. The veteran knuckle-baller yielded nine hits, one a homer by Jonathan Stone in the eighth inning. Lyons still is pitching for the White Sox.

Lou Novikoff, the Cub's Mad Russian, must be getting madder all the time. Those National League pitchers keep fooling him. He's hitting down around .220, if you can call that hitting. With the Mad Russian as a player and Dizzy Dean as a coach, Manager Jimmy Wilson of the Cubs must have a good time every day—until the ball games start.

The winning pitchers in both City League softball games last night were far ahead of the batters, as a matter of fact the pitching to date in the local "mushball" loop has been somewhat superior to the hitting, which is usually the case during the early part of the season. This is attributed to the fact the batters just haven't got their eys on the ball as yet. At the Flats Johnnie Bawden hurled a sweet three-hit effort against the SACO and actually might have fared better. The same applies to Al Barnhart down in Point Anne, where the ex-Shannonville hurler let the local Juniors down with five hits, all of the one-base nature. Another oddity is the fact, that Corbys and the "Cementmen" both won their games by the identical same score—eleven to nothing. Incidentally Kerr, the SACO moundsman, might have fared better had his teeam-mates fielded a little tighter, but they just couldn't get little Jimmy Barriage out, as he had four hits and drove in a run after scoring three times.

It will be a great week end for the gals in the Belleville Girs' Softball League, as President Ted Schwab's loop has monopolized the three-day holiday week end evenings for the prying off of the girls' softball lid at the armouries commencing Friday night After losing two of the charter clubs of the league Secretary Barney Smith says he's satisfied today girls' softball will provide keen sporting interest for the fans this summer. When the leagues executive voted to bolster Larry Shoener's Deacon nine on Tuesday night, that was doubtless the wisest move Prexy Schwab's cohorts could have made to assure the completion of a five-clubbed loop. Friday night Chuck Barnett's league champion Zellers pry off the lid versus Mike Powers' rejuvenated Vikings. Barnett lost his ace moundsman, Betty Adams, but has "Pee Wee" Colden and two other youthful pitchers. Coach Powers will pin his hopes on the good right arm of Rita Rabbie and generally speaking the girls have a much wider knowledge of the game today than they did one year ago when girls softball was revived.

Pie Traynor, the former Pirate manager, who now is looking after the Pittsburgh farm system, says the funniest thing he ever saw on a diamond took place recently in Independence, Kan., where Traynor dropped in on a ball game.

"Independence had runners on first and third, one out and a young kid, fresh from the farm, was at bat," Traynor related. "The manager flashed the double-steal sign and both runners were off with the pitch. But the visiting team wasn't to be caught napping. The catcher fired the ball to second, where it was intercepted by the shortstop, who blazed it back to the plate. To everyone's amazement, the batter stepped up, swung—and drove the ball out of the park!

"The manager raved and asked the rookie why he did it.

"'Gosh,' the rookie replied, 'that's the first fast ball that's come over this plate in two weeks and I couldn't help taking a cut at it!'"

STIFF OPPOSITION TO FEDERAL GAS TAX IN HOUSE

Several Members Offer Amendments But All Are Turned Down

DEBATE CONTINUES

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 22 (CP)—Faced by a growing volume of protest against application to farmers and fishermen of the new tax of three cents a gallon on gasoline—protest non-partisan in its origin—the House of Commons today resumes discussion of that clause of the Budget taxation changes.

Throughout yesterday's sitting the House, in committee of the whole, was deadlocked on the issue, with several members offering amendments designed to exempt the farming and fishing industry.

All amendments were wrecked on the barrier of Parliamentary procedure. One moved by Walter Tucker (Lib. Rosthern) was accompanied by the warning that nothing done in the last 10 years would have such a detrimental effect on national unity as imposition of this tax on farmers.

The feeling in Western Canada, Mr. Tucker said, "is that they have been driven to the limit of their endurance and, if a tax such as the one proposed is put upon them, the results would not be pleasant to contemplate."

Urged to Realize Importance

Mr. Ilsley urged members to "realize the tremendous gravity of this hour" and accept the importance of collecting all taxes efficiently.

He had told the House yesterday that it had been the Government's wish to exempt farmers and fishermen, and also tourists, from the tax but that administrative difficulties stood in the way.

William Fraser (Lib. Northumberland) said he was not unmindful of the gravity of the present situation, but he urged the Minister to exempt primary producers in point of return for their effort.

He said the Minister could make up the lost revenue by increasing the tax on gasoline used by people "who waste gas coming from nowhere and going nowhere."

Deputy Speaker Vien, as chairman of the committee, was frequently called upon to give rulings on points of order as the various amendments were moved.

At one stage Finance Minister Ilsley was called upon to withdraw an expression which Walter Tucker (Lib. Rosthern), a veteran of the First Great War, interpreted as questioning his loyalty.

Amendment Offered

Mr. Tucker had moved an amendment which would increase the tax to four cents a gallon but make it inapplicable to power fuel used by farmers and fishermen.

Mr. Ilsley commented that Mr. Tucker "places loyalty to the financial, dollar and cent interests of his constituents above practically every other earthly consideration."

Mr. Tucker sprang to his feet, obviously angry, to declare: "I resent the suggestion most fiercely, as a person who in the last war, as soon as he was 18, got into the army and went to France to risk his life.

"I say I resent the suggestion that I put loyalty to my constituents above loyalty to my country. I ask the Minister to withdraw that suggestion."

Mr. Ilsley hastened to deny he had intentionally made any such reflection upon Mr. Tucker.

Little Out of Place Says Ilsley

"But I do submit," he said, "that there are times and circumstances in which this violent plea not to touch people at all under conditions like these is a little bit out of place.

"We have refrained, on every occasion, with the possible exception of the war exchange tax, when imposing taxes to make levies which would affect the agricultural portion of the community.

"I cannot go on; I cannot make my record 100 per cent perfect, of not imposing taxes that will to some degree be borne by farmers. I cannot do that and get ahead with the financial program of the government."

First amendment to the gasoline tax resolution, from E. E. Perley (Con. Qu'Appelle), would have provided that rebates be paid farmers and fishermen on proof that the gasoline was used exclusively for power purposes on a farm or in a fishing boat.

T. L. Church (Con. Toronto-Broadview) said he had no objection to such a rebate but it should be given also to industrial workers who had to travel long distances to work.

Mark Senn (Con. Haldimand), favoring the amendment, said the tax as proposed would put farmers who used crude oil to operate their machinery at an advantage over those who used gasoline.

Chairman Vien ruled that the amendment was out of order because it would have the effect of reducing the amount to be raised by the proposed taxation.

Urged to Reconsider

Victor Quelch (N.D. Acadia) contended that the gasoline tax might force western farmers back to old-style methods of harvesting and bring back the spectacle of harvest trains carrying eastern workers to the prairies each autumn.

If the government had adopted fiscal policies advocated since 1935 by his party there would be no need for restrictive taxes, Mr. Quelch said.

After Mr. Tucker's amendment also had been ruled out, a third was offered by J. A. Ross (Con. Souris), calling for rebates to farmers and fishermen, the lost revenue to be made up by a tax of three cents a gallon on Diesel fuel used for transportation purposes.

Chairman Vien ruled that this amendment had not overcome the procedure regulations which prohibit private members moving to interfere with the government's taxation principles.

Hon. Earl Rowe (Con. Dufferin-Simcoe) and Arthur Slaght (Lib. Parry Sound), without expressing any strong opposition to the tax as applied to farmers and fishermen, urged the Minister to reconsider in view of the protests which had been made.

MIGHTY LION COUNTS ON YOU

GIVE US THE TOOLS
HELP FINISH THE JOB BUY VICTORY BONDS

This mighty British lion, proud symbol of an unconquerable race, is pictured here superimposed on a background of factories whose belches of smoke chide a symphony of determination to rid the World of Nazi lust. Truly a tribute to Canadian industry whose factories produce these planes and ships and guns—the tools of war—this design won first prize in a Canadian-wide contest for posters for use in the coming Victory Loan campaign. The design was the creation of A. J. Casson, well-known Canadian commercial artist, and as a result Mr. Casson will receive his prize, a one thousand dollar Victory Bond, at the hands of His Excellency the Governor-General. When reproduced in striking colors of gold and scarlet, the design will appear on bill-boards in every city and town in the Dominion, a reminder to the nation to support the loan so that the tools may be supplied to smash the German hordes.

AUSTRALIA'S AIM TO EMPLOY ALL HER RESOURCES

Australian Minister to U.S. Tells of War Effort of Country

New York, May 22.—(CP)—Australia's aim is to employ to the limit all her resources, "human, financial, material," for war purpose and at the same time to create the minimum amount of dislocation and hardship, R. G. Casey, Australian Minister to the United States, said Wednesday.

"In other words," Mr. Casey said in an address prepared for a meeting of the Bond Club of New York, "We seek to transfer all possible resources from civil uses to war use, with as little dislocation to the economic and social fabric as possible. This entails a great deal of planning, and many controls."

Australia's war effort in the current year will cost £200,000,000 (about $720,000,000) and is rising constantly, said the minister. He placed the cost of this one year of war at not far from the total cost to Australia of the entire 4½ years of the first great war. He said the current cost represented a net 20 per cent of Australia's estimated national income.

"Australia has armed forces both overseas and at home that would be, if we had your population, 5,000,000 men," said Mr. Casey in attempting to bring before Americans an idea of the size of Australia's war effort. "Translated into terms of your population, the anticipated cost of the war to Australia in 1941 would be equivalent to about $15,000,000,000 at the current rate of exchange . . .

He placed the cost of the Empire's war effort, "apart from civilian services and apart from what we are buying or acquiring in the United States," at the equivalent of $60,000,000 a day.

Others were Lt.-Cmdr. Robert Armitage of H.M.S. Vernon, Maj. Herbert Barefoot of the Royal Engineers, and Wing-Cmdr. Laurence Sinclair of the Royal Air Force.

Alderson rescued 14 persons during three air raids at Bridlington, Sinclair rescued an air gunner from a burning aircraft loaded with bombs. The nature of the deeds which won the cross for Armitage and Barefoot was not disclosed.

TWO SOLDIERS WERE IN HURRY

Went to England as Hitch-Hikers and Stowaways—Military Sentence is Deferred

(By Eddy Gilmore)

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, May 22.—(AP)—These two soldiers in the Canadian Army couldn't wait for the Battle of Britain.

At a court martial somewhere in England, L. Harding, 25, McGill University graduate, and William Crough, 21, New York, were arraigned on two charges: (1) leaving Camp Borden, Ont., without permission; (2) conduct prejudicial to good order and military discipline.

They took the stand.

They nervously testified they had heard Hitler planned to invade Britain this spring. They decided to beat him to it. On March 17 they began a hitch-hike from Camp Borden to Halifax.

Footsore but still determined, in Halifax they found a coal bunker headed for Britain. By night they crept in and hid.

"It was pretty tough going the first five days", said Crough. "We had no food or drink".

Give Selves Up to Ship's Engineer

Finally they gave themselves up to the engineer and told him their story. The captain put them to work. On landing in Britain they were turned over to Canadian military authorities.

The defending court martial officer grimly eyed the youth, commenting gravely that they had sinned against the military code. Then he added pointedly:—

"However, you displayed spirit, initiative, pluck and courage'.

He told the court he wished he had more like them in his unit.

Sentence was deferred.

Speaks In Toronto Less Than 24 Hours After Leaving Britain

Toronto, May 22 (CP)—Wing Cmdr. Dave Harding of the Royal Canadian Air Force spoke before a meeting of the Toronto Victory Loan Committee here Tuesday less than 24 hours after he left Britain after ferrying a bomber across the Atlantic.

The former star of Toronto, Ottawa and Winnipeg rugby football teams described the people of Britain as "brave....and of wonderful stock." but said "we've got to turn savage; we've got to beat them (the Germans) at their own game."

Wing Cmdr. Harding had dinner in Britain Monday night and Tuesday night was telling the Toronto Victory Loan Committee that the British "are depending on the people of Canada and the rest of the Empire for aid which they must have now."

Canadians "don't know there's a war on", he said as he urged immediate blackout practices "it's necessary, I warn you...If we don't do everything right now to win this war, the Germans will soon be telling us what to do."

"It is silly for you to go on with your parties, your lights full on, your good meals three times a day. It's time for a fullout effort .... Personal advantage and financial gain doesn't matter any more. We've just got to win this war."

Organization Of Committees Completed In Hastings County For The Drive In Victory Loan Campaign

Thorough organization of the Hastings County Committee for the forthcoming Victory Loan Campaign to which residents will be asked to subscribe two million dollars, has been completed according to headquarters of the local committee here.

Judge Charles A. Cameron, chairman of the General Committee has surrounded himself with a group of prominent residents in all sections of the county, and the general executive is again confident that the City of Belleville, the town of Trenton, and the outlying centres and communities of the county will over-subscribe the objective.

Pre-campaign reports filtering in to headquarters indicate a growing enthusiasm on the part of residents of the county. That the people of this district are behind the Dominion's war effort is evidenced in enquiries that already are coming in to officials and others.

Chairman Confident

Chairman Judge Cameron today voiced his confidence in Hastings County to help "supply the tools" to finish the job. "This county has risen superbly to any task with which it has been confronted" he said, "and I am confident that in this, one of its greatest tasks, it will emerge with its head held high in pride of achievement."

Great Britain, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, India and Canada have been left alone to fight the Nazi monster, it is pointed out. The challenge, undoubtedly the most stupendous in the world's history, demands the active help of every Canadian. Those with money, be it fifty dollars or fifty thousand, or one hundred thousand must loan their cash to the government, if Canada is to carry on with her present share in the big battle.

Rural Districts Enthusiastic

In the rural districts enthusiasm is just as keen as it is in the urban centres. Prominent residents there jumped at the chance to head committees or assist in any way possible. The stage is all set for the great drive, and Hastings County will, officials are confident, once again "come through with the tools."

War Secretary Stimson Assails United States Neutrality Act

Washington, May 22—(AP)—War Secretary Stimson assailed the United States' Neutrality Act today as "a violation of our most sacred and important tradition of foreign policy, freedom of the seas."

Like Navy Secretary Knox who yesterday termed the act barring American shipping from war zones a "terrible blunder," Stimson stressed he was speaking as an individual rather than as Secretary of War.

Stimson added that what he described as a conflict between the Neutrality Act and the freedom of the seas principle would have to be "very carefully considered" in delivering munitions to Great Britain.

"It's for others to decide whether repeal of the act is an urgent matter now," he told a press conference inquirer.

Noting that he had opposed the principle of the neutrality legislation for years, Stimson said "I always prophesied it would bring us into trouble."

"It was abhorrent to our principles to yield to our fears by this policy," he added.

U. S. Plans To Turn Out 500 4-Motored Bombers Per Month

By EDWARD E. BOMAR

Washington, May 22—(AP)—A hint that the United States is rushing preparations to employ numbers of relatively small aircraft carriers to safeguard merchant ships came today from Navy Secretary Frank Knox, who said guardedly that the navy is "very busy" on the undertaking.

Without explaining whether such craft might be used except under actual war conditions, Knox said that in connection with the controversy over delivery of munitions to Great Britain, it was "silly" to dwell exclusively on methods developed during the first Great War for protecting convoys from surface and undersea attack.

A speedy cargo ship is being rebuilt experimentally as a carrier, and a score of new type "transports" and conventional plane carriers are under construction or planned, but Knox declined to divulge just what steps are being taken to cope with the problem presented by Germany's aerial attack on British-bound shipping.

"It's one of the things we are not talking about," he told his press conference.

Knox reported that the navy's air force had been increased by more than 50 per cent within a year, with a net reinforcement of 1,304 planes. On May 1 there were 3,476 naval aircraft of all types in service.

Knox also announced that Admiral Thomas C. Hart would be retained indefinitely as commander-in-chief of the Asiatic Fleet after he reaches the normal retirement age of sixty-four next month. He described Hart as "an exceptionally good man in a situation which requires a great deal of experience and knowledge."

500 Bombers Per Month

In another major development. William S. Knudsen, director of the Office of Production Management, announced that the country's plane production program had been expanded to turn out 500 four-motored bombers a month.

Without disclosing when he expects to attain this production schedule, he told reporters that "letters of intent" have been sent out ordering additional numbers of the bombers from the Ford Motor Company and the Boeing, Lockheed and Douglas Aircraft Companies. Ford will construct the craft at a new plant at Ypsilanti, Mich.

Measure Not Directed At Particular Country Says Nazi Spokesman

Berlin, May 22 (AP)—German spokesmen claimed today the order that all nations close their Embassies and Legations in Paris was a measure not directed at any particular country but designed to bring the Embassies and Legations together at Vichy.

"Vichy is the present capital of France and that is where diplomatic representatives belong," a spokesman said.

There is no objection to any nation having diplomatic relations with Germany maintaining consulates in Paris, he added. The United States now has no Paris Consulate as such, but it was indicated here that one might be created if Washington wishes. The United States' Paris Embassy had a consular section which, presumably, could function independently.

(Foreign legations and embassies at Vichy have kept representatives in Paris chiefly to care for their citizens and interests in the occupied zone. The United States also looks after British and Canadian interests in the occupied zone.)

LATE DR. DAVD THOMSON

Marmora, (Special)—The funeral of the late Dr. David Thomson took place on Tuesdy. Service was conducted at his last residence by Rev. Dr. W. P. Flecher at noon. The cortege then proceeded to W. Scott's Funeral Chape. Woodbridge. for service at 3.30 p.m. Interment was made in Hillcres Cemetery, Woodbridge.

LATE MRS. CHAS. MOON

3rd Sidney, May 22 —Special)—Friends in large numbers and relatives gathered to pay their last respects, and to attend the funeral of Mrs. Chas. (Ella) Moon, which was held at the family residence, 2nd concession of Sidney, on Wednesday afternoon.

The service at the home and at the grave-side was in charge of Rev. L. W. Scott, pastor of Aiken's United Church where Mrs. Moon has been a valued member since moving to the community thirty-three years ago.

Rev. Scott chose as his text "I am the resurrection; he that liveth and believeth in Me shall never die."

He paid sincere tribute to the Christian virtues and ideals of the deceased, who had given rich service to the church and to mankind through the use of her music ability. For over twenty years, and while health permitted, Mrs. Moon had been organist at the Aiken's church.

Favorite hymns, including a hymn of faith especially loved by the deceased, "When On My Day of Life the Night is Falling," were read by the pastor.

The beautiful floral tributes which banked the casket and the rooms, bore silent evidence of the love and esteem which were held in the hearts of her many friends.

Th remains were placed in White's Cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. Wm. Bush, Sam Marshall, Wilmot Bailey, Earl Bush, Stanley Spafford and Cyril McMullen.

ALEXANDER I. FOSTER

Ernest Harston, Toronto; Mrs. William Foster, Rhode Island; Mrs. Percy White, Toronto; Mrs. Alex. The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

Victory Loan Is For Two Purposes

To Finance Canada's War Effort and Render Aid to Britain

Proceeds of Canada's 1941 Victory Loan will be used for two purposes—to help finance Canada's war effort and to render financial assistance to Great Britain.

Hon. J. L. Ilsley, Minister of Finance, in his recent budget address, estimated that in the current fiscal year the Dominion Government would have to raise about $1 billion by way of borrowing.

Of this amount, the major portion will be for the purpose of financing Britain's deficit in her balance of payments with Canada, arising out of huge purchases of supplies and munitions in Canada.

For the current fiscal year British purchases in Canada will reach approximately $1.5 billions. On this basis it is estimated that Britain's deficit in her balance of payments with Canada will total approximately $1.1 millions. In order that there may be no stoppage in the shipment of vital supplies which Britain is buying from Canada, the Dominion Government has undertaken to finance such proportion of the deficit as Britain herself will be unable to meet by the transfer of gold or United States dollars to Canada.

"The deficit in the balance of payments", which Canada has undertaken to finance, means very little to the great majority of Canadians. To put it simply, Great Britain has insufficient Canadian dollars with which to pay for the supplies she wants from Canada and the Dominion Government has undertaken to provide those dollars.

By buying Victory Bonds Canadians will be providing aid to Great Britain over and above the assistance being given by the Canadian Navy, Army and Air Force. They will be giving Prime Minister Winston Churchill "part of the tools" he requested and which have been ordered from Canada.

The cost of Canada's war effort in this fiscal year is estimated at about $2,500 millions. Of this amount, $170 millions has been allotted to the navy, $667 millions to the army, $387 millions to the air force. In addition, financing Britain's requirements in Canada will take $900 millions to $1,150 millions.

It will be noted that the biggest individual item is financing British purchases. This is made up of repatriation of securities and credits. These represent the method whereby Canada enables Britain to secure goods without having to pay Canada any cash. By this means Britain is able to buy from Canadian factories war goods made by Canadian workmen.

Every bond purchased will mean more wheat, bacon, cheese, flour, guns, ships and mechanized equipment for the Motherland.

POLICE COURT

Eight traffic cases were listed for trial in Thursday's Police Court held before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., at the Court House, two of which were enlarged owing to the absence from the city of Motorcycle Patrolman H. R. McKellar, who preferred the charges.

Motorists who persist in driving vehicles without first having obtained an operator's licence find it exceedingly costly when convicted. The cost of a driver's licence is a one dollar Canadian bank note. However, Robt. G. Brown, Toronto, Gregory Cassidy, Trenton and another motorist found it cost them ten dollars plus $2.50 costs to be apprehended minus their drivers' permit and in any event they had to produce their 1941 operators' licences before their cases were disposed of, which aggregates exactly $13.50, including the purchase of the new licence.

Careless Driving Charged

Karel Pavelik, Frankford, was assessed $5 and costs, having been convicted of careless driving, while Alfred Lew, Belleville, paid a similar fine for speeding through a highway restricted area. Cases of careless driving to be heard against H. J. Cordy, Sulphide and Rene Bastien, Toronto, were enlarged one week at the request of Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., in the absence of Constable McKellar who preferred the counts.

Many Made Wards of C.A.S.

Inspector T. D. Ruston, of the Children's Aid Society presented three cases in court seeking to make wards of eleven children of this city. Three families were involved in the cases, Mr. Ruston presenting evidence stating the homes in question were unfit for the bringing up of children. His Worship committed several of the children to the custody of the C. A. S. and withheld judgment in three cases pending additional information.

Fear Canadian Tanker Lost Off W. Africa

London, May 22 (CP)—The big Canadian oil tanker Canadolite today was feared to have been sunk off the west coast of Africa with a number of Canadian casualties.

The 11,309 ton vessel, built in 1926 and owned by the Imperial Oil Company of Montreal, some days ago was reported "overdue."

On May 7 a total of 13 Nova Scotians were listed aboard a seagoing ship overdue at her destination after sailing from an Eastern Canadian harbor; and the following day an additional list of six Ontario members of the crew was made public.

French Hold Eight Canadian Seamen Off The Portadoc

Ottawa, May 22 (CP).—Loss of the steamship Portadoc by enemy action April 4 was announced yesterday by the Transport Department in a statement which said eight Canadian members of her crew were "prisoners" in French Guinea and eight others had been landed in Scotland.

And today officials of the External Affairs Department said they still had no definite explanation why Canadian merchant seamen should be taken prisoner in the colony of a nation with which the Dominion maintains diplomatic relations.

One department spokesman said reports had been received previously that a Canadian had been interned in unoccupied France. He gave no details of that case, but said he thought it possible some similar action had been taken in the case of the men landed in French Guinea.

The spokesman said many German merchant seamen now are in internment camps in Canada. The belligerent nations were looking on merchant seamen practically in the same light as members of the naval service. The administration in French Guinea, he suggested, might have taken the same view and ordered the men's internment on that ground.

The Transport Department's announcement of the sinking was based on original word from the Admiralty which said nine crew members were prisoners and seven in Scotland.

Formerly of Fort William.

"Advice has been received by the Department of Transport that the S.S. Portadoc, formerly of Fort William, has been lost by enemy action on April 4," the statement said.

"The advice states that nine members of the crew are prisoners in French Guinea and that apparently seven others have been able to return to Scotland."

There was no word of any casualties.

(The statement as originally issued by the Transport Department said the prisoners were in French Guiana, on the north coast of South America. Several hours later the department said French Guinea was meant.)

All information sent to Canada from the British Admiralty was contained in a statement, it was learned late last night.

But on the basis of speculation by government officials here it was indicated the Portadoc probably was sunk by an enemy submarine off the West African coast; and that her crew abandoned ship in lifeboats, some being picked up by a northbound British ship, the rest making their own way to the French Guinea shore.

The Admiralty did not say where the 1,200-ton freighter went down. Officials took it for granted the attack was reasonably near French Guinea.

Before being sent overseas last year for use in the British coastal and channel services, the Portadoc, a general freighter, was operated in the Great Lakes service as one of the Paterson Line ships.

London (CP)—The entire crew of 22 of the Canadian Lakes steamship Portadoc were saved when the vessel was torpedoed off West Africa April 7, but all except seven over military age were interned in French Guinea, it was disclosed here today.

(An announcement by the Department of Transport in Ottawa last night said the ship was sunk April 4 and that eight Canadian members of her crew were "prisoners" in French Guinea and eight others had been landed in Scotland.)

London sources said that three of the men released were believed to be Canadians: First Mate C. H. H. Rowe and two firemen, A. MacDonald and J. Arnold, whose home is thought to be Prince Edward Island.

Forest Fires Sweep Out Of Control Near Port Arthur

Port Arthur, May 22 (CP)—Whipped by high winds, forest fires swept out of control northeast of Port Arthur during the night, destroying several barns and homesteads in the Nipigon district and threatening an internment camp, houses in other sections.

At Nipigon, 70 miles east of Port Arthur, farm barns and homes were destroyed when the wind drove flames through a narrow belt of slash close to the trans-Canada highway. Ontario Provincial Police were sent to the fire area from Port Arthur to evacuate some settlers whose homes were demolished or threatened by the fires which still raged.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Life With Henry"

The characters of Henry Aldrich, that young man with an affinity for trouble and a genius for getting out of it, enjoys an enviable reputation in three mediums of entertainment. First created as a radio feature, Henry rose to tops in popularity. Next, he appeared on the stage in "What a Life," which ran for two seasons, when it was purchased by Paramount to be made into a movie. Jackie Cooper was given the role of Henry and the popularity of this combination in motion pictures was instantaneous. In fact, it was such a great success that Paramount contemplates a series, the second of which is "Life With Henry," the new Aldrich Family picture tonight at the Capitol Theatre. This is an original screenplay by Clifford Goldsmith and Don Hartman. Jackie, of course, plays the star role. Leila Ernst is his leading lady. Others featured in the cast include Eddie Bracken, Kay Stewart, Hedda Hopper and Fred Niblo.

Border Vigilantes

Movie pistol shots, so realistic that they're almost warranted to make you duck in your seat, will be heard for the first time in the new "Hopalong" Cassidy adventure picture, "Border Vigilantes," tonight at the Capitol Theatre.

Utilizing a newly developed "sound level control," which operates in some respects similar to the human ear in that it closes partially to prevent an overload, the new method of recording is said to make previous gunshots pale in comparison.

"Border Vigilantes," a rousing story of early silver mining days in frontier Nevada, was written for the screen by J. Benton Cheney from characters created by Clarence E. Mulford, outstanding writer of western fiction. The cast includes William Boyd, Russell Hayden, Andy Clyde, Victor Jory, Frances Gifford, Ethel Wales, Morris Ankrum, Britt Wood and over fifty seasoned riders.

The sixth chapter of Zane Grey's "King of the Royal Mounted" and the latest news completes the program.

AT THE BELLE

"There's Magic in Music"

Filled with joyous and exhilarating music and brightened by the presence of many outstanding musical stars, Paramount's new comedy musical, "There's Magic in Music," now on the Belle theatre screen. At the conclusion of the filming of this topnotch film, one felt like arising and demanding an encore. It's the kind of picture one naturally would want to see more than once.

Produced and directed with inspiration by Andrew L. Stone, the picture features in its imposing cast sixteen year-old Susanna Foster, Allan Jones, both of whom sing gloriously, beautiful Margaret Lindsay, Lynne Overman, comedy screen favorite, lovely Gracie Bradley and William Collier, Sr. Adding still more lustre to the bright roster of talented personalities who appear in this outstanding picture, are the nationally-famous opera stars, Richard Bonelli, Irra Petina and Tandy MacKenzie. In addition to these lumaries, the cast boasts five 'teen age youngsters of amazing musical talent. They are Heimo Haitto, young Finnish violinist, Patricia Travers, Dolly Loehr, Kaye Connor and William Chapman. In all about four hundred youngsters perform in the picture.

The cleverly-contrived story is about a young burlesque girl, hard-boiled but not hardened, who is taken into a cheap theatre and transformed into a lovely operatic star. The role of the young spitfire is performed beautifully by Susanna Foster. Most of the story's action takes place at the famous music camp at Interlochen, Michigan.

Very cleverly, several popular operatic airs were given a popularization treatment, so that, although the music itself remains familiar, nevertheless, as performed, it sounds a good deal like modern swing. This is exactly in the spirit of the highly amusing story, which bounces along with verve and sparkle, occasionally permitting romantic interludes for Allan Jones and Margaret Lindsay.

"Dead Men Tell" Thrilling

Thrills a-plenty are promised in the pirate haunted Charlie Chan picture, "Deal Men Tell." The critics say they sat up in their seats as the ghost of old "Black Hook" Nodbury flitted across the screen.

In his newest portrayal of the slick Oriental sleuth, Sidney Toler heads a talented cast which includes Sheila Ryan, Robert Weldon, Sen Yeng, Don Douglas and Katharine Aldridge.

Harry Lachman directed "Dead Men Tell," which is the companion feature attraction.

An entertaining popular science film in technicolor will be exhibited on the same program.

"DAUGHTER OF DESTINY"

By ELEANOR ATTERBURY COLTON

CHAPTER XXIX

Wong here! Devona realized she'd taken a step backward, stood staring now at the Oriental's face, dazedly fumbling for an answer to this confusion. In the same instant, she saw recognition flicker across that passive face, flame for the space of a thought, then mask.

"What is it, please?" That clipped British accent!

Wong, all right. And he knew who she was. And was pretending he didn't.

Pushing terror aside, she found her voice.

"I'm Dona Carlotta, from the El Mexicano. Mr. Macias asked me to call for a package," she replied, automatically repeating the little speech she'd planned.

It probably wouldn't work now. Not with Wong's knowing who she really was—knowing, too, probably, that she wasn't in Macias' confidence.

Amazingly enough, he nodded. The repellent, yellow-skinned face disappeared from the narrow opening, and a key turned gratingly in the lock. Then the door swung open.

Into the Dope Den

Wong stepped aside. "Come in, please."

Devona thrust aside an impulse to turn back, fly down those steps to the waiting taxi. But—and she bolstered her flagging courage—anything worth doing at all took a little daring. No real harm could come to her. After all, she could still claim innocence, ignorance even. Besides, having come this far——

Wong closed the door behind her, led the way down the hall at that same little dog-trot, to the last of the closed doors. Opening it, he snapped on a light, stood aside.

"Wait here, please."

"Thank you." She stepped past him into the tiny room.

Behind her, the door closed again with a rasp. Then she heard Wong's footsteps fade down the hall again. Somewhere a door opened, voices rose faintly then were cut off again as the door closed.

Waiting—for What?

Devona, her knees threatening real mutiny now, sagged into a chair, sat clutching her bag, straining her ears for any sound.

She waited for what seemed hours while realization of her own foolhardiness grew alarmingly. She'd been insane not to report her suspicions to the police or to Dale himself. Because, she argued now, if this were really legitimate business of Macias', she'd have a hard time explaining her interference. And if it weren't—how could she hope to outsmart underworld professionals when Dale himself couldn't do it?

She'd been mad to come. A silly romantic notion that she could play heroine in Dale's serious drama. Heroine! She'd probably only bungled her chance to be of some real help now. And what with Wong's recognizing her now and——

She stood up, crossed quickly to the door. She'd slip out right now before she'd got any further involved. Because any moment now and he would be back with——

Her hand turned on the doorknob. First to left. Then to the right. She pulled again. Stuck! No—the door was—locked!

But it couldn't be! Frantically she twisted it back and forth, leaned one slim shoulder against the door.

Caught in Trap

Then, turning, she raced to the one narrow window, flung up the blind. Less than 10 feet below a narrow strip of sidewalk led from the street beyond. Her shaking fingers tore at the old-fashioned rusted bolt. But there was no turning it. Some one had carefully and effectively nailed the window shut. Nails, she noticed, panicky now, that were shiny new.

She tried the door again, felt a scream rising to her lips, terror clawing at her last fleeing wit. Then, abruptly, she stiffened, forced herself to return to the rickety chair, sit down calmly.

But it was hard to keep from crying out when footsteps sounded in the hall again, drew nearer rapidly. Then a key turned and the door opened. She had to bite her lips to keep back a treacherous little scream as Wong stepped into the room again.

"Sorry to keep you waiting, miss," he said as calmly as if this were her mother's Palm Springs hacienda and she had sent him on some trivial errand.

She heard her own voice, strangely cool. "Oh, that's all right."

"Here is the package." He handed her what looked like a white shoe box.

Tucking it under one arm, she pulled on her gloves with deliberation that amazed even herself. "Thank you."

"Was that all?"

An Oriental Smile

Something flickered across his face. Devona wasn't sure but that it was a half smile. That, even more than the locked door, told her she wasn't yet out of danger.

"Yes. Thank you. And now——"

Boldly she stepped past him toward the shadowy hall. If he moved to stop her, she decided, she'd run.

Wong slipped past her now, opened the door with a flourish.

"Thank you," she murmured, forced herself to walk down the front steps calmly.

Then, drawing a long breath of the salty air, she suppressed a hysterical little giggle. Here she was—she congratulated herself—and fairly ran down the walk to the car waiting at the curb. So far, so——

She stopped short.

The car waiting for her at the curbing—was not—a taxi!

Macias Awaits Her

For a moment she stared at it. No advertisement emblazoned on its door. No uniformed driver opening the door. Instead, the man behind the wheel of the long black coupe was — her exultance collapsed to cold, clammy fear—Jose Macias!

"Well," he said calmly, "fancy finding you here, Dona."

She couldn't speak, couldn't even breathe. She only stood there, staring, stricken.

"Won't you get in?" he invited, flung open the door. "I'll drive you—wherever you're going."

"This—I—my taxi—"

"I took the liberty of dismissing him. Too bad you didn't tell me you wanted to come down here, Dona," he said blandly. "I gave you every opportunity to ask me to bring you, remember?"

He smiled—knowingly.

Devona felt her last prop dissolve under her. So he'd known all along. He'd let her come down here—walk into this—trap!

Scream, should she? Call for help? But—she glanced up and down the deserted, darkened street—what help would there be here? If she resisted now, even the little game would be over. Her best chance was to postpone the showdown until the odds were a little more evenly divided.

Into His Car

"Thank you so much"—and she stepped into the car.

Macias climbed in beside her, started the coupe's powerful motor deftly, guided the long car down the narrow street.

For awhile, they skirted the lighted highways, kept to back streets that wound sinuously through shadows, past towering buildings steeped in darkness. Macias drove rapidly, but carefully, giving his whole attention to their strangely devious route.

Finally they turned into a blazing thoroughfare. Devona released a little sigh of relief. At least there were crowds here—people, policemen, bystanders who might come to her rescue if she needed it.

Not that Macias would give her any opportunity to summon help. He'd speeded up now. They traveled rapidly from one traffic signal to the next, his rate timed to strike the green lights consistently. And—she glanced at the speedometer—at a rate that would make it impossible to leap from the moving car.

Racing Plans

Still holding the white shoe box in her lap, any number of plans presented themselves to her feverishly searching mind. Throw it out the window toward the first uniformed officer she saw? Try to get it open long enough to see, to take from it one of the smaller square boxes she was sure it contained? Convincing evidence if she could get it. Assuming, of course, the very improbable event of her being able to get the evidence out into hands where it would do any good.

As if he'd followed her thinking, Macias reached quietly for the white box. "I'll relieve you of that, Dona. Thanks a lot for bothering your pretty head."

Calmly, he tossed it onto the shelf behind their heads, smiled at her a moment before his attention went back to the street ahead.

There wasn't a chance that he'd believe any story she fabricated now, she realized, her hands clenched in her lap. He'd realized that that phone call had been her clue. He'd actually let her think she was getting away with something, called her down here tonight deliberately, to that grim little house on Front St. Even Wong had been in on the little stunt. It was all clear enough.

Will Help Come?

Just what the next move in this game was to be — that was the baffling, terrifying part. If only she'd had the good sense to tell some one — even Manuel — that something was up.

But not a soul knew where she was. No one would even miss her until tomorrow morning. Tal would call her hotel then. The desk clerk would report 'No answer.' Tal might not even then become alarmed, thinking she'd gone out for early breakfast, or shopping — or something. He might not call for hours after that!

They flashed by a neon-lighted clock tower. One twenty-five. Tal wouldn't call until 8 in the morning at the earliest. Unless he discovered she hadn't been in her room all night, he probably wouldn't become alarmed until noon. At the very best it was six hours and a half before she could hope for any help from that direction.

Grimly she set her lips. Six hours and a half! Maybe longer. And that would be too late! Much too late!

BATTLE OF CRETE TURNS IN BRITAIN'S FAVOR

IRAQ REBEL FORCES REPULSED AT FALLUJAH

Invasion From Sky Continues; Enemy Casualties High

Nazi Planes Shuttling Back And Forth To Greek Mainland Bringing Supplies

NO R. A. F. FIGHTERS

London, May 23 CP)—Candia and Retimo, two Nazi footholds on the Island of Crete, have been recaptured in fierce hand-to-hand fighting, it was announced officially today, and other information indicated that the tide of battle on the Greek island generally was swinging to Britain's advantage.

A large part of this was credited to the Mediterranean fleet which shattered all attempts by the Germans to get sea-borne reinforcements of men and heavy material to their sky shock troops who had been floating down by air on Crete for four days.

At both Heraclean (Candia), the island's largest city, and at Retimo, a middle east general headquarters communique said, the Germans gained a 'temporary lodgment' but "after severe hand-to-hand fighting German detachments were accounted for and the situation in both places is now satisfactory".

Heraclean is about half way along the horth coast and Retimo is 30 miles farther west.

Still a bitter battleground is the airport at Malemi, 10 miles southwest of Heraclean in the Suda Bay area where air-borne Nazi troops are acknowedged still to be arriving. The British forces lost that air base, but it still is dominated by their artillery.

London, May 23 (CP)—A turn in Britain's favor in the furious battle to wipe out Nazi aerial invasion of Crete while British naval guns were shattering attempts to get seaborne reinforcements to the invaders was indicated today in advices reaching London.

A report from Cairo military sources said that severe fighting still was in progress today around the Melemi Airport near Suda Bay, but that the trend at other invasion points on the northwest part of the island definitely was to Britain's advantage.

An authoritative source here said the situation today, the fourth since Nazi air transports, gliders and parachutes began pouring sky troops down on the Mediterranean island, was "certainly as satisfactory as it was 24 hours ago."

So long as the British Navy can ward off a threatened invasion by sea, this source said, there is every reason to believe that the airborne attack must fail and, so far, it has prevented any successful sea invasion.

Landing Attempts Fail

All attempts to land forces on the island from the sea have failed, he declared flatly.

The greatest battle between air and sea-power ever fought is probably now taking place off Crete, this source added. He said that some losses to warships were "inevitable," but declared German claims exaggerated "as usual."

(The Germans have claimed four cruisers, several destroyers and a submarine were sent to the bottom, and hits scored on a battleship, two destroyers and a number of other vessels.)

EAST AFRICAN CAMPAIGN CLOSED SAYS WAR OFFICE

Britain Rights Fascist Wrong by Restoring Ethiopia to Haile Selassie

50-DAY DRIVE

London, May 23 (CP)—A War Office statement issued today wrote "finis" to the East African campaign and said that the few pockets of Italian resistance remaining at Gondar in Ethiopia and elsewhere "represent more of a nuisance than a danger."

Taking the surrender of the Duke of Aosta and his beleaguered forces at Amba Alagi in Ethiopia as marking the end of the campaign, the War Office statement described it as "a model of concerted action by mobile columns which covered vast distanes at almost incredible speeds in the face of strong enemy resistance and great physical difficulties."

And then it told how British imperial armies and Ethiopian patriots in about four months conquered three countries and reconquered a fourth, righting the Fascist wrong that removed Haile Selassie from his Ethiopian throne.

It remarked ironically that it took Gen. William Platt only fifty days to advance 1,150 miles from Chistmaiu to Addis Ababa against well-equipped enemy forces where it took Marshal Badoglio "seven months to advance 425 miles from Adigat to Addis Ababa in 1936, although opposed solely by primitively equipped Abyssinians and with the help of mustard gas."

Italians Outfought

The statement paid tribute to Italian resistance which, it said, must not be under-rated. "Their failure was not because they had not fought but because they had been outfought," the statement said adding that British generalship was "too good for their defence and it was backed by the superior tactical performance and the fighting qualities of the British troops."

The East African campaign, the statement said, has both moral and material significance as a contribution to the final Allied victory.

Loss of East African colonies is a serious blow to Italian prestige; Italy is left so much poorer in trained manpower through the liquidation of its East African forces while on the other hand British troops are left free for service in other fields after being trained "in a hard school of war."

Finally Italian warships can no longer enter the Red Sea and British traffic in those waters can no longer be threatened.

"Now that threat is removed and the United States has been enabled to declare the Red Sea no longer a combat one," the statement concluded.

Entire Ontario And Quebec Cheese Production To Go To United Kingdom

Ottawa, May 23 CP)—Effective Monday the entire cheddar cheese production of Ontario and Quebec will be earmarked for export to the United Kingdom, the Dairy Products Board announced last night.

The Board's order follows:

"All cheddar cheese manufactured in the provinces of Ontario and Quebec on and after May 26, shall be white and unwaxed, not less than 14 1-2 inches in diameter and not less than 75 pounds in weight, and all such cheese shall be exported to the British Ministry of Food through the Dairy Products board by exporters licensed by the Board."

Since 93 per cent of all cheese produced in Canada comes from Ontario and Quebec and the production in the other provinces does not meet domestic consumption in those provinces this means that until the order is rescinded, the bulk of domestic consumption in Canada will have to be provided from stocks already in storage.

Canada has undertaken to provide Britain with at least 112,000,000 pounds of cheese between April 1, 1941, and March 31, 1942, and officials said the Board's order is being put into effect to ensure that Canada exports at least that amount.

In April, cheese production from Ontario and Quebec was down 1,217,000 pounds compared with April, 1940. This was largely due to the heavy demands for milk for use as concentrated milk, also for

FEARING BREAK BRITAIN SEIZES FRENCH TANKER

Supplies Reaching Germany Through Unoccupied France Says Spokesman

BOUND FOR MOROCCO

London, May 23 (CP)—Great Britain seized the French tanker Sheherazade "because of the imminence of a definite break in the relations between Great Britain and Vichy," a Ministry of Economic Warfare spokesman said today.

The spokesman said, "Irrefutable proof that supplies now are reaching Germany through unoccupied France and French possessions" also was a reason for seizure of the 13,467-ton vessel.

He added: "While it is inaccurate to state that seizure of the Sheherazade was made with the approval of the United States Government, she nevertheless carried a number of American extra-consular officials whose duty it would have been to ensure that when the ship reached port none of her cargo would be transferred from French territory to German hands."

Bound For Morocco

"The Sheherazade was bound for Casablanca (French Morocco) and United States officials would have had to see that her cargo was consumed on the spot.

"Britain has by this interception not only acquired some 15,000 tons of oil but if the ship is held will have at her disposal one of the finest and fastest oil tankers in the world."

Reports yesterday said the vessel carried a cargo of oil from the United States and that the seizure was made with full consent of Washington.

Advices from Algiers had depicted a pressing need for fuel for harvesting operations, and restrictions on oil shipments were said to have been relaxed earlier for this purpose.

Official Comment Lacking

Washington, May 23 (AP)—The French tanker Sheherazade, which a British spokesman said had been seized "because of the imminence of a definite break in the relations between Great Britain and Vichy," was understod here to have been proceeding from the United States to French North Africa with a cargo of oil intended for agricultural purposes.

While official comment was lacking on the seizure, or on the London reports that the ship carried "a number of extra-consular officials," it was known here that the U.S. had planned to send some additional consular officials to the French African colonies. There was no report on the number of such officials or their route of travel.

The oil carried by the Sheherazade, and the decision to strengthen the consular staff, represented a move toward restoration of trade with North Africa. The chance that such trade would continue or expand plummeted, however, with word of increased "collaboration" between the Vichy government and Germany.

British Subs Torpedo Troopship and Tanker Also Italian Destroyer

London, May 23 (CP)—British submarines have torpedoed and stunk a 9,000-ton troopship and a 7,000-ton tanker atempting to operate across the Mediterranean to Libya, and an Italian destroyer which also was torpedoed was probably sunk, the Admiralty announced today.

In addition, the communique said a large schooner of the type used by the Axis for carrying ammunition was sunk and a smaller schooner hit several times by shells.

50-Ship Convoy With $100,000,000 Worth War Supplies Arrives Safely

New York, May 23 (CP)—The largest ocean convoy in history, more than 50 ships loaded with $100,000,000 worth of war supplies and food, has crossed to Great Britain safely from Canada, Collier's Weekly reported today. The report came from Quentin Reynolds, staff correspondent of the magazine, who made the crossing aboard one of the vessels.

Reynolds wrote in a cabled dispatch that he left an East Coast Canadian port in a convoy of some 25 ships. Five days out, the convoy was joined by another of 25 vessels. Reynolds said that during the voyage a submarine attempted to attack and was "destroyed by one of several ex-American destroyers guarding the convoy."

"Our convoy (leaving out the actual cost of the ships themselves) was worth more than $100,000,000," Reynolds continued. "But, of course, this cargo cannot be valued in dollars and cents. In terms of lives that it will save, in terms of blows against Germany that it will strike and blows from Germany that it will ward off, its value is beyond any consideration of dollars and cents."

FRENCH COLONEL LEAVING SYRIA ADDRESSESTROOPS

Claims French Munitions Supplied to Nazis for Use Against British in Iraq

OTHERS JOIN HIM

Jerusalem, May 22—(Delayed)—(AP)—A French colonel who crossed into Palestine from Syria to join Britain's forces in anger over the "treachery and lying" of French mandate authorities disclosed today the authorities had supplied French munitions to the Nazis for use in Iraq.

The officer, Col. Philibert Collet, brought an undisclosed number of French officers and men to the British side and besought his fellow-soldiers still in Syria to follow him under the flag which, he said, "will save us and preserve our country from the slavery that is planned for it."

Col. Collet, the French military commander who created the famed Circassian Squadron, addressed this message to his compatriots in Syria:—

Statement Given

"French Officers and Soldiers of the Levant,—

"We all determined the day after the Armistice to defend the Levant. Our chief proclaimed it many times.

"Gen. Dentz was charged himself with its defence on his arrival and convinced us of his decision.

"Now, on May 12, although they long tried to conceal it, German aircraft landed in our airdromes for fuel and to take on fresh munitions.

"On subsequent days French trains transported toward Tel Kotcheq arms from our stores, which the Germans gave the Baghdad government in the struggle against Britain.

"Honor bids us do nothing against our former allies, as Petain said on May 7.

"I had not cared to be fooled any longer by those who cultivate treachery, lying to you, and too will refuse to allow that this cuntry, which is entrusted to your keeping, be handed over to the real enemy, one who in France is soiling our homes and trying to crush our vitality.

"Be sure that the way I have chosen under the Free French flag will save us and enable us to save this country from the slavery that is planned for it."

Damascus, Syria, May 23 (AP)—Official quarters said tonight that Col. Collet's detachment of troops which had crossed into Palestine to join the Free French movement numbered 200.

In a clash with frontier guards, it was said, a few were killed and wounded on both sides.

French mandate authorities' denied that Free French troops have entered Syria, as reported by the Free French radio.

SOME CANADIANS ARE IN BRITISH PARACHUTE CORPS

War Office Tells Inside Story of New Unit and Shows Movies of Manoeuvres

CANADIANS PRAISED

By ROSS MUNRO

London, May 23 (CP)—A group of Canadians are members of the new British parachute corps, which trains men to carry the Empire's battles behind enemy lines by sabotage and frontier fighting tactics.

Raising the veil of secrecy around this newest unit in the British army, the War Office told correspondents the inside story of the new "Paratroops" and showed thrilling movies of these men on manoeuvres in England, dropping from the troop-carrying planes at less than 500 feet.

Described as the "finest fighting men we have in the country," the paratroops staged a secret demonstration last Fall on Salisbury Plains and since then the corps has expanded enormously. Commanders of the new unit say there is nothing the Germans have done with parachutes that the British sky troops can't do.

"We have a number of Canadians with us, and tough scrapping soldiers they are," the colonel commanding the parachute corps told The Canadian Press. "They are Canadians who came from the Dominion, most of them around the start of the war, joined British regiments and then volunteered for this new service.

"I'll wager they rank with our best paratroops."

Canadians Daring Jumpers

An English sergeant who has made many leaps said "some of my buddies are Canucks and they're turning out to be daring jumpers and handy with our particular fighting tactics. I wish I could give you their names but we still keep that under our hat."

The paratroops are all volunteers who served in British regiments. They are picked for youth, initiative, hardiness and daring, and receive extra pay for their dangerous job.

Seldom are they seen outside their base or training camps and when one appears on a London street in khaki battle dress wearing his parachute corps emblem—light blue wings with a white dot of a parachute in the centre—it creates a mild sensation.

"This is not a daredevil business but is calculated and scientific and for this reason our training casualties have been practically nil," said a colonel.

More Volunteers Than Can be Handled

There have been more volunteers than we can handle and the number that leave the service is negligible."

BRITAIN IMPOSES ALL DISABILITIES ON 92 VESSELS

Japanese Tankers And Other Smaller Craft In Pacific Come Under Order

MAY SEIZE SHIPS

Los Angeles, May 23 (AP)— The British Consulate, through an advertisement in a shipping newspaper, warned today "the British government will impose all disabilities" on 11 large Japanese tankers and 81 smaller craft operating in the Pacific.

Vice-Consul L. G. Holliday confirmed the warning but said he had no comment.

Kenju Nakauchi, Japanese Consul, said: "I cannot understand such an action. Why any Japanese ship should be black-listed by Great Britain, and particularly these 11 ships listed, which are whalers and tankers, is not easily explained."

Shipping men interpreted "all disabilities" to include possible seizure of the vessels. They speculated the action was in reprisal against reported refueling of Nazi raiders in mid-Pacific by Japanese oil tankers.

They pointed out that the tankers and whalers all are equipped with powerful short wave radio apparatus which could be used to inform Tokyo of British ship movements.

One Arrives Today

One of the blacklisted vessels, the 19,310 ton Tonan Maru No. 3, was scheduled to arrive today. Another, the Kyokuyo Maru, sailed yesterday for Tokyo with 150,000 barrels of oil.

On April 30 the British Admiralty issued a similar warning to several Spanish and Argentinian vessels, two Turkish boats and one each flying the Peruvian and Panamian flags. Later the warning was extended to include "all vessels flying the flags of Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria, which countries now have been declared enemy territory."

The advertisement, in the Commercial News, stated:- "Charterers and shippers are advised in their own interests that by reason of contravention of British regulations, the British government will impose all disabilities in their power on trading of the undermentioned vessels. . . ."

VICHY "CHOOSES ROAD TAKEN" SAYS DARLAN

Claims in Broadcast Hitler Has Not Asked for Fleet or Colonial Concessions

PETAIN PRAISED

Vichy, May 23—(AP)—Vice-Premier Jean Darlan in a broadcast speech today said Hitler had not asked for the French fleet or any colonial concessions during the current negotiations.

Darlan declared "Germany began the war alone and judges herself able to end it alone against any coalition."

"On the result of negotiations in progress," Darlan asserted, "directly depends the future of France. It is necessary for her to choose between life and death. The marshal and government have chosen life."

He read that "In June, 1940, the victor could have refused us an armistice, beaten us and wiped France off the map of the world

Believed German U-Boats Operating Farther West in Ocean than Week Ago

London, May 23 (CP)—Authoritative circles hinted today that waters near the coast of North America probably will become a battleground in the campaign against U-boats.

They said it is believed German undersea raiders are operating much farther west in the Atlantic than a few weeks ago on account of the United States naval patrol.

They added that in recent weeks there had been steady improvement of British escorts for ships crossing the Atlantic with supplies from North America.

RAF Heavily Bomb Rebels to Hold Post And Capture Tanks

Floods Between Euphrates And Tigris Rivers Hampering Movements Of Troops Beyond

QUIET AT BASRA

London, May 23—(CP)— Iraq rebel forces launched a counter-attack against British-held Fallujah, 40 miles west of Baghdad, Wednesday night and penetrated the town but British forces later attacked and re-occupied their original positions, an authoritative source said today.

Iraq infantry and light tanks attacked the British forces, driving them first from an outpost at Fallujah, this informant asserted. Then the Imperial forces, he added, counter-attacked after the Royal Air Force heavily bombed the Iraqis, regaining the post and captured some tanks.

Latest reports said British troops were moping up inside the town while the R.A.F. was pounding the retreating Iraqi.

Floods between the Euphrates and Tigris Rivers are hampering movements of troops beyond, it was reported.

Nazi planes, it was said, made some attacks on British-held Habbaniyah airdrome and caused slight damage.

The situation at Basra, at the head of the Persian Gulf was described as continuing quiet with some British civilian employees returning to their jobs.

The reconnaissance battalion being mobilized is the 18th Manitoba battalion from the following reserve cavalry units: Headquarters and No. I company from the 2nd Armored Car Regiment; one company from the Manitoba Mounted Rifles; one company from the 12th Manitoba Dragoons.

"A number of reserve units now are called upon to recruit to strength and take their place in the active force, mostly but not all to be included in the 4th Division, now being brought up to war establishment," the department said.

Other units now ordered to mobilize for active service and their parent units include these in Military District, No. 3, Kingston, Ont., 3rd Field Battery, R.C.A., from 3rd Field Battery, No. 6 Postal Unit (organized), No. 4 Dental Company.

Berlin Admits Ace Sub Commander Fails To Return

Berlin, May 23 —(AP)— The General High Command belatedly admitted today that its ace submarine commander, Guenther Prien, who sank the British battleship Royal Oak at Scapa Flow Oct. 14, 1939, has failed to return from his last action and "the loss of his submarine must be reckoned with."

"A submarine under Cmdr. Guenther Prien has failed to return from its last cruise against the enemy," the communique said.

"Loss of this boat appears certain. Cmdr. Prien, hero of Scapa Flow who has been decorated by the Fuehrer with oak leaves to the Knight's Cross of the Iron Cross in recognition of his outstanding merits, and his brave crew will live on in the hearts of all Germans."

Prien sank the Royal Oak at Scapa Flow Oct. 14, 1939, when the war was less than two months old.

The Nazi announcements confirm information given out April 30 in London. British authorities have refused to say whether Prien is dead or captured.

CLOVER PLANT HAS 4 AND 5-LEAVED STEMS IN CLUSTER

An unidentified lady from Thurlow Township walked into the editorial rooms of The Ontario Intelligencer yesterday with a handful of good luck.

She held a cluster of clover shoots which bore in some instances stems bearing four leaves. But the daddy of the good-luck omens was a brave little fellow which proudly displays five distinct leaves.

The office horseshoes and rabbit's feet, sailed through a convenient window and the green newcomer now stands in the place of honor.

LONSDALE RESIDENT SHOOTS WOLF CUB

It was all right for what he believed to be two wolves howling in the vicinity of his premises near Lonsdale, but when the pair became a little too inquisitive, D. J. McHenry decided it was time for action.

So the other night, when the animals began their nocturnal serenade quite close to his house, he seized his trusty shotgun and let go at the shadowy figures. Investigation revealed he had brought down what appeared to be a six-months'-old wolf cub. The mate disappeared, but has since returned to mourn its mate with weird cries.

McHenry brought the pelt of the animal to the office of County Treasurer James Haggerty, who forwarded it to Toronto for identification. If it is declared to be a wolf, McHenry will be twenty-five dollars richer.

Filming Of "There's Magic In Music" Described By Former Madoc Resident

Mrs. Alice Orr Lees Tells of Spending a Day on Location With Movie Troupe —Daughter of Former Madoc Couple Has Part in Picture

NOW AT THE BELLE

A graphic insight into the actual scenes behind the filming of the modern motion picture was given Master John O'Flynn, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. O'Flynn, East Bridge Street, in a letter written some time ago by a cousin, Mrs. Alice Orr Lees, Hollywood, California, in which she writes her observations while on location with the Paramount Studios during the "shooting" of the picture "There's Magic in Music" showing currently at the Belle theatre.

Mrs. Lees, is a former resident of Madoc, and is the daughter of the late Col. John Orr, of that village.

Further Madoc and district interest in the film is seen in the presence of Miss Kay Connor, 12-year-old daughter of Mrs. Chas. F. Connor, formerly of that village and now resident in Vancouver. Kay sings, and plays a violin in a child orchestra in the picture.

Mrs. Lees visited Belleville two years ago. Her husband is an engineer and was employed on the famous Boulder Dam when it was under construction.

The letter follows:

2034 Mayview Drive,
Hollywood, California.

Dear John:-

You have not written to me lately. Surely you have not forgotten Cousin Alice! I must send you some more cards of the movie star's homes.

Yesterday I was out in the mountains all day, with the Paramount studio, where they were taking a picture, so I'll tell you about it.

One little girl, Kay Connor, whose father and mother used to live in Madoc years ago, is in the picture, and her mother took me with them. Kay is twelve years old, and plays the violin and sings in the picture. We left here at seven in the morning and drove about one hundred miles towards and up in the mountains towards Mt. Lowe. When we arrived there the big busses and studio trucks were there. There were 109 children who are in an orchestra, none over twelve years old, with their mothers and chaperones. The big camera was on a little trolley with a platform and on this there were two directors, the script girl, camera man and man to announce the lighting. Then the star of the picture, Susanna Foster, a little girl of fifteen was there also a little boy of fifteen who has been here only a few months from Finland. The orchestra were put on a platform, ready to take the scene in the mountains. The camera moved in front of them, and Allan Jones an older actor, with that lovely tenor voice, came on the set, and sang with the orchestra and little Susanna Foster, the child star.

Several scenes were taken there, then all packed up and drove five miles further in the mountains to another location. We arrived there about twelve, and the catering trucks came along and unpacked tables and a full turkey dinner for everyone. We were served on trays, and everything from soup to the ice cream course, all at the expense of the studio.

When lunch was over, the camera men got ready again, in a beautiful location, overlooking the valley and mountains below. The dressing rooms of the stars were all lovely trailers, furnished like a room at home, each with their own name on. There were hair-dressers for the little girl's hair, wardrobe girls, who had cars full of clothes for each scene. They took another scene then with the children in orchestra and the little star Susanna. Just as the scene was half over an aeroplane flew over-head, the director shouted the word "cut" and all stopped, as they could not have the sound of the plane in the picture. It all had to be taken again.

When this scene was over, the teachers came out of their cars, and arranged long tables with benches, and the children had to have their lessons. It is against the law for children to be in pictures without so many hours of school every day, so when on location, the teachers are with them. They studied for two hours. While they were studying the older stars were taken, Allan Jones singing in different scenes, Margaret Lindsay, the older lady star here, although little Susanna is the big star of the picture. She is fifteen, and has one of the most beautiful voices I have ever heard in singing. Then too, one cannot hear a better voice than Allan Jones, who rates with Nelson Eddy in voice.

When school was out, the children again took their places in the orchestra, for another scene. It was beautiful there in the mountains. I took some snaps of the children in orchestra, which I will send to you as soon as I get them, so you can see how pictures are taken, John. I also took Susanna and the little Finnish boy. He lost all his people in the war, and a director has adopted him, and brought him to this country. He couldn't remember his lines several times, and the whole picture had to be stopped.

When the scene was over, doughnuts and cold milk were passed around to all the children again. They are treated royally. Each child in the orchestra gets $100.00 per week while the picture is in progress, which will take about eight weeks. Little Susanna gets $1500.00 a week, as she is the juvenile star. She told us this, as she had lunch with us. Little Kay Connor, whose mother I was with, has a small part, and plays in the orchestra as well.

The picture is to be called "There's Magic in Music." Be sure to see it John, as you would like this one.

We left for home about four, and got here by five-thirty. It was a lovely day. Next week end they go to Lake Arrrowhead for two days. Mrs. Connor has invited me to go along, and I may, as it is like one big picnic outdoors.

I'll send the snaps to you later, John. Soon Carol and you will be old enough to come to spend the summer with us here. Start putting pennies in your bank now for a trip, John. Will you?

Must get this in mail now.

Love to all.
Alice.

Belleville Plant Of Canada Cement Co. Receives Safety Trophy For Splendid Accident Prevention Work

The Belleville plant of the Canada Cement Company, Limited, has again received continent-wide recognition and the Portland Cement Association Safety Trophy for outstanding accident prevention work. In a meeting on Wednesday at Hotel Hershey, Hershey, Pa., cement company officials praised the splendid team-work and individual care by employees which made possible operation of the mill during 1940 without a single disabling injury. The Belleville plant is managed by Mr. J. H. Legate.

The Safety Trophy, given annually by the Portland Cement Association for the past seventeen years, goes to Portland Cement Mills which operated a full calendar year without an accident. The Belleville mill has won it for perfect safety records in five of the past fourteen years.

Member of Thousand-Day Club

The Belleville plant is a member of the Portland Cement Association's unique Thousand-Day Club of plants having to their credit more than 1,000 successive safe days of operation. Fifty-eight cement mills have earned the right to coveted membership in the club.

With the advantage of 29 years' experience in organized safety work makers of cement are demonstrating conclusively that loss of valuable production time and earnings by employees through injury can be prevented and that disruption and delays to production schedules can be controlled. Safety records such as have been made by the Belleville plant have won the Portland cement industry eminent leadership in industrial accident prevention and are helping make cement mills among the safest places in the world in which to work.

Magistrate Warns Against Carelessness In Handling Firecrackers

"It is to be hoped this will prove a lesson to all, especially with the approach of Victoria Day and the conventional firing of crackers and fireworks," warned His Worship Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in City Police Court today when Harry Neal, 39, of the R.C.A.F., was convicted of assault.

The case arose after a firecracker in the hands of Neal, had exploded in the face of a young lady in a downtown restaurant earlier this week. The young lady told Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., she was of the opinion the incident had been the result of a prank and that no serious injuries had resulted. A fine of $5.00 and all costs involved in the matter were assessed against Neal, including a doctor's bill of $5.00, necessitated when the young lady was treated following the exploding of the cracker in her face. The eyesight was not affected, she told the court.

"Firecrackers are dangerous playthings and should be treated as such. It is fortunate no serious injury resulted in this case, but in any event I would like to caution parents at this time regarding the safety of life and limb where fireworks are concerned over the forthcoming holiday week-end," stated Magistrate Butler as a final caution to all citizens to refrain from carelessness while handling fireworks.

POLICE COURT

Albert Ireland and John Liebenguth, two members of the Trenton R.C.A.F., appeared in city police court before Magistrate E. J. Butler this morning charged with breaking and entering the storehouse at the rear of Pappas billiard room, Front Street with the intent to commit theft. Both men pleaded not guilty and subsequently the charges were reduced to disorderly conduct.

"I am satisfied there was no intent in the matter and am entering no evidence", revealed Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C. His Worship immediately dismissed the charges.

On the disorderly conduct charges, however, the pair pleaded guilty and P. C. Arnott, who investigated the matter, told the court he and P. C. Ellis had apprehended the two men at the rear of the storehouse after a door had been broken open. The men offered little resistance, the officer added. A fine of $5.00 and costs was imposed in each case. F.O. Hammond, A.P.M. for the Trenton R.C.A.F. Base, appeared as the prisoners' friend.

To Be Examined

Charles Anderson, Frankford, appeared for sentence after having pleaded guilty to the theft of $85 admittedly taken from his employer, John Trudeau. R. D. Arnott, K.C., appeared for the accused and after consultation with Mr. Donnan, Anderson was further remanded to be subsequently examined by Dr. Doyle, Provincial Psychiatrist.

As the police continue to prosecute violations of the city traffic ordinances, Jack Whiting paid $5.00 and costs after being convicted of speeding and James Cornell Jr., was assessed a similar amount for failing to produce his individual driver's permit. Two inebriates paid the minimum fines after being convicted of intoxication.

CANNIFTON ROAD BARN IS BURNED

Horse Stabled in Structure Falls Prey to the Flames

Fire of an unknown origin which had gained considerable headway before being discovered, completely destroyed a large frame barn, the property of Mr. Nathaniel Vanmeer, Cannifton Road, at midnight on Thursday evening. A horse stabled in the barn also fell prey to the flames as the heat of the fire made it impossible to liberate the animal. A number of hens and chickens penned in the barn managed to make their escape from the building.

Apparently starting in the rear of the building, which was situated some distance from the street, the fire ate its way toward the street end of the building and when first noticed the entire interior of the 20 by 40 ft. frame building was a raging holocaust. So far advanced was the fire when the alarm was rung in to the fire department that when the reels were being taken from the fire station, members of the department could see the flames of the burning barn over the roofs of other buildings.

Tinder dry and built of highly inflammable lumber, the burning structure threw out a terrific heat and showers of sparks kept the department busy extinguishing fires started on nearby roofs. Two residences situated directly across Cannifton road from the burning barn took afire as sparks lighted the shingles but four leads of hose totalling 1,400 feet, together with numerous hand pumps, prevented the flames from getting out of hand, and the already doomed barn was the only building to suffer extensive damage.

A horse which had been stabled in the barn, became frantic from the heat of the flames, broke loose from his halter and crowded against the barn door just as the firemen arrived on the scene but the barn was already a raging holocaust and the terrific heat thrown out by the fire made it impossible to get nearer than thirty feet to the flames. A nearby resident humanely put the suffering animal out of its misery with two charges from a shotgun.

One of the largest barns in the city the total loss to the building was well over $1,000, partly covered by insurance.

BBC LISTENERS HEAR WAR TALK IN 30 TONGUES

Whole Town in Quieter Part of Britain Devoted to Radio's Comings and Goings

By LOUIS V. HUNTER

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London (CP)— The battle of the airways, unspectacular but nonetheless vital to the outcome of the war, goes on ceaselessly in wartime Europe. From the Axis countries alone emanate daily more than 1,000,000 words of propaganda.

One of the biggest jobs of the British Broadcasting Corporation now is listening to this flow of words through the ether. From the mass is picked a daily digest of 50,000 words of items considered significant and which may provide material for Britain's specialists in analysis of enemy propaganda.

Hidden away at a reception station somewhere in England, the BBC Monitoring Service is on the [illegible] night and day. More than 100 [illegible] and women of a score of nationalities sit with headphones glued to their ears recording the broadcasts of 40 countries in 30 languages, including Berber and Albanian. The "report" is recorded mechanically and double-checked for accuracy.

To Suit the Field

Propaganda specialists sift the digest to reveal the inconsistencies of argument and supposed facts used in Axis propaganda. They are able to show—and the BBC demonstrates nightly in its Listening Post broadcast to North America—that what the Nazis say to the Americans may be vastly different from what they say to Britain, to France, to the Arabs and to India.

The monitoring staff includes a former member of the Austrian diplomatic corps, a Russian zoologist, experts in politics and economics, a Finnish sea captain and a Russian prince. It is upon the work of these monitors that the many government departments depend for much of their knowledge of what is going on all over the world.

The BBC has practically taken over a rural town in one of the most beautiful parts of England and this wartime community is filled with all kinds of people doing all kinds of jobs. There is a hut for the Middle Eastern service, another where Indians prepare broadcasts for that vast subcontinent. The monitors occupy a couple and the editorial staff of the monitoring service has one that resembles the city room of a newspaper.

In a nearby mansion are offices and studios. In one studio Spanish nationals may be broadcasting a play to their country. On one floor news letters will be in the progress of preparation for Burma, the Malay States, Thai or Ceylon. A couple of miles away is another impressive house where programs for Canada and the United States originate.

Cosmopolitan

Britons moving about the shaded paths of the town are a common sight. So are the Indians in their flowing robes. There are Egyptians, Arabs, Greeks, Italians. One will meet Canadians and Americans. A turbaned Moroccan officer of the Free French Army broadcasts news bulletins in an African dialect.

There have been smaller "invasions" in other parts of Britain. One of these took place at a seaside resort in the West Country when the BBC took over two hotels The rooms of one were converted into offices and the other into a hostel for the use of artists and other BBC employees.

Like the newspapers covering the war on Britain's home front, BBC observers have gone into the "front lines" to describe for listeners in quieter areas aerial battles over Dover. During one broadcast from Dover a recording unit was machine - gunned by a German fighter plane. The raider was brought down by anti-aircraft fire.

Widely Dispersed

The BBC staff has been dispersed widely so enemy action cannot interrupt entirely its varied activities. Likely as not, a girls' college, given up for the duration, may shelter a unit. It may be in a London theatre, to all appearances deserted. It may be a camp hidden in some wooded country area.

On the bare stage of some theatre in which theatrical greats have played their parts, microphones may have been set up and a group of Canadian or Newfoundland soldiers may be taking part in a broadcast to North America. They play to an audience of empty seats and a few sleeping persons at the back of the auditorium—staff employees snatching some sleep before resuming work.

A significant change has been made in an old BBC custom. Formerly the announcer of a news program was anonymous. Now he gives his name before it is read. Wartime listeners at home must be able to recognize immediately the outhentic voice of a British broadcaster—just in case.

Day and night, under almost incessant bombing. BBC programs have gone on the air without halt in 34 languages, carrying to listeners abroad and at home Britain's position in the great conflict. Seventy-eight news bulletins with a total wordage of 250,000 are broadcast daily. Every day there are 85 hours of broadcasting time.

SUMMONS EMPIRE TO NEW EFFORTS IN WORLD'S GOOD

Never Grander Opportunity, Says Viscount Bledisloe, in Empire Day Message and Youth Will Fashion a New World

London, May 23 (CP)—The British Empire never had a graver responsibility thrust upon it than it has today but never have there been grander opportunities for displaying those outstanding qualities which built the Empire and alone can maintain it, said the Viscount Bledisloe, president of the Empire Day Movement, in an Empire Day message.

Viscount Bledisloe (Rt. Hon. Sir Charles Bathurst) one of Britain's most prominent agriculture leaders, is also a barrister, was parliamentary secretary to the Ministry of Food during the First Great War and governor-general of New Zealand, 1930-35.

The Viscount's Empire Day message follows:—Let us this year celebrate Empire Day as never before, for the British Empire, aided by her valiant Allies and buttressed by the practical sympathy of the United States of America, is standing out as the stronghold of humanity against cruelty, injustice, tyranny and falsehood—an impregnable fortress based not upon hatred and selfish ambition but upon humanity and righteousness.

"It is against the Powers of Darkness that we are fighting and the fate of the Empire, and with it that of civilization, are at stake. We must all courageously play our part, however humble, in achieving victory, lest freedom should perish from the earth.

"Those who planned the downfall of the British Empire recked not of the unquenchable spirit of the British race, the staunch loyalty of people of different races and colors owing allegiance to the British crown and the unshakeable solidarity of the British Empire. It is above all this unity of the British peoples in the hour of crisis which has brought confident hope to all lovers of freedom and growing dismay to our enemies.

"Let us remember with pride the great exploits of our seamen, soldiers and airmen drawn from every part of the British Commonwealth, as well as the steadfastness and courage of the civilian population in Great Britain, the heart of the Empire. False to the gibes of her enemies and faithful to her own glorious traditions, she has demonstrated that the metal of her sons and daughters is as true as in days of yore.

Fighting For Mankind

"But the war is not yet over and unflagging effort, self-sacrfice and endurance are still demanded of us in repelling the assault upon all that makes the life of a free people worth living.

"The British Empire is fighting not for aggrandisement or for material gain, but for its own soul and that of mankind. Its struggle will have been in vain, unless we are determined that when victory comes we will to the best of our power, strive to remedy those inherent defects and social injustices which provoke strife both among nations and between their fellow-citizens. Thus the peoples of the world, led by those of the Empire, will enjoy hereafter that tranquillity and confident security whose only sure foundation is fair dealing between nation and nation and between man and man.

"I appeal especially to the young people of the Empire who, when the present upheaval is past, will be called upon to fashion a new world. Yours will be the task of winning the peace. Do your bit, be it great or small, to ensure that the Empire shall ever be the symbol and example of all that makes for human happiness, peace and progress. Steel your hearts and minds to the brave resolve that never again shall ruthless ambition and the cruel lust of power destroy the freedom of mankind, the peace of the home and the happiness and safety of its children.

Part of Youth

"We have no need to be ashamed of the story of the Empire, but its greatest chapter has yet to be written, and it is for the youth of the Empire, with their boundless opportunities, buoyant hope and unshaken faith in God to write it, for the benefit of the whole human race.

"Let us remember that it is neither wealth nor might, but character, which has ever been the deciding factor in our hour of destiny, and make it crystal clear that it illumines and strengthens all our lives."

MR. CHURCHILL A GREAT LEADER

Of all men, Prime Minister Churchill is able to give the truest picture of events. Himself a great correspondent as well as a statesman, he is realistic enough to depict things as they are. He is a great leader in wartime. He is cautious in success and confident in great issues. Last June he showed his greatness as he placed the situation on the Continent before the British people. His trust and faith in the people were not disappointed. They turned back the air assaults of the Hun on Britain and held the world for democracy.

On Thursday in the British Commons he described the situation in Crete. "It is a grim battle that is being fought, one in which our side has no air support because they have no airdromes—not because they have no airplanes—while the other side have very little or no artillery or tanks and neither side has any means of retreat. It is a desperate, grim battle and I certainly will send the wishes and encouragement of this House, and express the approval of this House, to these men who are fighting what is undoubtedly a most important battle which will affect the whole course of the campaign in the Mediterranean."

Who cannot read in these words, his confidence and faith?

VIOLETS FROM THE QUEEN

Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth has given wild violets to the mess of a Canadian military unit in Britain. When she was in Canada just two years ago on Their Majesties' tour she was presented with roots of Canadian wild violets. In the meantime these plants have been treasured and cared for and now Her Majesty in her gift shows the Canadian people how much she has thought of those happy days in Canada and how deeply she holds the loyalty and love of the Canadian people.

It was a kindly deed so rich in what it means.

GERMANY A MODERN MINOTAUR

Thousands of years ago according to Greek legend there was in Crete a monster with the body of a man and the head of a bull which fed on human flesh. Theseus, king of Athens, decided to liberate Athens from the terrible curse of having to supply seven youths and seven maidens for this monster. He went with the victims and with the aid of Ariadne, daughter of the king of Crete, who gave him a thread for use in the labyrinth or maze, found his way out after killing the minotaur. So he freed Crete of the savage beast.

New York Times points out that the oddly mythological character with which modern weapons invest the ancient art of war. "Again Vulcan and Mercury and Pegasus seem to walk the bewildered earth, not to speak of Pluto and the shades who took on the shapes of men. So it is reassuring to know that the attempts of storm troopers to storm Crete in the guise of gods—from New Zealand—did not fool either the natives or the British garrison."

From 1939 to now there has been a real monster at large, the German wolf which would devour civilization if it could.

But there is a defender standing ready against the modern beast which tries to invade Crete. There are British troops and the New Zealanders with their Greek allies.

LATE COL. J. H. WOODS

The death of Col. J. H. Woods of Calgary, president of the Calgary Herald and past president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, leaves a vacancy in Canadian public life. Col. Woods some years ago visited Belleville as the guest speaker at the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce. He at the time was hear of the Canadian Chamber.

Six years ago he received the honor of being named a Companion of the Order of St. Michael's and St. George as a mark of royal appreciation of the patriotic work which had been a pleasure for him to perform.

As a newspaperman and as a member of public bodies he was able to render a worthwhile service to his Dominion.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

Geo Agnew

A GALLANT FRENCHMAN

Meet Joseph Theodore Paul Emile Lauzon.

A member of the R.C.A.F., Trenton base, the young Frenchman is one of a family of twenty-seven who formerly lived on a 300 acre farm near Calais, France. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Lauzon, 62 and 60 years of age, are now believed to be living near Paris.

Joseph doesn't know where they are. He gets letters from them "when they come."

"All the boys in our family except Geneve, who is a monk, joined the French Army before the war," he said "I was 14 then and 15 of my brothers joined at the same time. After Dunkirk we went to England. Some of them are there now—eight or nine are in Canada."

Sixteen in Uniform.

Eleven brothers are in the air force; five in the army. Last week he had a letter from his mother. It was covered with Red Cross delivery stamps.

All his brothers can play some kind of musical instrument. Laurent, now training in Camp Borden, has mastered 22.

Joseph is "tickled" with the pay he gets in the air force. "It is quite different from the seven cents a day we received in the French army," he said. "There we had compulsory service at 14 years of age. Many teen-aged boys were in the front line along the Belgian border."

"The French government was rotten with Communism, that is why France fell." he declared. "We didn't even get the ammunition Britain sent over to help us out. Somebody in the government side-tracked supplies so they never reached the front."

Plenty of Names.

The young Frenchman did not hesitate to write down the list of names in the Lauzon family. "We had lots of them," he smiled. "I have four myself." The ages puzzled him a bit, but he did the best he could. Here they are:—John Noel, 32; Laurent, 31; Harry, Louise and Dennis, 29; and Lucille, Jean Clare and Georges, 27, triplets; Emile and Jacques, 25; Henriette. 24; Joseph, 23; Candide, 21; Calore, 20; Pierre, Antoine, Napoleon, Oliva, Joachim, Osias, Marcel and Geneve.

Survives Torpedo Attack.

"There are five men out of two sets of triplets in our family now serving Britain," he said proudly.

He related the story of his surviving a torpedo attack on the Atlantic while en route to Canada from Britain.

"We left a channel port on a French steamship, with other ships in convoy. About two hundred miles out the convoy was attacked in the afternoon. There was a terrible noise and the ship shook when something struck the stern," he said.

"I believe it was an aerial torpedo, because it struck close to the waterline near the rudder. The officers said it was just a torpedo and let it go at that. There was no confusion. the wreckage was cleared up and the men started immediately to effect repairs. We were stalled for a week while the ship was getting fixed. The trip to Canada took nearly a month and a half."

Believevs in Navy.

"I saw enough of the war to know that the Germans will never invade England," he said. "The navy is the answer."

A wistful look came over his face as he mentioned the contents of the last letter he had received from his mother in occupied France.

"We would give all we have gladly to be in Canada," she wrote. "It must be wonderful to live there."

He hears from some of his brothers occasionally. "The others may be dead for all I know," he said.

A German bomb debunked one of London's haunted houses. Firemen traced the peculiar noises that attracted many psychic visitors and some ghost hunters to a defective water system capable of making sounds ranging from a foghorn to a whisper.

Dutch East Indies tobacco growers now are shipping most of their crop to New York.

BIG EVENTS

These are the trifles, looming large:
The day we have their child in charge.

The running up and down the stair
That marks the joy of "taking care."

The happy walk along the street,
And all the people that we meet.

The people kind who bend to see
How beautiful a child is he.

And say in solemn way and wise:
"My dear, he has his mother's eyes!"
Or with a most ecstatic grin:
"That surely is the father's chin."

The grocer coming from his store
To help the carriage through the door.

Then time to feed the little chap
And put him down to take his nap.

And wondering, as the time goes by,
If it could be you heard him cry.

You think these trifling joys and small:
We think them great and best of all.

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

A Little Truth, Gentlemen

New York, May 23—It seems to me there ought to be something like the S.E.C. to protect the rights of the public against consciously fraudulent or misleading statements of organizations, trade unions, corporations, or any other private bodies that demand political action on the part of the public.

* * *

Newspapers are carrying an advertisement signed by the southern coal operators' wage conference. This advertisement set forth the reasons why the southern coal operators refuse to agree to John L. Lewis' "outrageous mine workers' contract."

It says that "by the very words of this contract John L. Lewis will become the dictator of this country."

It says that "the so-called differential clause is not, as the public has been mistakingly led to believe the sole reason or the chief reason why the southern operators have refused to sign this contract."

The real reasons are, they say: 1. "That John L. Lewis demands the right to call unlimited 'memorial periods'; 2. to change the entire system of mining; 3. that all the mines be shut off at one time, for a yearly vacation period, thereby completely stopping the flow of industry's life-blood, coal; 4. to have the right to strike any and every mine at any time on his own will or pleasure."

These are the reasons given in the advertisement for refusing to sign this contract, a refusal that John L. Lewis says will mean a strike. The southern coal operators want to save America from dictatorship. And readers of the advertisement are told that they should write and telegraph their Congressmen since only their voices can keep this country a free country as it has been for 165 years.

* * *

Now this column holds no brief for the general political views of John L. Lewis as anyone who has consistently read it knows. But nevertheless, this advertisement is misleading and contributes nothing to improve relations between labor and industry or clarify the issue for a confused public. I should like to take up the points one by one.

1. "Unlimited 'memorial periods.'"

It is a tradition in many coal mines, particularly those manned by workers of Welsh origin, to hold a day of mourning every year for comrades who have been killed in mine disasters. It was originally an old Welsh church custom, and it is almost an exact parallel to the custom in New England harbor and fishing towns to hold a day of mourning annually for men lost at sea. Everyone who saw the film Captains Courageous saw this custom depicted. The miners now want to extend the mining memorial custom to the whole Appalachian area. And "unlimited" means that the day is not set in the contract. It might be the day of a funeral!

The coal miners of this country are not Communist and not idiots, and they know perfectly well what public opinion would do if they began to use a religious custom as a means of holding up all the industries of this country.

2. "To change the whole system of mining."

The contract signed two years ago called for a joint study to be made by operators and miners on various mining mechanization systems with a view to stabilization of employment. The miners wish to go on with this research, and make adaptations from it.

3. "All the mines to shut off at one time, for a yearly vacation period, thereby completely stopping the flow of industry's life-blood."

The miners asked for two weeks' annual vacation with pay. The contract agrees to a 20-dollar token payment in lieu of vacation, and cessation of all work from June 28 to July 7 of this year. Inasmuch as two week-ends occur in this time, and July 3rd and 4th are almost invariably holidays in the mines, the 3rd being usually called "Fishing Day," this terrible shutdown that is supposed to threaten the whole industry is a matter of 3 and 3 1-2 days. Miners work at most 180 days a year, and in that time produce all the coal this country has ever needed.

4. "To have the right to strike any and every mine at any time."

Originally, and at the suggestion of the employers, all contracts contained clauses that encouraged the workers to close down mines that failed to live up to their contracts with the union, and therefore threatened unfair competition to operators who kept faith. Coal mining is a highly competitive industry, and the operators were willing to sign with the union only on condition that the union police recalcitrants, so that the coal of chislers could not enter the market at a lower price. In fact, this is called the "police power clause."

Actually, as nearly as I can make out, the real fight back of this advertisement is between the northern and the southern operators, out of which Mr. Lewis has drawn an advantage. Last winter, Mr. Lewis and the northern and southern operators agreed to a wage increase; but not to bring up the matter of differential wages in northern and southern mines. Mr. Lewis asked for a dollar increase as a basis for bargaining with the northern operators, and Mr. O'Neill of the northern operators agreed to pay it if Mr. Lewis would get rid of the differential. The real charge of the southern operators is that the northern operators double-crossed them.

They, of course, don't like dropping the differential and making wages uniform for the same work throughout the country. And the police power cause—just the same kind of clause that the stronger southern operators were more than willing to have as a weapon against the weaker ones—can now be invoked by Mr. Lewis against all the southern operators if they try to get out of the differential agreement.

This, to the best of my research, is what is really back of this advertisement calling on the people of the United States to write and wire to Congress to save the nation from dictatorship.

Hearst Magazines Ordered To Cease Certain Statements

Washington, May 23.—(AP)—The Federal Trade Commission announced yesterday an order directing Hearst Magazines, Inc., to "cease and desist" from alleged misrepresentations in its magazines and other publications concerning the quality and guaranty of products advertised for sale.

The order was directed against the corporation, its officers, directors or representatives and concerned, in addition to advertisements in its publications, the issuance or authorization of various seals of approval, emblems, shields or other insignia.

The Commission noted that Good Housekeeping Magazine was a wholly-owned subsidiary of Hearst magazines, Inc., which maintains departments known as good housekeeping bureau and good housekeeping institute for testing products which may be advertised.

The Commission said it had found that the corporation represented that "all products, services or commercial offerings advertised in Good Housekeeping are guaranteed" by it and that this reference to a guaranty had a "tendency to mislead readers" into believing that it was an unlimited guaranty.

Testimony showed, the F.T.C. said, that while products were tested before seals of approval were issued, 'such tests were generally not sufficient to assure the fulfillment of the claims made for such products". The Commission described the use and authorization of "many different forms of seals, shields, emblems and insignia" as "confusing to the average reader," and said that it tended to mislead purchasers and readers into believing that all products so marked has been adequately tested and were guaranteed.

WHOSE OX IS GORED

"It makes a difference whose ox is gored."

How often that odd saying crops up in everyday speaking and writing.

Yet how few persons who say "It depends upon whose ox is gored" know the source of the oft-used expression.

It is believed to have originated in a fable in "The American Spelling Book," first published in 1817 by Noah Webster of dictionary fame.

There is a copy of this interesting volume in the rare book division of the Library of Congress in Washington.

The title page of this book reads: "The American Spelling Book, by Noah Webster, Esq. Copyright, 1817, by Noah Webster. The revised impression, with the latest corrections. Published by W. W. Worsley, Lexington, Ky., 1823."

On page 98 appears a crude woodcut engraving depicting a lawyer and client.

This quaint woodcut engraving is followed by "Fable VIII, which is entitled "The Partial Judge."

The complete text of the fable is as follows:

"A Farmer came to a neighboring Lawyer, expressing great concern for an accident which he said had just happened. One of your Oxen, continued he, has been gored by an unlucky Bull of mine, and I should be glad to know how I am to make you reparation. Thou art a very honest fellow replied the Lawyer, and wilt not think it unreasonable that I expect one of my Oxen in return. It is no more than justice, quoth the Farmer, to be sure; but what did I say?—I mistake— It is your Bull that has killed one of my Oxen. Indeed! says the Lawyer, that alters the case; I must inquire into the affair —and if—And if! said the Farmer —the business I find would have been concluded without an if, had you been as ready to do justice to others as to exact it from them."

Stirling and District

District Farmers To Organize Local Branch Of Federation

Stirling, May 22—(Special)—An open meeting to all farmers of the county will take place in the City Hall, Belleville, in the near future at which proposals will be set forth to organize a local branch of the Dominion Federation of Agriculture. This organization which is gaining Dominion-wide strength serves to affiliate existing clubs into a centralized group with strengthened representation at both Provincial and Federal governments for the general improvement of farming conditions. Problems of every nature will be given careful study by the executive body and their recommendation sent forth to the proper authorities.

Dominion President Will Attend

The above mentioned meeting, which is slated for early next month, will draw interested agriculturists from all parts of the county and the merits of the organization from a constructive standpoint will be presented by Mr. H. H. Hannam, president of the Dominion Federation of Agriculture, along with the secretary of the Provincial governing body of the organization, Mr. V. S. Milburn.

The organization, which has met with wonderful growth throughout the Dominion, had its beginning in Western Ontario and many county organizations have since been organized. Western Canada has receiverd the idea completely and progress is reported in all parts of the western provinces.

Purpose of Federation

Throughout the County of Hastings, the present time almost every branch of agriculture is represented by strong organization and the advantage of their existence has on many occasions been thoroughly worthwhile. The Federation of Agriculture adds new strength to their being in that common problems of farmers in all parts of the Dominion are bracketed and dealt with by a more powerful executive. Each of the existing organizations will continue to function as at present but leaders will be associated with the federation as executive workers, directors and leaders. Should the proposed plan be accepted bp the farmers of Hastings County, a County Board of Directors will be set up and the probable officers will be drawn from the executive committees of such organizations as Hastings County Cattle Breeders Association, Hastings County Crop Improvement Association, Hastings County Cheese Producers and Fruit Growers.

Dairying Increases Production

That Hastings County farmers are putting forth splendid effort to increase production as their war effort is revealed by the fact that according to Dairy Instructor George Pollard the output in the cheese industry thus far shows a 25% increase over the same period last year.

Rural Schools Enter Improvement Competition

Five rural schools of Hastings County have entered the Provincial Rural School. Improvement Competition sponsored by the Ontario Horticultural Association. A beautiful trophy donated by Mr. J. E. Carter of Guelph, Past President of the Ontario Horticultural Association to be awarded each year to the rural school showing the greatest improvement in beautification of grounds, etc. In addition to this Sidney Junior Farmers Association has offered a splendid trophy for local competition and will give cash prizes for first and second winners in the competition.

Five Schools Entered

Five schools are entered in the county competition and are as follows: S. S. 2 Sidney Avondale; S. S. 7 Sidney Centenary; S. S. 13 Sidney Wallbridge; S. S. 23 Sidney 4th Line; S. S. 7 Thurlow. Awards are based on the following score and only work done between September 1st., 1941, and the time of judging, which must not be later than June 20th., will be considered. Scoring points are given for clean-up, repairs, painting, grading and levelling and seeding lawns and play areas, new planting of trees, shrubs and other plants, cutting of weeds, lawn mowing and general care.

The winners of the county competition will be known soon after the judging date, June 20th., and become elegible for the Provincial competition.

Picton and District

Picton, May 22—An outstanding program to arouse interest and enthusiasm in the forthcoming Victory Loan Campaign in Prince Edward County was outlined at a meeting of the Publicity Committee, at county headquarters in Picton library building, Wednesday afternoon.

Band concerts, parades, rallies, special church services, Victory dances, special displays and decorations, a rally for women, flights of planes over town and district, are among the features planned.

A huge thermometer will be erected in Picton and twice a week this register will show the total subscribed. Mayor N. McKibbon and Douglas Farley will be responsible for a ceremony when each new standing is recorded.

The drive will open on Saturday evening, May 31, with a parade and concert by a Belleville band.

To arouse and foster a spirit of competition between towns and cities, in making the best records in sales of Victory Loan Bonds, a Pledge Flag will be received by each community for the opening of the campaign on June 2nd. This flag contains a Union Jack in the corner with a Royal Blue Torch centering the white field. It will have a red border. This flag will be raised with suitable ceremony in front of county headquarters on June 2nd.

When the municipality has reached its quota of bond sales, an honour pennant, blue with a white torch in the centre, will be flown beneath the Pledge Flag. To be able to fly this Honour Flag will be a honour sought by every community with a competition to see which can secure the first one.

A women's committee composed of leaders of all women's organizations has been joined and one plan is to have a rally when Dorothy Thompson, famed columnist, will broadcast. This address would be heard by radio, followed by a patriotic program.

Sunday, June 8th, is to be Victory Loan Day of Prayer Sunday in all town and county churches when special features are planned. Lay speakers will be heard in many churches. Rev. J. B. Creeggan and Rev. S. R. Foreman are chairman and vice-chairman, and will arrange a program which will include repetition of the pledge being used in the Torch ceremony.

Sunday, June 8th will see a great Torch Parade in Picton in the afternoon under the direction of S. G. Lockyer and Russell Gardiner, with schools, airforce, army, Canadian Legion, Girl Guides, Boy Scouts, Red Cross, I.O.D.E., and others taking part. A program is to be given at the armouries following the parade and a scroll to be included in those sent to Prime Minister Churchill will be presented. A representative committee is to take part in the ceremony when the bomber stops at Belleville with its torch.

A caravan of floats depicting Canada's war effort, and given by industries manufacturing war materials, will tour the province and if possible will visit Prince Edward County.

Other Victory dances and rallies will be held on various days and speakers will address as many organizations as possible. Band concerts are to be given each Saturday night during the campaign and a celebration is planned when this county "goes over the top."

These plans were outlined by J. M. Hartwick, Wellington, vice-chairman of the drive in Prince Edward County. Mr. Hartwick is donating full time to this work.

The Publicity Committee is composed of ten separate committees, with Philip Dodds as chairman, Ira Burd vice-chairman for Wellington and Douglas Farley for Picton.

Other chairmen and vice-chairmen are parades, S. G. Lockyer, Russell Gardiner; schools, Carson Hubbs, Inspector A. F. Brown; decorations, Bert Burns, Jesse Mason, Harry Jolley; donated advertising, Dayton Wark, Ralph Warren; special features, C. A. Newman, Mayor McKibbon; Victory Sunday, Rev. Creeggan and Rev. S. R. Foreman; thermometer, Mayor N. McKibbon, Douglas Farley essay contest, P. Dodds, D. Farley, J. E. Andoff, Inspector Brown, Fred Vancott, Milton Snider; press, L. B. Calvan, W. Clow.

Each committee will include leading citizens in all parts of the county so that every district will be playing its part.

Organizer Douglas Bellinger stated that rallies would be held in every community. He stressed the fact that every person is called upon to do his bit. It is desired to have every section of the county decorated and taking part in the events. He stressed the need of supporting the drive in order to achieve victory.

Details of the organization are being perfected. Each committee will receive typed instructions as to what is expected of them. The executive and sales and other committees have been set up and include leading citizens of town and county. Their workers are now being chosen and will swing into action on June 2nd.

West Huntingdon

West Huntingdon—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hammond and family entertained the members of the Young People's Union of the United Church on Friday evening for their regular meeting. Marguerite Elliott and Irene Elliott were in charge of the musical part of devotional program which included Bible reading with explanation and prayer. Mr. Colin Donald gave the address entitled "Government". Readings were given by Arthur Hassall, Russell Sills and Geo. Ashley. A vocal duet with guitar accompaniment was given by Marion and Phyllis Hammond. Miss Theda Moorcroft directed a period of recreation and lunch was served to the group by Mrs. Hammond and daughters.

30th Wedding Anniversary

A host of friends extend good wishes to an esteemed couple of the community, Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Burke on the occasion of their 30th wedding anniversary which they celebrated recently.

Endeavors Class Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the Endeavors Class was held at Mr. and Mrs. John Moorcroft's home on Tuesday evening. Mr. Clifford Green very capably presided over the interesting program and was assisted in the worship service by Mrs. V. Barragar who offered prayer and Mrs. Florence Stewart who presented the Scripture lesson. Readings were given by Mrs. Foster Wilson and Mrs. Frank Hammond. Mrs. W. J. Fitchett gave a solo. Mr. Harold Ashley gave the special address which was heard with rapt attention. The roll call was answered by each member using the class motto, telling what kind of a class the Endeavors Class would be if every member were just like them. The honor of giving the best answer was given to Mr. Sandy McCurdy.

Following the business period lunch was served and a vote of thanks tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Moorcroft.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Schrader and family of Gelert were recent visitors at the parsonage.

The Young People of Fuller United Church met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Brough on Tuesday evening.

Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Fitchett were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dafoe of Carmel, Mr. and Mrs. Carman Dafoe.

Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Smith of Madoc were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Burke.

Mrs. Ed Welsh of Moira was a Monday guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Sarles.

Mr. Percy Reynolds was in Peterboro on Tuesday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Sandy McCurdy, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thompson and Miss Jean Thompson attended the graduation exercises of Belleville General Hospital on Thursday evening. Miss Mae McCurdy who gave the Valedictory address is a niece of Mr. and Mrs. McCurdy.

Mrs. Effie Wilson and Arthur were Tuesday guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Preston of Havelock.

Residents along the Ridge Road were much annoyed when they recently noticed that another power line will soon be under construction a short distance from the one erected last winter. The farmers through this section have small farms and the huge towers, most of them built in the centre of their best land, is a great nuisance. Radios also are not giving as good reception.

Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Sarles, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Elliott Mary and Reg were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Sarles of Ridge Road.

Friends of Mr. Melville Donnan will be pleased to know that he has recovered from his recent illness.

The farmers have sure got to speed up this year, from close observation it has been revealed that the alfalfa meadows will in the course of another week or ten days be ready to be harvested. The recent showers and warm weather have promoted rapid growth. Some of these fields in the Campbellford area have already been harvested where the hay has been hauled to a factory for manufacture into mill feeds. It is estimated that alfalfa hay cut early is much richer in protein than that left a few days longer.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Campion and Arthur, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Lawrence of Marmora were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Goldie McInroy.

Recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hammond were Margaret McGee, Margaret Goodfellow and Marjorie Hammond of Thomasburg.

Mrs. Peter McInroy is visiting with her daughter Mrs. Albert Campion of Anson.

Marion Hammond spent the week end with Miss Jane Gay.

Mr. Angus Farrell and Mary visited friends at Toronto and Niagara over the week end.

Our Pledge

by G. L. CREED, R.C.A.F.

We Shall Not Falter Or Fail ...
Though all the Powers of Hell on Earth assail ...
Though from once friendly skies swift-winged Death
Spew nameless Horror with each fiery breath ...
Though Blood and Tears be all we have to spend—
We Shall Go On To The End!

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

We Shall Not Falter Or Fail ...
Though terror-riven hearts around us quail
As Evil, monstrous, shakes with iron tread
Our ancient Landmarks, shelt'ring Honoured Dead
Whose very dust commands us to defend ...
We Shall Go On To The End!

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

We Shall Not Falter Or Fail ...
Though, to all eyes but ours, the Holy Grail
Of Freedom be by hopelessness obscured ...
Ours is the Vision—nor may we be lured
From this, our Birthright, easier paths to wend.
We Shall Go On To The End!

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

We Shall Not Falter Or Fail ...
Though all our struggles seem without avail ...
Though all our treasure go to pay the Price,
Leaving but Life itself to sacrifice ...
Though from us all but Faith the foe may rend—
We Shall Go On To The End!

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

We Shall Not Falter Or Fail ...
Though hearts bereft shall ache ... though lips grow pale
That murmured with a twisted smile, "Farewell!" ...
Such hearts shall still hold Freedom's Citadel—
Such lips, grim-set, the Tyrant's Doom portend ...
We Shall Go On To The End!

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

We Shall Not Falter Or Fail ...
Let those who follow after tell the tale
Of how, for all men's Freedom, free men fought,
Selling their lives and liberties at naught—
Deeming that Freedom all else must transcend ...
We Shall Go On To The End!

A RATHER routine state of affairs may be predicted for this day, judging by the weak transits of the ruling planets. There is some danger of trivial anxieties or problems due to subtle, covert, or treacherous acts of a very underhand nature. These while not being entirely portentous yet a decisive degree of wariness or dractic action in weeding out such duplicity would be profitable. The social, domestic or affectional relations are due to promote happiness, enjoyment and other personal advantages.

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a rather pleasant year, with social, domestic and affectional or artistic interests claiming their energies rather than business, which may move in routine grooves. In all relations there is omen of danger through duplicity, perfidy, under cover or subtle methods inciting small worries, perplexities and mental confusion. With alertness to such intrigues and deceptions there should be a pleasant year.

A child born on this day may have many talents of a cultural nature, with music, poetry, literature and mysticism having strong appeal to its gentle soul.

AT THE BELLE

"The Devil and Miss Jones"

Sparkling in its story and treatment, Jean Arthur's new starring vehicle, "The Devil and Miss Jones," comes next at the Belle Theatre, to prove itself a welcome screen offering. Robert Cummings has the romantic lead opposite the star and Charles Coburn the other top-featured role, that of a gruff multi-millionaire.

Miss Arthur plays the part of a shoe clerk in a big metropolitan department store which is one of hundreds of firms owned by Coburn. Her boy friend, Cummings, has been discharged for trying to organize the store employees against unfair treatment—a revolt in which an effigy of Coburn himself has been hung outside the store.

Angered, the millionaire decides to investigate the trouble, and arranges to take a position as a clerk in the store in order to find out what employees are involved in the rebellion. Unknown even to the manager, he goes to work in the shoe department, and Miss Arthur, feeling sorry for the seemingly lonely old man, helps him out with the pompous section manager and slyly promotes a romance for him with an elderly and kind-hearted saleswoman.

How the crusty Cobourn comes to sympathize with his workers' viewpoint and at a critical moment takes a hand in the revolt with unexpected results, makes for the gay ending of the picture and leads to the fantasy of its concluding sequence, with the reformed millionaire leading a vast protest parade against himself in hilarious style.

Miss Arthur gives a brilliant performance as the warm-hearted clerk and Coburn and Cummings both turn in noteworthy portrayals in their respective parts. Edmund Gwenn as the section manager, Spring Byington as Cobourn's romantic partner, S. Z. Sakall, William Demarest and Walter Kinsford have the principal supporting roles and handles them splendidly under the deft direction of Sam Wood. Frank Ross has produced the film for RKO Radio in handsome style from Norman Krasna's well-contrived screen play.

Some of the film's funniest scenes takes place at a Coney Island beach with Coburn's mansion, Bryant Park a subway car and the heroine's boarding house as other settings. All in all, "The Devil and Miss Jones" is top-notch entertainment for anybody.

An all-new "Information Please" with Anna Neagle as guest star, the latest World News Events and a Walt Disney colored fun cartoon, "A Gentleman's Gentleman," will also be exhibited.

On Saturday matinee Dick Foran and Anna Nagel will appear in the opening chapter of "Winners of the West," the year's greatest serial.

Continuous performances will prevail on Saturday.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Golden Key as Present

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please help me with a few suggestions that are puzzling me?

1. I expect to be married soon, and I was very interested in the suggestion in your column about giving one's fiance a gold key to the new home as a wedding present. I'd like to follow your suggestion, and give my future husband a gold key to our new home. I would like to have it inscribed something like this: "May this open the door to our happiness," or "May this open our door to happines." Do you think that either of these would do? If not, what would you suggest?

2. Have you an idea as to what this would cost?

3. I have a girl friend living in a different town, whom I got to know very well in a hospital. She is now at home, but in bed most of the time. Although I know that she would not be able to come, I would like to send her an invitation to my wedding. With the invitation I would like to send a note telling her that, although I know she will not be able to come, I want her to have the invitation as a remembrance of my wedding day. Will this be in good taste? Or should I send the note and invitation separately? She is such a sweet person that I would not want to hurt her feelings. P.

1. I am delighted that you liked my suggestion about giving a gold key as a weddding present. I am sure your future husband will like the idea too. Your idea for the inscription is grand. My only suggestion would be that, for the saving of space you may try to reduce the number of words. If you have to, perhaps "To open our door to happiness" might serve.

2. See what designs your jeweller has, or can get to show you, for the price depends on the design. As you know, you buy a "dummy key" to be cut later in the correct form.

3. By all means carry out your idea of sending an invitation to this friend of yours; she will love your generous and friendly thought of her. If I were you, I'd send the invitation "as is", and send the note separately, but in the same mail. In the note I suggest that, instead of telling her that you are sending the invitation as a remembrance of your wedding, you tell her that although you realize to your deep disappointment that you cannot have the happiness of having her with you on your wedding day, you want your invitation to tell her how very much you wanted her. Tell her, too, that you will be thinking of her on your "day of days," wishing that she were with you; that she will, indeed, be with you in the wonderful spirit of your friendship for each other.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Unmasked Love Held in Disdain; What's Worth While is Hard To Get

Here's an extract from a letter written by a distracted girl who doesn't understand why her boy friend hangs up the telephone receiver when he recognizes her voice. She finds it hard to believe that he's sick and tired of her cloying devotion!

"I seem to have lost all my pride where he is concerned. I thought he cared very much for me, but now he seems to turn away. When I call him up, he cuts the conversation short and hangs up. My friends have told me he speaks of me as a 'telephone hound'. I could understand it, if I ever did anything mean to him, but I have always given him only my deepest love."

She has never heard, poor girl, the old adage that if a girl throws herself at a man's head, she's likely to find her self at his feet. Men who are unremittingly sought after when they are plainly bored by the attention paid them have the feeling of hunted creatures, and a hunted thing fights desperately to escape.

"Deepest love" such as this girl says she has always given her young man, palls if you make a steady diet of it. The cheap, salted peanut never tastes so good as when you've worked your way through a large box of "somebody's best" candy.

My correspondent didn't want me to give all of her letter, fearing it would be recognized, but I don't believe I'll be breaking faith if I say that "petting" and hand-holding appear to have been the specialties of this affair, from first to last. Indeed, I'm afraid there was very little else. So the young man became tired of the too-easy kisses and now hangs up the receiver when he recognizes his girl's voice on the phone.

It's strange, but that cruel insult doesn't seem to cure her of her infatuation, and she writes me a long letter to ask how she can win him back.

Alas, there's no magic formula for winning them back. But there is a magic formula that may be invoked for keeping them, and that is: Don't be cheap. Bargains in affection, like bargains on the marked-down counter, are open to suspicion. What is worth while is harder to get.

I know that manners, customs, even morals, have changed in the last generation; but there is something innate in human nature that turns from what is cheap and easy to the thing that is more difficult to acquire.

Think this over, all you girls who let men break dates without explanation or apology; who ring up your boy friends on the telephone day in and day out, and then want to know how you can "win him back." It just can't be done!

If you allow yourself to be "picked up," taken for motor rides by strange young men, or crash an acquaintance without an introduction, don't be surprised if the young man drops you and gets tired of his "bargain counter" playmate. It's a case of "easy-come, easy-go" so there's no use crying about it.

Sport Fans In Canada Will Join With Movie-Goers In Paying Higher Admission for Amusement

Ottawa, May 23 (CP)—Sport fans in Canada will join with movie-goers in paying higher admission prices if the extension of the new 20 per cent tax on motion picture theatre receipts to certain other forms of amusement is passed on to the patron.

Those effected will be spectators who pay to watch a game but take no part in it under the amendment to the Budget resolution introduced in the House of Commons last night by Finance Minister Ilsley. During the summer baseball fans and those attending racetracks will be most affected. And besides the tax on admission, racing enthusiasts also will pay a tax on pari-mutuel betting, announced in the Budget April 29.

With the coming of autumn the large football crowds will contribute greatly to the Dominion Treasury, while hockey fans with winter's arrival, probably will have to dig down for the extra admission price.

Bowlers to Escape

But many popular sports will escape the tax. Bowlers, for example, will not be affected since they pay to play and spectators are only an incidental consideration at the alleys. Other non-spectator games also will not be affected, according to present indications.

Another tax announcement made last night by the Finance Minister will affect those in the bleachers and covered stands. The soft drinks they buy will be taxed 25 per cent and the consumer probably will meet the amount—about one cent extra for each bottle.

Rural Leagues Exempted

Mr. Ilsley in mentioning athletic contests, said all of them should not be taxed. There were rural baseball leagues which took in small gate receipts and used the proceeds for expenses and equipment. There would be power to exempt such entertainments.

G. J. Tustin (Con. Prince Edward-Lennox) said he was convinced the Minister had originally intended that the tax on motion picture entertainment would be absorbed by the exhibitors and not passed on to the patrons.

"That was not my intention," Mr. Ilsley interjected.

Mr. Tustin said the tax was 20 per cent of the gross and he knew of no other tax so high. There should be a sliding scale making the rate lower in small towns.

Mr. Tustin also urged that those in the army, air force and navy, in uniform, be exempt from the tax.

Karl Homuth (Con. Waterloo South) suggested the motion picture tax be reduced to 10 per cent in view of the imposition of a tax on other amusements.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Parents Are Told "Baby Talk" is Bad Start For The Child

Parents who regard the one-year-old as too little to be taught or too young to understand, are piling up trouble for him as well as themselves. At one year the child, senses newly awakened, notices everything going on around him with vast curiosity and with the desire to imitate the actions of his elders.

At one, the child is normally beginning to talk, and he tries to imitate what he hears. If the parents or others around him are so unwise as to address him in "baby talk," that is what he will try to speak. Thus his language development gets off to a bad start. Why force a child to learn a language he must discard almost at once. He can learn good, simple English, if he hears nothing else, as easily as "baby talk."

Parents are the child's first teachers. They teach by suggestion as much as by direct effort, and they should try to maintain the highest possible educational standards, instead of setting bad examples, as they do, for example, when they show food dislikes in the presence of the child. If one of the parents, as the child is having its meal in a high-chair beside them at the table, express a distaste for this or that dish, the observant child may be depended upon to turn against it. If the father jokes about the child's cod liver oil or the mother makes a face as she gives it to the child, this is enough to make the child determined not to take it.

Good habits are as easy to establish at one as bad habits. If the mother establishes a daily routine and carries it out as if there was nothing unusual about eating, sleeping and bathing on an unvarying schedule, it won't be long before the child will accept it as naturally as breathing.

At one year children learn things more by example than by any other way. That is why it is so important to be careful about what you say and do in front of him. He can take guidance but not correction. If he does something he shouldn't, or if he wants something he shouldn't have, it isn't much use scolding him and shouting at him. It is far better to try and divert his attention away to something else. Scolding only upsets him and confuses the reasoning powers that are forming within his little head. The one-year-old is still an untutored animal who doesn't know right from wrong.

Beauty Shops for Kiddies

Gloria Jean has a becoming and youthful hair arrangement

By HELEN FOLLETT

MANY beauty shops in large cities have special departments for the young fry. A grand convenience for the mamma who gets pretty sick of trying to shampoo Alma's hair while Alma shrieks at the top of her lungs. At the beautytorium little Alma is a little angel. Doesn't shriek at all. Is interested in everything that is going on, especially what's being done to the other pint-size customers.

Few mothers are qualified to shampoo a child's hair, not knowing the ropes, often letting soap scum remain to dim the silky threads. It is not easy to get hair clean. The cleansing agent must be high grade, the rinsing made thorough by means of a strong current of water and a spray.

Hair Arrangement

There is the important matter of the hair arrangement. Little girls with stringy wisps hanging around their pretty necks are aware of the fact that they are not up to standard in appearance, become self-conscious and unhappy. There's quite a bit of snobbery going on even in first grades. The untidy child doesn't quite belong.

The short bob is the best arrangement, because it is easily combed, can be kept cleaner than long hair. Pigtails suit certain types, and some young ladies of seven, or eight are inclined to like them, although what they like best of all is the fluffy long bob that mamma wears.

The wise mother will help the child along the beauty road by seeing that she has simple, nourishing food and enjoys it; she will if it is well cooked and daintily served. Mother will attend to the washing of hands before meals, the scouring of the teeth morning and night, regular hours for sleeping, plenty of sunshine and fresh air.

An important item concerns shoes which must be carefully selected to conform to the outline of the foot. A still more important matter is to set children a good example, by keeping calm and good natured. They mimic the habits of parents.

Officers Nominated By Women Of Moose

A good number of Co-Workers of Belleville Chapter 435 attended a meeting of the Women of the Moose in the Moose Auditorium on Tuesday evening. Nomination of officers was in order, Mrs. E. Jeffrey, Senior Regent, presided with all officers present. Recorder Miss Mary Doran read the communication which were discussed and dispensed with. An interesting item is that Ernest Leroy Croteau of St. Catharines, Ontario, will be an Ontario graduate among a class of boys and girls graduating from Mooseheart, Ill., at the Commencement Exercises held in June.

A gift parcel was sent to a member of the R.C.A. who is now in Nova Scotia. Guide Mrs. L. Connell won the Sunshine prize of the evening, donated by J. Graduate Regent, Mrs. J. Chapman.

Following the meeting cards were in progress. The winners at euchre were Mrs. E. Jeffrey first and Miss Mary Doran, 2nd., the rummy prizes went to Mrs. G. Ritch and Mrs. E. McGinness. Supper was served by Mrs. L. Woodacre, chairman of home-making and her committee. The enjoyable evening was brought to a close at a late hour.

Friends Honor Centenary Couple

[illegible]ary—Mr. and Mrs. Gor- [illegible] were recently married were honored on Saturday evening, when friends and neighbors of the community gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Garrison.

The young folks as is the custom here, gathered with their many contrivances, to make a joyful noise (or otherwise) to show their affection for the bridal couple. After the bride and groom made their appearance and the usual amount was forthcoming, they proceeded to get the treat for the evening.

Mr. Art Calvert then called the gathering to order; and read an appropriate address, while Mrs. Art Calvert and Mrs. E. Hart on behalf of the community presented the bride and groom with an occasional chair.

The Y.P.U. President, Mr. Ray Hall also read an address and Miss Verna Keene on behalf of the Young People presented them with a coffee percolator.

Expressing appreciation Gordon and Marie both thanked their friends for the gifts and said they would be most useful in their new home. Mrs. Garrison then served cake, ice cream and coffee, altogether it was a most enjoyable evening.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Hart who have spent the winter in Florida returned home on Thursday both feeling much improved in health and reporting a wonderful time.

The Sunday School was well attended on Sunday, a special feature was a missionary talk by Mrs. Blythe Leahman who in her gracious manner made an appeal for the children to learn at least one verse of Scripture every week, and to remember where it was found in the Bible. This would be of great value to them in later life.

Mr. Mercer preached a forceful sermon on Sunday to a large congregtion. The Y.P.U. held a social evening at the church on Monday evening.

Musical Program Very Enjoyable At Box Social

Bonarlaw—The Box Social held in the club rooms of St. Mark's Church on Tuesday evening of this week under the auspices of St. Mark's Young People's Society was a decided success.

There was a good attendance and all seemed bent on having a good time. The evening's activities were divided into two parts; first a musical program under the chairmanship of Mr. Carl Heath, President of the Y.P.S. and second, the auctioning of the boxes by Mr. Fred Johnston, popular auctioneer of Marmora.

The program was as follows:—Community singing led by Mr. Howard Linton, who also presided at the piano; Harmonica solos by Ray McLaren; vocal solo, "There's a land" by Mrs. Percy Grey; vocal solo, "We're proud of Canada" Mr. Geo. Woodhouse; vocal solo, "Till we meet again" by Mrs. L. R. Rundle; vocal solo "In the twi-twi-Twilight" by Mr. W. J. Cottrell; vocal solo "Good night little soldier" by Mr. Geo. Woodhouse; vocal duet, "Till the lights of London shine again" by Mrs. P. Gray and Mrs. L. Rundle; community singing, led by Mr. Howard Linton; piano solo, Rev. L. Harding of Stirling; vocal solo "I love life" Mr. J. P. Baker; vocal solo "The eternal pearl" by Mr. W. J. Cottrell;/song "There'll always be an England".

Accompanists for the above were Mrs. Fred Wells, Mrs. L. R. Rundle and Rev. L. Harding.

The President, Mr. Carl Heath thanked the visitors from Marmora and Rev. Mr. Harding from Stirling who gave such splendid assistance with the program and also thanked Mr. Cottrell and Mr. Wm. Lavender who organized the Marmora group who put on most of the program.

The committee served coffee and the lunch period ended a very pleasant evening.

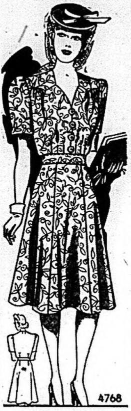
A Slimming Waistband Frock

Pattern 4768



By ANNE ADAMS

It knows all the answers to a mature lady's clothes problems—this wise and charming little Anne Adams dress, Pattern 4768. How shall I make my bust look smaller? That smart front skirt panel has a magic effect on your proportions, giving a tall-and-slim illusion. How can I look young? The deep squared-off V-neckline that's so cool . . . the gay pointed yokes . . . the novelty flower buttons down the bodice, all combine to make you younger and prettier than ever before!

Pattern 4768 is available in women's sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50. Size 36 takes 2 7-8 yards 36-inch fabric.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

Hammer Toe

One of the deformities that military physicians meet in examining recruits is what is called hammer toe. Usually the second toe, instead of lying flat alongside the other toes, has a hump like a buffalo due to the growing together of the ends of two of the toe bones forming a joint. The cause of this humping of the toes is wearing of shoes that are too short.

It is true that some children are born with one or more hammer toes; in fact, hammer toe seems to run in some families. However, most cases, as seen in adults, are due to wearing short shoes or shoes with high heels which push toes into the toe of the shoe. As there is not room for all the toes, the second toe gets pushed up and being kept in that position for hours at time, the ligaments holding the two bones together become hardened and finally become stiff or rigid. With this hard joint being pushed by the shoe a bursa (bag of water) forms or a corn at the top or highest part rubbed by the shoe. The patient complains of pain and tenderness right at this point. When the little bag of water becomes inflamed the pain becomes very severe. As with other foot conditions the patient is always aware of foot discomfort.

As this condition of hammer toe comes on gradually there is no reason why it cannot be prevented if treatment is given before the joint becomes rigid. The wearing of longer and wider shoes, and during the night having the toe straightened out and splinted with a wooden splint or wooden tongue depressor, will prevent hammertoe. However, while most of these patients are quite willing to splint the toe at night, they are quite unwilling to wear the necessary wide large shoes during the day, so that the condition goes on to rigidity and a hammer toe results.

During the last war, if a recruit were willing to undergo operation, this second toe was removed. This was later found to be the wrong treatment as the upper end of the big toe was pushed toward outer side of foot, taking place made vacant by removal of second toe and the lower end swung to inner side, a bunion at inner side of big toe occurred.

The treatment in use since the last war is to remove the ends of the two bones forming the hard joint, lay them flat end to end, and let them grow together. The toe can thus lie always flat in its proper place.

MELROSE Y. P. U.

The closing meeting of the Melrose Y.P.U. was held on Tuesday evening, May 20, with an attendance of 30. Rev. Mr. Sterling opened the meeting with a hymn followed by prayer. During the business period a committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangements for a wiener roast. It was also decided that the Union donate a certain amount to missions.

The Fellowship convener, Mrs. Cole then took charge and gave the call to worship with quiet music by Mrs. Bates. A hymn was sung and Jean Badgley read the Scripture lesson. Keitha Weese read a piece on "The Church of All Nations in Montreal." Mrs. Sterling gave a talk on "Sabbath Bells are Chiming" which dealt with the different methods of worship in the various churches. Betty Bates favored with a song, "Carry On" and Evelyn Badgley gave a comical reading entitled "Kentucky Philosophy," Newton Demill led in community singing and Earl Badgley played a guitar selection. The meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

Ida Lupino and Humphrey Bogart, the stars of "They Drive by Night," score another dramatic triumph in "High Sierra," opening at the Capitol Theatre Sunday midnight.

Fashion Flashes

ALL OVER TOWN one sees the white hat spiced up with a touch of color. A smart model is in starched white pique, the tall crown laced with red linen lacings. Red linen pipes the curved brim and there is a red veil.

LOTS OF ATTENTION is being paid to a group of clothes designed by Captain Molyneux, who has been visiting here from London. A beautiful dinner dress is in dull black silk jersey with high-collared yoke of silver sequins. A sleeveless jacket reveals the elbow-length silver sequin cuffs of the dress.

PLENTY OF ADMIRERS for the silk frock with tiered and pleated skirt. Pale beige silk crepe is made with a fitted basque bodice with topaze buttons. From the knee to the hem the skirt is in four tightly pleated tiers.

OUT IN THE COUNTRY or in town, a flannel suit is always useful. An attractive suit is in gray flannel with a creamy white vertical stripe for the jacket and chevron stripes for the skirt.

THAT PRETTY LOOK, fragile and dainty, is the objective of many girls. Best way to achieve this is through the medium of big frilled lingerie collars, many of them triple-tiered with matching cuffs.

BRIGHT NIGHTS bring out pretty dinner dress is in palest beige in filmy silk tulle, the collar edged with tiers and tiers of matching lace ruffles. Ruffles of lace mark the ends of the sash.

TWO-HOUR FIGHT SAVES BUILDING

Bleecker Homestead on Donald Street Catches Fire From Chimney Blaze

Only a concerted two-hour fight by city firemen saved one of the oldest residences on the outskirts of the city falling prey to flames on Thursday afternoon, when as the aftermath of what at first appeared to be a minor chimney blaze, considerable damage to the attic and upper walls of the old Bleecker homestead on Donald Street, resulted.

Tenanted by the Yateman and Galpin families, the chimney on the homestead was first noticed to be blazing at mid-afternoon and although efforts were made to extinguish the flames, the fire ate its way out through the chimney walls with the attic and upper walls of the building catching fire. Only when the blaze in the attic was discovered around seven o'clock was the fire department called, and as the building is situated outside the city limits, permission from the Chairman of Fire had to be obtained before city equipment could be taken to the scene. A stubborn two-hour fight, during which 18 cans of water were used, was necessary before the flames were finally extinguished.

Brought Under Control

An overheated or short-circuited electric motor in a small building adjoining the plating room at the Alemite Corporation factory caused an alarm to be sent in for the fire department shortly after ten o'clock on Friday morning. The electric motor, which was the cause of the fire, was almost a complete wreck, according to Fire Chief William Lynch, but only slight damage was suffered by the building in which it was housed, as the fire department were quickly on the job to prevent the spread of the flames.

Boy Falls Under Wheel Of Bread Wagon

While attempting to steal a ride on a local bread delivery wagon a ten-year-old lad by the name of Stolicker, residing on the Cannifton Road outside the city, fell beneath the wagon and was run over by the rear wheel Friday afternoon. The driver, Fred Archer, 62 1-2 Everett Street, stopped his wagon and assisted the lad.

Later police were informed the young Stollicker lad had sustained leg and side abrasions. He was taken home. Police today issued warnings to children to refrain from stealing rides on either trucks or horse-drawn vehicles.

"The drivers of such vehicles cannot see behind them and it is an easy matter for children to lose their balance and fall beneath the rear wheels", explained Chief Kidd in warning to parents to caution their children against such practices.

Generator Stolen Off Car

David Birrell, 182 Charles Street, complained to police the generator of his automobile had been stolen during his absence last night. The vehicle was parked on Church St., shortly after 7.00 pm. and during Mr. Birrell's absence the generator was removed from the engine.

Thieves Steal Milk

Several residents residing in the East Hill sector have complained of late that milk bottles, left by deliverymen, had been stolen after delivery. Another woman told police a pair of army sox had been stolen from her premises. The lady had just finished knitting the sox for soldiers.

1941 "Small Homes" Edition Shows Many Attractive Dwellings

Visualizing the urgent need in Canada at present for homes within the range of the average householder the Walker Publishing Company, 177 Jarvis Street, Toronto, in the 1941 edition of "Small Homes' reveals these attractive dwellings in interiors, exteriors and floor-plans.

The edition is colorfully illustrated and pictures the various construction and decorative phases of homes costing from $3,500 to $11,500. The company believes it costs less to build well, and has issued this edition at a time when good designing and building practice is necessary in a country that is already feeling the shortage of low-priced homes.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Waterloo Bridge"

Three years ago Robert Taylor went to England to make "A Yank at Oxford." He came back raving about a promising young actress in the picture, predicting that she was certain to become a great star. The young actress was Vivien Leigh, who won the Academy Award for her performance of Scarlett O'Hara in "Gone With the Wind." All human interest stories of this kind should have a happy ending. This one definitely has, for the two noted stars have been reunited in one of the years most romantic pictures, "Waterloo Bridge," which comes next to the McCarthy theatre. Miss Leigh has surprised Hollywood by saying, "I don't want to be remembered as Scarlett." She has a sound reason for this. She feels that variety in roles is important to her career as an actress. She doesn't want to be typed. And as Myra Lester, a little ballet dancer who has a whirlwind twenty-four hour romance with a dashing British officer whom she meets on historic Waterloo Bridge during an air raid. Miss Leigh has a part as different from Scarlett as day from night.

Another Great Role

It gives her another magnificent acting opportunity but presents her in a gentler, more sympathetic light. Taylor has some surprises for his fans, too, in the finest role of his career. Because the screen version of Robert E. Sherwood's famous stage drama opens in a London blackout of 1940 and then flickers back to wartime London of 1917 for its key setting. Taylor is first seen as the forty-eight-year-old Col. Roy Cronin, then as the twenty-five-year-old Capt. Roy Cronin.

While not a war drama, the London blackout, historic Waterloo Bridge and Waterloo Station sets vividly depict London at most dramatic times in history. Mervyn LeRoy, who gave the screen "The Wizard of Oz" returned to his first love to direct Miss Leigh and Taylor in the film. He first won success as a director, one of his notable directorial achievements having been "Anthony Adverse." Sidney Franklin, considered one of the finest story minds in Hollywood, was the producer. As a director, he won an enviable reputation for such films as "The Good Earth," "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and "Smilin' Thru."

JURY RETURNS OPEN VERDICT IN WILSON DEATH

Stewart Car Parked on Wrong Side of Highway Court Informed

LIGHTS WORKING

An "open verdict" was returned by the coroner's jury probing the death of the late Mrs. Louise Wilson at an adjourned inquest held before Chief Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson at Harold on Thursday night. The inquest was necessary following a motor accident which occurred near the home of Mrs. Wilson on April 9th last, the accident occurring while Mrs. Wilson was purchasing some bread from Bernard Stewart, the woman being struck by a car driven by Harold Peters.

Testifying at the inquest, Constable A. Dymond of Madoc, stated that the Stewart car was parked on the wrong side of the highway. "From the information I could gather, Mr. Stewart had pulled his car to the east side of the road in front of Mrs. Wilson's home and the lady had gone to the car to purchase bread."

Saw One Light

"A second car driven by H. Peters northerly on the highway, swung to the right of the parked car, colliding with Mrs. Wilson and Bernard Stewart," said the constable, "Mr. Peters told me that he had driven over a slight knoll on the highway and had seen one light of a car which he thought was approaching at the time. He said he was blinded until he was almost on the car and swung to the right in an effort to miss the car."

"Mrs. Wilson and Mr. Stewart were standing on the shoulder of the road when the Peters' car collided with them," he stated. "The body of Mrs. Wilson was carried 67 feet north of the Peters' car."

Constable Dymond stated that there was "no liquor in the case."

Claims He Was Blinded

Mr. Peters told the jury that he was proceeding 30 to 35 miles an hour prior to the accident. "I was blinded by the one light of the car and thought the car was on its own side of the road until I was almost on top of it," said the witness. "I thought the one light was on the left hand side of the car and I was keeping to my right in order to avoid the collision. It was too late to turn to the left when I discovered that the light was on the right side of the car."

In his evidence, Bernard Stewart, who was also injured in the accident, said that both lights of the car were on at the time. "I had my lights on the low beam and both of these lights were working," he said.

Dutch East Indies Resolute To Stand In Trade Negotiations

Batavia, Netherlands East Indies, May 23 (AP)—Informed quarters say that a new Japanese press attack, bristling with threats and warnings, will not force the Netherlands East Indies from their firm stand in commercial negotiations with Japan.

Furthermore, these informants said that a Japanese commercial program as outlined by the Tokyo press with reference to the N.E.I., was considered largely unacceptable here.

The four-month-old commercial negotiations were declared to have entered a critical stage with the exchange of final memoranda earlier this month. The main stumbling block has been the disinclination of the N.E.I., to sell large quantities of vital products to Japan, lest they find their way to Germany.

The launching of the violent press campaign, one informed source said, may mean the beginning of preparations to prepare the Japanese public for a breakdown in the negotiations.

THE WAR TODAY

By DON GILBERT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The momentous battle for Crete hangs in the balance. The British troops, as in Norway and Greece, face the fury of the German bombers without air support. But around the seagirt island the Royal Navy lends aids more valuable than any number of fighter planes.

Withdrawal of the Royal Air Force from the island was a grave blow to British hopes. London, however, took the view that the battle's outcome hinges on the navy's ability to go on sinking enemy sea transports as they seek to pierce the island's naval cordon.

The New Zealander's and other British troops, and the Greeks, are fighting every man for himself in a struggle from which, Prime Minister Churchill has said, there can be no retreat. German air-borne reinforcements are engaged as quickly as they land. The enemy is aided by no quislings.

The German and Italian peoples had not been told up to this morning that the attempt to invade Crete is in progress. But in the Middle East Nazi propagandists already are spreading the word that Crete is finished, and that Palestine and the Sue Canal will fall next. If Britain can hold Crete these gentlemen will have explanations to make.

Vichy's Will Reiterated

Vichy's will to aid the Germans was reiterated today by Admiral Darlan in a speech making it clear that the Vichy leaders will do everything to make their own positions secure in what they believe is going to be a German victory. Darlan says Hitler has made no demands for French territory. Why should he? Is it not better to have Vichy a willing accomplice and France a slave nation lying under the delusion it is free?

In any case, the gentle handling of Vichy by the Allies is at an end. Concessions are finished, and London forsees a definite break in the next few days. Whether this will lead to fighting remains to be seen. There is still no confirmation of reports the Free French have crossed into Syria, but Jerusalem reports this morning substantiated previous advices that part of the French regular army in the mandated territory has gone over to Gen. De Gaulle.

The United States has exposed the Nazi propaganda story that French possessions in the Caribbean are about to be occupied by American forces. Washington, it was stated, regards such islands as Martinique to be harmless at present. The United States, it was inferred, will not, by such action, invite the Germans to go into Dakar, French West Africa, to "protect it from American Imperialism."

Even some of our enemies realize that individual security is to be found only in an English-speaking democracy.

Striking evidence of the love of independence and freedom existing in English-speaking democracies is found in the fact that three-quarters of all the life insurance in the world is owned in the British Empire and the United States.

Canadians already this year have purchased the record amount of forty-two million dollars of new life insurance from this Company. They now hold London Life policies amounting to $725,000,000 (net).

GOOD VICTORIAS WAS LONG REIGN SOME WARS, TOO

Not All Peace in "Good Old Days" of Last Century With Same British Monarch for 63 Years

By The Canadian Press

This wartorn 20th century is inclined to look back on the 63-year (1837-1901) reign of Good Queen Victoria as a blissful and practically uninterrupted period of peace, prosperity and progress for the British Empire. But was it?

Born May 24, 1819, when Britain, victorious though she was, was just recovering from the wars of Napoleon Bonaparte, Victoria ascended the throne June 21, 1837, and was crowned June 28, 1838. She died Jan. 22, 1901, with her troops still mopping up after their victory in the Anglo-Boer war in South Africa, 1899-1901.

At some point in that longest reign in the history of English monarchs the Empire was engaged in a couple of major wars and innumerable military expeditions that brought much anxiety to the people even though they generally ended in victory. Many times were the foundations of the British Empire bombed and shaken though almost invariably the superstructure emerged strengthened and glorified with the treaties of peace.

Why May 24?

People have asked why Canada continues to celebrate Queen Victoria's birthday as a holiday when she has been dead 40 years. The United Kingdom and other Dominions no longer keep the day as such, although in many parts of the Empire either May 23 or May 24 is known as Empire Day.

Historian Fred Williams gives the answer. "It happened that May 24 was the most appropriate time of the year for the first spring holiday in Canada," he says "It was observed as a holiday for over 60 years and when the Good Queen died it was generally contended it would be a pity to abandon the May holiday and observe the King's (Edward VII) birthday which fell on Nov. 9."

The Canadian parliament, on May 2, 1901, passed a bill making May 24, Victoria Day, an annual holiday.

As To Empire Day

Empire Day, celebrated in many other parts of the Empire May 24, but in Canada on May 23, is a Canadian idea, too. Mrs. Clementina Fessenden, a member of the Wentworth Historical Association of Hamilton, suggested setting apart a day in the schools for patriotic exercises exemplifying British history. Her effort had the approval of Queen Victoria some years before she died.

The first celebration of Empire Day in Canada was in 1899. The late Earl of Meath was taken with the idea and largely through his efforts its observance spread rapidly through the Empire. It was adopted in the United Kingdom in 1902.

AUTOGRAPH KING IS DEAD AT 46

English Brewer Said to Have Made World's Best Collection

York, Eng. (CP)—Reginald Hunt, head of a Yorkshire brewing firm who had what is believed to be the best collection of autographs in the world, died here at the age of 46.

His collection included five kings and queens, six United States presidents, Mussolini and 152 V.C.'s—the last all on one sheet of paper.

Hunt received the ex-Kaiser's autograph after five unsuccessful applications and when he asked Il Duce for his Mussolini wrote to the Chief Constable of York asking if he were a "fit and proper" person to receive it.

When he collected the signatures of the first British Labor Cabinet the sheet of paper travelled to and fro 50 times in the mail before it was completed.

Hunt's collection included the signatures of Queen Anne and Queen Elizabeth, Disraeli, Nurse Edith Cavell and the murderer of Crippen. A few years ago he gave his collection to the York Public Library.

POLICE REVIVE CHARRED WRIT

London (CP)—Police scientists in the Metropolitan Laboratory at Hendon have discovered a method for making readable badly charred documents. The papers are treated with a 25 per cent alcoholic solution or chloral hydrate and dried at 60 degrees centigrade. This process is repeated several times and for the final application a similar solution containing 100 per cent glycerine is used. Documents are then photographed on a special plate.

AMBULANCE TRAINS READY

London (CP)—At key points all over Britain ambulance and casualty evacuation trains stand ready for constant use. End for end, the trains would extend for seven miles

Why
CANADA MUST BORROW $600,000,000

A Statement by the Minister of Finance

In money alone, this war is costing Canada in round figures, $4,000,000 a day. That is three and one-quarter times the daily cost of the last year of the last war. This conflict costs so much more because it is a battle of giant, swift machines . . . as well as of men. And to build other than the very best machines would be futile. They must be worthy of our men.

Canada dare not . . . and will not . . . sacrifice men for lack in quality or quantity of fighting machines. Hence we must produce them on a scale hitherto undreamed of.

To do this, Canada needs now to borrow from her citizens at least $600,000,000 in addition to the revenue raised by taxes. To obtain this money Canada will on June 2nd offer Victory Bonds.

Fortunately, Canadians have the money to buy these Victory Bonds.

This is shown by a greatly expanded national income and by record savings deposits.

If every person who has savings or who can make payments out of wages or income will invest in Victory Bonds, the Loan will be quickly subscribed. But the wholehearted support of every citizen is necessary.

What Canadians have done before, Canadians can and will do again. Our population was less than nine millions in 1918 and 1919. Yet in November, 1918, our people invested $616,000,000 in Victory Bonds. Eleven months later, in October 1919, they invested $572,000,000. The total subscribed for Victory Bonds in those two loans was $1,188,000,000. This year, with our population increased to more than twelve millions, the nation that did it before can do it again—and in greater measure.

The terms of the Loan will be announced May 31st. Get ready to buy every Bond that you can.

Dodgers Slink Back to Flatbush After Disastrous Road Trip Losing Six Straight Games

St. Louis Cardinals Beat Them 7-6 to Take First Place in National

INDIANS WIN

(By Judson Bailey)
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Brooklyn Dodgers, who paraded into the West last week arrogantly pointing to their record as the leading road team in the National League last year and to their six victories in seven games away from home in the east this year, are slinking back to Flatbush today with a string of tincans tied to their tails.

They are in the doghouse because of losing six straight games at Pittsburgh, Chicago and finally St. Louis, where they handed over the League lead to the Cardinals. Many of their chums are shouting "them bums".

However, the Dodgers may yet live down this debacle and now is a good time to say a word in their defence.

The Dodgers lost again 7-6, but they showed they are not yet cowed. The Redbirds scored all their runs off chubby Hugh Casey in the first five innings, four in the second stanza when Don Padgett and Johnny Mize punched out home runs. Yet Brooklyn outhit the Redbirds 13-11 and went down battling.

Cincinati Reds also sparked for a 6-4 victory over New York Giants. Ernie Lombardi hit a home run in the first inning with the bases loaded and Frank McCormick pounded his eighth of the season with one on in the third. Big Paul Derringer permitted three home runs in the seven hits he gave the Giants.

The two other National League games were rained out.

Cleveland Indians, who used to go to pieces on the road, edged out Washington Senators 4-3 for their seventh triumph in ten games in the East.

Chicago White Sox held determinedly to second place in the American League by whacking Philadelphia Athletics 4-1 behind the six-hit hurling of John Rigney. Bob Muncrief and Jack Kramer combined in a five-hit hurling job for St. Louis Browns, who beat Boston Red Sox 4-1.

This enabled New York Yankees to advance into third place by capturing their third straight victory. They beat Detroit 6-5.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ

(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, May 23 (AP)—The order that kept Dizzy Dean on the payroll as coach came direct from the office of P. K. Wrigley.... Also, Mr. Wrigley refused to sanction a deal for Billy Herman until he was sure the veteran was going to a club with a good chance of getting into the World's Series...... Quite a guy, Mr. Wrigley.... When Max West and Gene Moore let a fly ball fall between them in Redland the other day, Casey Stengel stood in front of the dugout where all could see and pasted a piece of adhesive tape across his mouth. West and Moore got the idea right away.

No two teams in the majors came nearer to a tie in team records last year than Boston and Detroit.... Each beat the other 11 times.... Boston won six and lost five in Detroit.... Detroit won six and lost five in Boston.... Each finished with a team batting average of .286...... But Detroit won the pennant while Boston tied with Chicago for fourth place.

Today's Guest Star—

Howard Roberts, Chicago Daily News: "There was no joy in Flatbush last night...... The mighty Casey couldn't strike anybody out ......Worse than that, he couldn't get anybody out."

Last winter a lot of words were tossed about as to the respective salaries of the Messrs. Bob Feller and Buck Newsom...... Right now the chief difference appears to be that Feller is earning his.

ITS "DERBY DAY" TO INDIANA FOLK

500-Mile Speedway Race May 30th Will Attract All the Old Crowds

Indianapolis, May 23 —(CP)— It doesn't attract society's "400" but Indianapolis's 500-mile motor speedway race, coming up on May 30th, is the corn country's major one-day social event.

Here in Indiana it's considered downright social neglect for a farm hand, filling station operator, or garage mechanic to confess that he never has seen a 500-mile race. Some sort of explanation usually is necessary for failure to attend the speed classic every year.

Indianapolis residents adopt a peculiar attitude towards the race. They're never going until the last minute and then all the King's horses couldn't keep them away.

On race day the crowd will swarm into the 400-acre enclosure heavily laden with fried chicken, hard-boiled eggs, pickles and cold beer.

They'll scramble for the same parking spaces they had a year ago and the year before that and the "Hiya Joe's" will resound over the whole place. Many of the spectators will perch atop specially constructed seats above the parked automobiles.

Many of them will pay little attention to the roaring motors except for the start, the finish and casual trips over to the fence to see the standing.

But by some manner, no one knows just how, they'll manage to see the high spots of the battle of speed so they can talk about it when they're back at their regular tasks.

It's just a big Hoosier picnic with a dash of speed to provide the spice.

Cleveland, May 23—(CP)—"Girls, before they are 16, and boys before they are 19, must learn all the things they want to do in figure skating and must perfect them before they develop a sense of fear," says Pierre Brunet, who, with Andre Jolly, formed perhaps the world's best figure skating pair in the 1920's.

ROCHESTER WINGS FLASHING FORM OF LAST SEASON

Move From Sixth to Third Place and Only 2½ Games Behind Leader

EASILY DEFEAT LEAFS

(By The Associated Press)

After stumbling all over the track during the first three weeks of the International League Baseball race, the champion Rochester Red Wings are at last flashing the form that brought them the pennant last year.

Winners in 11 of their last 13 games, the Wings have moved from sixth to third in the standings and now are only 2 1-2 games behind the league-leading Newark Bears.

They took over third place from Buffalo Bisons last night with a rushing 13-2 triumph over the hapless Toronto Leafs that extended their unbeaten string to five games.

The advance was possible as Montreal Royals defeated Buffalo 5-0 in an afternoon contest.

Newark maintained its game and a half margin over the second place Royals by turning back Syracuse Chiefs 12-1 while Baltimore nosed out Jersey City Giants 4-3 to break a five-game losing streak.

Leafs Get Four Hits

Herschel Lyons Limited Toronto to four hits in marking up his fourth victory, while his mates collected 15 off a trio of Leaf hurlers. Jim Walkup started and was charged with the loss. Gene Lillard paced Rochester's offensive driving in four runs with a homer, double and single.

Seven of the Wings' tallies were unearned, coming as a result of six Leaf errors and five bases on balls.

The veteran Tex Carleton turned in his second four-hitter of the campaign in shutting out Buffalo to register his third straight victory.

Frankie Kelleher connected with a double and his ninth and 10th homers of the year and drove in six runs to lead the Bears' 11 hit barrage on three Syracuse pitchers.

Baltimore's conquest of Jersey City was the first home victory for the birds in ten outings.

Fleming Tuning Up Pair Of Offspring Of Grattan Bars

Syracuse, N.Y., May 23—(AP)—A pair of Strawberry Roan mares have the veteran Vic Fleming thinking maybe he'll "have a nice year again" on the harness racing circuits.

The silver-thatched trainer and driver, preparing for his 31st year of competition, has a special fondness for these steeds. They're the daughters of a pacer that gave him his best money-winning season 13 years ago.

Fleming drove Grattan Bars, a bay stud, to victory in all eight 1928 starts, collecting $49,000 that included the big slices of three $25,000 stakes.

Now he is grooming Silver Bars and Mary Bars, seven and eight years old, respectively, for a chase after a pot of gold such as their daddy found at the end of the grand circuit rainbow.

Son of an Ontario livestock dealer and farmer who "trotted a few horses," Fleming was early into the game and drove in his first races when he was 21. His driving produced the fastest mile on record, Billy Direct's 1:55 pace at Lexington, Ky., in 1939.

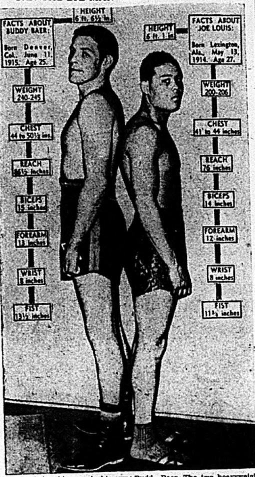
TY COBB AND BABE TO BATTLE AGAIN

New York, May 23—(CP) — Ty Cobb and Babe Ruth, two all-time baseball greats, return to competition in mid-June—but this time at golf. Ruth has accepted Cobb's challenge for a match in New York for the benefit of British war relief. Since their retirement from the major leagues each has adopted golf. Both have belittled the other's fairways skill. The Babe says he'll outslug the Georgia Peach. Tyrus says most of Babe's wallops will wind up in the rough. Anyway, it'll be a battle.

CAN THE BIG MAN BEAT "LITTLE" MAN



Joe Louis is a big man in his own right, but he appears dwarfed when standing against the giant Buddy Baer. The two heavyweights meet in a title bout tonight.

Louis To Meet Buddy Baer In Washington

Washington, May 23 (AP)—Joe Louis will play another stop tonight on his "farewell tour" of the heavyweight circuit before he puts away the five-ounce gloves and has himself fitted for a United States Army uniform.

After tonight's bout with Buddy Baer, which will mark the 17th defence of his title, the negro heavyweight champion plans to fight about twice more this summer and then see if he can't rustle himself a commission. He has gained the consent of his managers and plainly is looking forward to his "vacation" from the grind.

The low of the fight game has faded for Joe. As he sat in a hot basement room yesterday he didn't want to talk fight. He wanted to talk baseball, or to discuss his next fight with Billy Conn at New York on June 18, as though he could hasten the day.

Joe has no doubt he will dispose of Baer tonight, clip Conn next month and then knock over either Abe Simon or Lou Nova before looking up a recruiting officer.

6 OWNERS ASKED TOREMOVEHORSES FROM RACE TRACK

Members of Breeders' Association Told They Were Not Wanted at Woodbine Course

LIGHT ENTRIES

Toronto, May 23—(CP) — The Ontario Jockey Club, first to be affected by the dispute between the incorporated Canadian Racing Association and the Thoroughbred Breeders' Association, cracked back today at the recalcitrant owners by ordering the expulsion of a number from their quarters at the Woodbine race track.

Six owners and trainers were ordered to vacate their quarters as a result of a boycott by the Breeders' Association which followed refusal of the I.C.R.A. directors to recognize Ryland H. New as the owners' nominee to replace James Heffering on the I.C.R.A. board.

The Jockey Club officials announced last night that if the six fail to remove their horses and equipment by 9 p.m. (E.D.T.) today, they will call in the police to enforce their order.

The six are R. W. R. Cowie, owner and his trainer, Fred Schelke; Harry Tomlin, owner and trainer; George Lucas, owner; Henry Dirks, owner and Jim Fair, owner and trainer. The expulsion order was made when the men refused to enter their horses in races at the Woodbine.

Meanwhile the Jockey Club was prepared to continue the meet today with a card of seven races instead of eight. There were no more than seven entries in each race and six of the seven races were carded for six furlongs or less.

The breeders who entered the 42 horses in today's races are outside the Breeders' Association and are standing with the I.C.R.A., governing body of racing in Ontario.

There were reports current in track circles that racing secretaries in the United States had been asked for horses but Ontario Jockey Club officials denied these.

The next spring racing meeting opens at Thorncliffe Monday. Palmer Wright, Woodbine Park's manager, offered an answer to the question of whether the recalcitrant horsemen would be able to race at Thorncliffe. He said he had received assurances from operators of Thorncliffe as well as of the Dufferin and Long Branch tracks that "they will stand shoulder to shoulder with us."

GUS LESNEVICH WINS IN N. Y.

Outpoints Anton Christoforidis to Win N.B.A. Light Heavyweight Title

New York, May 23—(AP)—Gus Lesnevich has half a hold on half a title, obtained by a half-hearted victory before half a house at Madison Square Garden last night.

The sturdy Cliffside, N.J., fighter, outpointed Anton Christoforidis of Greece, recognized by the N.B.A. as lightweight champion, in a battle of scrambled titles and now only needs two items to make him undisputed king.

One is the admission of the N.B.A. that the fight was a legitimate title affair, a question brought up by the fact that it was held outside N.B.A. territory, and the other is a victory over Jimmy Webb this summer. Should he defeat Webb he will be recognized as champion by the New York Commission.

Lesnevich had an edge over the dancing, left-hooking Greek from the start last night, but at times it was as slim as the crowd, which was lost in the vast acreage of the Garden. It was estimated at 4,000, with receipts around $12,000.

GOSSIP · NEWS · COMMENT

In boxing circles the question usually asked is—"can a little man beat a big man?" However, tonight it seems to be the very opposite when Buddy Baer meets champion Joe Louis in Washington. Now the experts are asking—"can the big man beat the 'little' man?" When they square off tonight Baer will tip the beam somewhere around 237 pounds, while Louis won't weight an ounce over 205 pounds. Actually Baer has a reach of 10 1-2 inches over the champ., Louis' reach being 76 inches and Baer's 10 1-2 inches greater. Except for the wrist and forearm measurements, which are equal, Baer is a much larger man all around, but then Firpo was a much larger man than Dempsey. And lastly Baer stands 6 foot 6 1-2 inches, while Louis is only one inch over the six foot mark. Incidentally Louis has been offered $100,000.00 and expenses to make four appearances in Australia, two at Melbourne and one each at Brisbane and Sydney, that is if he isn't inducted into the United States army this fall.

Judging from the undercurrent of rumors pertaining to conditions prevailing in the City Softball loop, things aren't as they might be. The clubs are complaining strenuously regarding condition of the playing field at Coleman Flats, the chief bone of contention being that part of the infield surrounding the pitcher's mound. The intermediate clubs are not taking any too favourably with the rumors regarding imports being reported into the ranks of the Reliance club, as there is a residence rule in the O.A.S.A. that has always been enforced in previous years. Belleville softball should welcome new players, as competition is the life of trade in any business, but it is a simple matter to obtain transfers, which are quite essential in any organized provincial sport. Then there is the matter of umpires—a very contentious question at any time—but this year the question seems to be more arbitrary than ever. However, it must be admitted if cheap labor is employed poor workmanship can be expected and we are not attempting to cast any reflections upon those who have already tried to help the league and received nothing but abuse and a pittance for their efforts.

In years past the executive of the City Softball League has catered and kowtowed to the protests and quibblings of local softball managers until the time has arrived when it is almost next to impossible to obtain umpires. For the past two seasons umpires have played the game with the league and received the large sum of 50c for base umpiring, to say nothing of the abuse that has been piled upon them. However, when league play-off time rolled round the various managers squawked loud and long until the executive imported umpires from Trenton at prevailing O.A.S.A. umpiring fees. Actually Trenton softball heads did this very thing a few years ago until President Jess Baker and his far-seeing executive gave their umpiring officials one hundred percent support with the result the Trenton umpires continued throughout their league playdowns and labored without fear or favor, knowing full well they had the moral support of their league's executive.

Did you know—a new diamond has been laid out for the gals softball games at the Armouries? ....Home plate was shifted back seven feet and slightly to the left, thus cutting down slightly the chases of cheap home runs over the Pinnacle Street barrier ....The other day a restaurant waitress asked Umpires Newman and Pfirman, of the Cotton State League, if they had seen the day's game at Vicksburg, Miss. "We was de umps," replied Newman.... "Oh!, then I don't guess you saw it," the waitress observed sympathetically.....Lefty Gomez says —"if a few other guys like Hank Greenberg go into the army, I'll get along alright"....Pitcher Ray Smith of the Reliance didn't do too bad by himself his first two days in Belleville He won a softball game on Tuesday and won the lucky draw at Wednesday's game....Larry MacPhail, high noble-toby of the Dodgers, will toss up his job and retire within two years?....It's a prediction.

Do you remember when Gene Tunney was stripped of hois light-heavyweight boxing title by Harry Greb of Pittsburgh at New York 19 years ago tonight. Tunney lost on points over 15 rounds but later defeated Greb. He entered heavyweight ranks in 1925 and won the championship a year later, retiring undefeated in 1928.

Lt.-Col. Dr. Claude Brown, who died suddenly on active service in Glasgow, was the main man behind Western University in Intercollegiate sports, his death being a serious loss to college competition as well as London and Western Ontario athletic activities. He was chairman of physical education at Western University, as well as a representative on the stadium and athletic committees and member of the board of governors of the London college.

Pat Drumm and his Belleville Golf trundlers picked up nearly a hundred points in the second game of the Major "A" League bowling play-offs at the Recreation Alleys last night when the Golf laddies had an aggregate score of 3276. Corby's A.C. were next with 3181, then came Deacons with 3022 and next Meade-Johnson with 2916. In their two games of a three-match final series, Corby's have rolled 6541 and the Belleville Golf 6361, so the Golfers find themselves exactly 180 pins down going into the last game. Incidentally the Belleville Golf quintette won the Major "A" League honours, the present series being the play-offs with which goes the league trophy. Last night "Rip" Ridley was tops with a score of 745. As a matter of fact the two top maple-knockers last night were from the Golf team, Evan Barlow knocking the timbers for a cool 701. R. Adams, of the Deacon team was third in line with a 660 score. The final match will be played next week.

SPORT SALAD—Big league opening ceremonies are being planned for tonight's opening of the Girls' Softball League. . . . Every club in the league has provided new uniforms for their players, some of the teams even going so far as to add windbreakers. . . . Eddie Schrieder, former Belleville softball pitcher and Cy Young will be the umps this evening at the Armouries. . . . See where the 20 per cent Government war measure amusement tax has been extended to include hockey and ball games, which will work a difficulty on games where collections are received. . . . As the tax does not apply to amateur theatricals, maybe the minor league sports games will not be affected either. . . . The Dodgers are really in the doghouse these days, they dropped their sixth consecutive game yesterday as the Cardinals made a clean sweep of their series with the Brooklyns. . . . Buck Newsom just can't seem to win, he lost his sixth yesterday as the Tigers fell into losing ways at the hands of the Yankees. . . . About face.

The York Trading transport of Belleville, in charge of Mr. Hubert Young as driver, broke down while on its delivery route about thirty miles northeast of Bancroft Tuesday, causing considerable inconvenience in delay and also trans-shipment of merchandise. The truck was towed into Bancroft Wednesday afternoon for repairs.

Chief Fire Ranger Milton Brough of the local Forestry Branch stationed in Bancroft and his men have been kept on the jump during the last few days with numerous fires throughout the district due to bush being so dry. Showers fell during Wednesday afternoon in several localities but did not seem to favour the fire fighters in extinguishing the blaze. All fires though are under control and those which have been burning cover small acreages.

Tuesday and Wednesday of this week have been extremely warm and were felt more keenly as prior to Tuesday the weather was quite cool and frequent frosts were prevalent.

SHIFT IN WIND SAVES NIPIGON

Only Heavy Rains Will Put Out the Fire There and in Many Other Places Across Canada

(By The Canadian Press)

A shift in the wind saved the lumbering centre of Nipigon, 70 miles east of Port Arthur, Ont., from destruction but flames from the forest fire which menaced the town still licked at its outskirts today.

Like the fire-fighters who have battled other blazing areas in Quebec and Ontario for four days, volunteers and Rangers in the Nipigon region believed that only heavy rains could help them stem the advance of the flames.

The blaze which destroyed homes of settlers in the Nipigon district and forced 300 woodsmen to flee from a timber camp at McKirdy, Ont., was midway in a chain of fires stretching across Canada from the Laurentians to the foothills of the Rockies.

Manitoba was the only province in between not reporting fires.

Huge Loss in Quebec

Greatest damage was reported on the eastern flank of the fire front where timber valued between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 was destroyed by flames sweeping through the Laurentian district of St. Donat, Que. Eight hundred fire-fighters, including 400 soldiers in that area were trying to hold back the fire until rain came.

Bad Fire at Gogama

One of the worst fires in the history of Northern Ontario was burning in the Gogama area 30 miles south of Sudbury. Forestry Branch officials were ready today to send 150 men from North Bay into the region where the burned area was estimated at 200 square miles.

North of Sudbury-North Bay region the mining communities of Timmins and Kirkland Lake reported some relief from the fires. Flames which menaced Kirkland Lake and the neighboring Macassa Mine were reported definitely under control. Scattered showers helped Timmins fire-fighters to get flames under control and they were reported almost extinguished.

On the far western flank of the fire front, H. E. Gray, homesteader of the Rocky Mountain house district of Alberta, and his wife and seven children were saved after the wind changed direction and sent a bush fire roaring against their cabin. They lost their home, clothing, furniture and all Gray's winter wages.

Valuable Pulpwood Menaced

The fire in the Nipigon area menaced some of the most valuable pulpwood lands in Ontario, although forest officials said so far it had burned mainly brush and scrub. It also endangered the buildings of the Nipigon Pulp Mill, main support of the townspeople.

Twenty miles northeast of Nipigon, the McKirdy camp of Thomas Falls was reported to have been destroyed and 300 woodsmen forced to flee. A camp official said 150 of these men had reached Nipigon and some of the men had told him they believed the remainder had got out safely.

Milk Production Climbs

Returns reaching the dairy branch of the Agriculture Department show that milk production is climbing rapidly in Ontario and Quebec. In the week of May 3 cheese production was still 31.3 per cent below 1940 figures. For the week of May 10 the production was down 4.8 per cent and the week ended May 17 it was five per cent more than a year ago.

Despite the heavy consumption of milk in concentrated milk production and heavier butter production as compared with last year, cheese production will continue to grow, officials here said.

By taking over the entire production of Ontario and Quebec and shipping it to Great Britain, officials said, Canada would be able to overtake the shortage of the first weeks under the agreement.

No Domestic Shortage for Present

Board officials said the action would not cause any shortage of cheese for domestic consumption, for the present at least, as there were ample supplies of cheese being aged for the domestic market.

How long the order would remain in effect would depend on the cheese production in the two provinces and the needs of Great Britain.

CANADIANS TO BE TAXED HEAVIER THAN EXPECTED

25 P. C. Tax on Soft Drinks Imposed and Tax on Entertainment Extended

DEBATE NEAR END

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 23 —(CP)— Canadians of all classes and all ages are to be taxed even more heavily than contemplated in the war budget Finance Minister Ilsley presented last April 29.

A general tax of 25 per cent on all soft drinks was announced by the Minister last night, effective today, and at the same time Mr. Ilsley gave notice that the 20 per cent tax on motion picture entertainment would be extended to cover all forms of spectator entertainment, with certain reservations.

After nearly two weeks, end of discussion of the taxation changes in committee of the whole House was in sight today with only one major clause—that which puts building materials on the sales tax list—remaining to be disposed of.

There may still be considerable debate when the bills based upon the budget resolutions are taken up next week.

Many members, representing all parties, for three days tried to have the new Federal tax of three cents a gallon on gasoline made inapplicable to farmers and fishermen.

That effort ended yesterday afternoon when the original budget resolution was adopted without vote, but there was a division of the House earlier on a ruling of Chairman Vien that an amendment proposed by T. C. Douglas, (C.C.F. Weyburn) was out of order.

Amendment Lost

The amendment, fourth of its kind to fall before the rules of procedure, sought to provide exemption for farmers and fishermen, the loss in revenue to be made up by increasing the tax rate on other users of gasoline.

The Chairman's ruling was appealed by A. W. Neill (Ind. Comox-Alberni) and the House divided 112 to 48 to support the ruling. It was a straight party vote, all the Liberals voting against the combined opposition groups.

Mr. Ilsney said there had been complaint that the tax of 20 per cent on motion picture entertainment was discriminatory and it had been decided to place it upon all spectator entertainment for which admission is charged.

But the Minister of National Revenue will have power to grant exemptions for entertainment which are not regular and do not follow any pre-arranged schedule, those which are not conducted to profit the promoters, and those from which the proceeds go entirely to charitable, religious or patriotic purposes.

Night club entertainments which do not charge admission will not be taxed.

There was quite general approval of the proposed extension, which will become effective in about three weeks, but a number of Conservative members urged the Minister to make the tax 10 per cent instead of 20, with the argument that the moving pictures were the entertainment of the poor man and children.

Letter to The Editor

Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

Dear Sir,—I happened to see a column in yesterday's Intelligencer in which a resident of the city suggested that flowers which have been stolen from city parks and private flower beds have been taken by children and sold from door to door.

The reason I am writing this is because I am a local flower grower and have sold my flowers from door to door for many years. I have two sons and two small daughters who deliver these. I also have steady customers who buy from year to year and we would not like this route spoiled by erroneous reports.

Of course it is possible that some children would take advantage of this opportunity to earn spare money, but I would like to make it clear that the flowers which my sons sell have all been grown in my garden. They are carefully bunched by my wife before being sent out and are always flowers which are in season.

If you think the boys (and girls) stole the flowers, ask them where they live. They will gladly tell you and then you may come and see them for yourself. We will welcome anyone at any time.

Hoping you will give this a favorite place in your paper, I remain.

A Local Flower Vendor.

ITALIAN NEWS AGENCY REPORT FROM VICHY QUOTED

New York, May 23 (AP)— The British Broadcasting Corporation was heard today by the Columbia Broadcasting System quoting an Italian news agency report from Vichy that a French tanker in addition to the recently-seized Sheherazade had been intercepted by British units in the Atlantic.

BBC also relayed a Japanese report that French ships had "definitely suspended all calls at Manila on the Philippine Islands."

INVASION FROM

Prime Minister Churchill yesterday told the House of Commons had been engaged by British naval forces was said to have suffered damages and Italian ships were reported seen picking up survivors.

The navy, however, was said to be facing a tough proposition because it must wage a ceaseless fight close to hostile shore bases in the face of constant air attacks.

Furthermore, one source said the Germans are using powerful formations of dive bombers and the combination of heavy air attacks and confined waters in which the battle is being fought has kept the navy from chasing its foe back to its own shores.

Dive-Bombers Suffer Heavily

German dive-bombers attacking the fleet were said to have suffered heavily from anti-aircraft fire and it was reiterated that there doubtlessly has been heavy slaughter among Germans landed on Crete from the air.

London informants emphasized that the navy would hold nothing back to prevent sea-borne reinforcements, guns, tanks and ammunition reaching the Germans who are described as needing them.

One factor favoring the British forces, it was pointed out, are the difficulties of disembarkation on the Cretan Coast.

Candia, the island's largest city, has a quay 650 feet long with a depth alongside of 20 feet. Canea, the island capital and seat of Greek King George II's government in refuge from Athens, has two jetties 160 and 140 feet long with no possibility of direct disembarkation.

Has Concrete Pier

Suda Bay has a concrete pier 240 yards long and also a stone pier.

Besides, it was recalled, the Admiralty announced some time ago that the sea is dangerous for shipping right up to Crete's shores—an indication of the additional hazard for the Germans of British-sown minefields.

The battle, raging in undiminished fury, thus appeared to be resolving itself into a showdown between Britain's might afloat and Germany's air supremacy—factors on which, some military experts believe, the outcome of the whole war may be determined.

Thus far the fleet was said to have stood off and destroyed all sea-borne Nazi units for whose arrival the German air troops have been attempting to establish a bridgehead.

Authoritative sources here said at noon today that although no sea-borne landings of Nazis had been made on the embattled island up to dusk last night, the invasion from the sky—in parachutes, gliders and troop transports—was continuing.

Whether the British Navy can maintain control of the sea lanes between Crete and the Greek mainland under the threat of mass assaults by dive bombers was the question of the day.

The Nazis claim their bombers have sunk four British cruisers and several destroyers and damaged a number of other warships in two days of action around Crete, but the British Admiralty thus far has not mentioned any losses.

Fighting on the island itself was described as intensely bitter and unlike anything that has gone before in the war, with a hundred separate engagements raging simultaneously.

"There are no lines of communication or supply, no front line or reserve positions," declared one military source. "It is a case of every man for himself".

Main centres of fighting, however, apparently were at the Port of Candia near the centre of the island, and Malemi Airport, farther west, both of which the Nazis have occupied.

British and Greek troops were reported counter-attacking at both points in an attempt to dislodge the invaders.

Casualties among Nazi parachute troopers have been high.

The Germans were reported, however, to be hurling more and more troops into the fray. Transport planes were said to be shuttling back and forth from the Greek mainland in a steady stream, bringing fresh men and supplies.

There no longer were any Royal Air Force fighter planes on Crete to oppose this movement, because of the lack of Airport facilities, it was announced yesterday.

Many of the German Air transports cracked up in attempting to land on the pitted surface of Malemi Airport—the only good air base on the island—which was said to be under constant fire by British artillery.

London's morning newspapers treated the news from Crete gravely.

Said the Daily Herald: "The nation learns with reverence of the heroism with which its soldiers sailors and airmen are showing in the defence of Crete. Nothing is to be gained by minimizing the handicap under which they are fighting . . . if we should win, the blow to German prestige will be immense".

The Daily Telegraph commented —"The defence is seriously handicapped by the entire absence of fighter planes . . .Until the still-confused picture assumes clearer outlines there is little to do but wait and hope".

Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express said "The news is serious but that is as we expected when Hitler goes all out on a fresh project". The paper added that Prime Minister Churchill "has the support of the people in good times and in bad. ."

"The most disturbing item of news given by the Prime Minister was that our troops are once again fighting without support from the air for the lack of airdromes", The Times said. "The strain in such conditions must be intense. . .there is no doubt that the defence is putting up a magnificent resistance and that the losses of the enemy even without taking into account the numbers drowned as a result of naval action have been very heavy. But he can afford considerable losses and Crete is a prize worth sacrifices".

(Dispatches from Istanbul, Turkey, quoted high diplomatic sources as saying that Nazi agents there had characterized the Battle of Crete as the first step toward Nazi occupation of Suez—which they predicted within two months.

(The Nazis were said to be boasting that British forces would be dislodged successively from Cyprus, Palestine and Egypt.)

Authoritative circles in London said today the Nazi foothold at Malemi airport was the only "decent" one they had and described the situation around Heraclean (Candia) as "satisfactory", but said they had no information on the Suda Bay sector.

Asked if it were conceivable that the British forces could hold out in Crete in view of the withdrawal of fighter planes and what happened in Norway, France and the Balkans when dive bombers attacked troops continuously, one source replied: "Yes, it is conceivable".

At a training school the volunteers are given rigorous physical training and then start jumping from platforms. A dummy airplaine fuselage is used to instruct them in dropping rapidly through the hatch in the bottom of a plane.

After this initial training they are assigned to parachute units where they get actual parachute jumping practice and specialized infantry training.

"Dropping the men is only a small part of the job," said the colonel. "They must be able to fight with special tactics."

The movies illustrated the amazing development of the army's sky raiding corps and showed a squadron of planes dropping about 200 paratroops. The men popped out of the hatches in the bottom of the planes at second intervals, a secret automotive device opening the chutes. Each carried weapons, some Bren guns, some Tommy guns or rifles and revolvers.

The paratroops wear flying helmets, gabardine jackets over battle dress, high leather boots with rubber soles, and knee pads similar to those worn by Canadian basketball players.

On landing they can release their chutes and harness in a few seconds, ready to harass the enemy with guerrilla fighting.

Now Darlan said, "In May, 1941, the victor has agreed to negotiate with the French Government."

The Vice-Premier said he had gone to Berchtesgaden to confer with Hitler at the latter's request but said Vichy "freely chooses the road which she has taken."

"At no moment in the conversations (with Hitler) was there a question of France abandoning in any way her sovereignty," he said emphatically.

Darlan told the French people their duty was "clearly traced"—"Follow the Marshal (Petain), and aid him with all your force, as I am doing, in his work of national restoration. Like him, like me, in your thoughts be inspired only by the interests of France."

Darlan outlined his conversations with Hitler in a series of clipped sentences at the beginning of his five-minute speech:

"The chancellor did not ask me to hand over our fleet to him.

"Everyone knows—and the English better than anyone else—that I will never hand it over to anyone.

"The chancellor did not ask me for any colonial territory. He did not ask me to declare war on England.

"Why has he acted so? Germany began the war alone and judges herself able to end it alone against any coalition.

"At no moment in the conversation was there a question of France abandoning in any way her sovereignty.

"France freely is choosing the road which she is taking.

"On her depend her present and her future.

"She will have the peace which she makes herself.

"She will have the place in the organization of Europe which she will have made for herself."

Gracie Fields And Alec Templeton Share First Victory Loan Broadcast

Gracie Fields — the Lancashire lass who stole the show from a galaxy of New York and Hollywood Stars in Radio City Music Hall this spring—will share the limelight with Alec Templeton, world-famous blind pianist, in the first big War Loan broadcast this evening.

When it comes to raising money for the war, Gracie is in a class by herself. In Canada last summer, she set an all-time record of 50 shows in 50 consecutive one-night stands across Canada, covering 10,000 miles of travel, entertaining live audiences of 100,000 people, and collecting $100,000, net, for the Navy League. Since then she has donated her services to British War Relief shows in fifty of the major cities of the United States, helping to raise several hundred thousand dollars. In addition to her formal and sensational appearance on the stage of New York's Radio City Music Hall, she repeated her triumph there on another "war bundles" programme, when she was discovered as a member of the audience. The show was stopped and Gracie was compelled to stand and sing from her box seat.

Alec Templeton, who is also a British-born star, has been equally successful in his conquest of North America. As a musician he is sufficiently talented to be featured repeatedly as the guest artist on major symphonic programmes. But as an entertainer, his brilliantly absurd piano antics and improvisations repeatedly overcome even his most sedate audiences in gales of laughter. Listeners tonight will probably be given a taste of both Alec Templetons —the musical maestro and the musical clown.

During the broadcast, it is expected that brief appeals on behalf of the Victory Loan will be made by the Governor-General and by the Hon. J. L. Ilsley, Minister of Finance, speaking from Ottawa.

The programme itself will emanate from Vancouver, and will take the air at 10 p.m. E.D.S.T.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma had the car out this afternoon, wich she's not suppose to on account of not being a naturally good driver, and after supper she said to pop, Willyum will you attend to my tickit and pay my fine?

Yee gods it's happened, pop said. With a city full of buss lines, trollies and taxicabs, you had to go and drive the sparrow, yee gods, he said and ma said, Now please dont go off on a wild tangent till you hear what happened, because when you know all the facts you may enjoy a different frame of mind. Can you imagine a woman delibritly running through a red light and banging right into the side of my car, and then trying to argue me and the traffic policeman into the position that it was all my fault? she said.

I can imagine a woman driver doing anything, even that, pop said. A scatterbrain like that ought to get 3 tickits and a sanity test. But do you mean to say you got a tickit too? This thing is getting to be a racket and by gollies I'm going to see that that traffic officer is called up on the carpet and make to explain, he said, and ma said, That's just it, Willyum, I mean that's not quite it, I mean I was the woman who went through the light and came up against the other woman's car, although it wasn't much more than a good severe nudge, and what added coals of fire to the traffic officer's rage was my trying to blame it on the other woman. The reason I described it the other way around was so you could judge the case impersonly, and now that you know how far I really was in the wrong, with your public spirited sense of justice you ought to be glad to go and pay the fine she said.

Yee gods, it's a woman's world and I can prove it, pop said.

And he put ma's tickit in his wallet and got in back of the sporting page.

CHAPTER XXX

The tiny hands on Devona's own watch pointed at five minutes past 2 when Macias finally turned off the main boulevard into a quieter street swung into a curving drive. The Louis Quatorze! Devona recognized it instantly.

Macias still didn't speak as the velvet-lined elevator carried them up to his elaborate suite. Not until he'd closed the door dismissed the houseboy, did he turn toward her, fix her with the black, smiling cruelty of those dark eyes.

Calmly he tapped the white shoe box he carried under his arm. "I'll put this away first, Dona, my darling. Nasty stuff—heroin. I don't think you'd like it."

Mute, she watched him cross the long drawing room to the blotchy oil painting of the Monterey pines. Touching the heavy gold frame at the corner, he slid back the picture, revealing the efficient little wall safe.

Shuddering, she turned her back to the Monterey pines.

"Cold?" Macias' voice taunted her. "I'll mix a drink."

"No, thanks."

"Come, sit down." He indicated one of the matching chairs flanking the huge fireplace. "We have lots to chat about, you and I."

In the Spider's Web

Obediently, she dropped into the thick-cushioned chair, watched him take a cork coaster from a small drawer in the mahogany lamp table, set the sweating highball glass on it meticulously.

Grimly, she notched her chin high, met his eyes steadily.

"Now, my darling, suppose you tell me why you so thoughtfully went on that little errand for me?"

Alert, Devona played for time. "Just for—fun."

"Pretty dangerous fun—isn't it?"

She shrugged. "Maybe."

"Of course it had nothing to do with young Brasher?" he said, smiling as he drained his glass.

"It would have—if I'd gotten away with it," she admitted cooly, amazed that the terror inside didn't show in her voice.

He nodded. "Yes, I thought so. Too bad you didn't get away with it, too. Young Brasher is going to need help."

Facing a Quiz

Devona felt her cheeks blanche but she kept her voice steady. "Really? You've been so—co-operative—already, too haven't you?"

"Yes. Until just recently, I've been able to give Brasher advice that has kept him out of danger very nicely." He smiled wickedly. "But now—since he has been disregarding my suggestions——" He let that drift off into a sinister little silence.

"I only wanted to be sure what your connection is with this little deal." Macias was saying, "before I—shall we say—help young Brasher to retire."

By marshaling every shred of self-control of which she was capable, she didn't let a flicker of emotion show in her face. "Nothing. Mr. Brasher didn't even know I suspected anything."

"No? Really, now, Dona." He smiled, poured himself another brandy. "You don't expect me to believe that."

"Why not? It happens to be the truth."

He just looked at her over the rim of his glass. "You are a beautiful little liar, Dona. But——" he shrugged, "—we'll change all that. How long since you have suspected that I managed this little—enterprise?"

"Oh—I don't remember."

"And——" the laugh was gone now, "how many people have you told?"

"None. I wanted to figure things out for myself."

He Makes an Offer

"I see"—skeptically. "You're a cool little customer. Have you figured out what will happen now?"

"No——" a wry little smile. "I think I can leave that up to you."

He scowled. "What exactly, does Dale Brasher mean to you?"

"Nothing," and kept her fingers crossed.

"How would you like to play the game my way?"

She toyed idly with the strap of her handbag and stalled, 'Meaning——?"

"Meaning that you'll have a chance to make yourself some nice change. I could use a lovely woman very nicely—a lovely woman with daring and brain and—the right attitude."

She smiled. "Thanks, mister, for the compliments."

"Besides——" deliberately, he filled his glass again, "it wouldn't be healthy for you to go on meddling in matters you don't understand."

"Maybe if you — explained——"

Slowly he put down his glass, leaned toward her. "A smart girl like you ought to be able to guess."

A Dire Threat

Macias came to stand just behind her, the sound of his heavy breathing, the touch of his hands on her arms made her shudder involuntarily as he turned her toward him.

"Going to be sensible, sweetheart, and listen to reason?" he asked, his eyes already sure of her. "I can make things pretty sweet for you—if you'll just play along with me."

Trying not to let her repulsion show, she cocked an eyebrow impudently. "And—if I don't——"

His fingers tightened on her arm. "You will. You like this place. You like nice things. You'll like it here much better than the place—I'd have to send you. Just to keep you out of danger, of course."

Of course. Devona's heart hammered like a piston. "I see."

Facing a Pistol

Behind them a closet door opened suddenly and some one laughed—a shrill, hysterical sound that was mirthless and horrible.

Startled, Macias released Devona. They both turned to face a slim, fair-haired girl — and the muzzle of a grim little pistol.

It was the girl who'd come to the El Mexicano that evening, Devona recognized now. Freda Camp. One of Macias' castoffs.

"Freda! How the hell did you get in here?" Macias took one step toward her, but she waved him back.

"Just stay where you are, dearie. I want to get a good look at you before I send you where you belong."

"Listen, Freda. You can't pull this stuff. You——" Macias blustered.

"Can't I? And why not? You need killing, you know."

"Maybe I do——" calmly enough. "But what good will that do you? The cops will catch up with you and——"

"Oh, no they won't, dearie. Because this time I'm going right along with you—via the next bullet. The cops and the newsboys will have a lot of fun with the story." She smiled calmly at Devona. "Maybe they'll even think this, dame did the job. No witnesses. Motive—jealousy. Make good headlines, anyway, won't we, Jose?"

Old Trick Works

Devona felt him stiffen, reach calmly for a cigarette.

"Well—" he began, calmly, but his eyes never left the girl's face. "—go ahead. If you've made up your mind——"

He struck a match, touched the flickering flame to the cigarette, and then, as if bv accident, flicked it directly toward the girl's face.

Only a moment's distraction, but enough. A moment later he had leaped to her side, wrenched the little pistol from her hand, thrust her, cursing, into a chair where he held her easily.

"Damn you! Damn you! Give me that!" she cried hysterically, and then burst into tears.

Sending Her Away

Devona heard her own breath release itself in a little scream as she sagged into a chair.

"Oh, no." Macias pointed the little gun at her now. "Just sit where you are until you get back your senses—if you have any. You blundering little fool."

His swarthy face flushed purple with anger now. Devona clung desperately to the chair arms, terribly sorry, in the midst of her own terrors, for the pitiful creature huddled in the corner of the big sofa. Macias was furious. Part of it probably the reaction of his own startled fright. Part of it, his wrath at being taken by surprise. Ego-ridden, he'd want to run, all of the show. The girl had succeeded in surprising him, holding him—even for a minute—at her mercy. She'd pay for that.

"I've told you to beat it," he raged. "I even gave you the dough to beat it out of the State. Why didn't you go?"

"I — I couldn't. I wanted to——"

"The hell with what you wanted. Think I'm going to have you hanging around here when every cop in town has you spotted for a hophead?"

"And whose fault is that, I'd like to know?" she screamed, with what was, apparently, her last shred of defiance. In another moment she buried her face in her arms, lay quivering with sobs.

Macias scowled at her a moment. Then he picked up a telephone; gave a number curtly.

"Hello! Speak to Wong."

A moment's silence. Then: "Wong? Got a job for you. Get here as quick as you can."

Replacing the receiver, he turned to the trembling girl on the sofa. "Wong'll see that you get out of town," he said, with an abrupt laugh. "And that you don't come back, either. Maybe next time you'll obey orders."

Slowly horror poured awful realization into Devona's numbed brain. He didn't—he couldn't—mean that—that——

"Jose!" She sprang to her feet. "You don't mean — you aren't going to——"

He whirled on her. "Shut up. Unless you want to go along!"

Knock at the Door

A discreet knock at the outside door—two short taps a pause; then three more.

Macias went to answer. "There's Wong now."

He must have been waiting downstairs, Devona realized. Perhaps Macias had thought it would be necessary to send her with Wong. Instead, this girl who——

But it wasn't Wong's repellent face she saw when Macias swung open the door. Instead—several faces. Most of them strange. Men in uniform. The police!

And an instant later Devona looked—for the second time in the last half hour—directly into the muzzle of a gun. This time the grim, stony face behind the gun was—Dale's!

"Hands up, please!" he ordered, curtly. "All of you!"

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food CONTAINS VITAMIN B1

Rawdon

The May meeting of Mount Pleasant Rawdon Woman's Missionary Society was held at the church on Wednesday afternoon with fifteen in attendance.

The service opened with quiet music played by Mrs. John Holmes. The president gave the call to worship "A Creed of Christian Living." The roll call was answered with the keyword "Strength." Mrs. Frank Jeffs read the Bible lesson and Mrs. Arthur Phillips brought a devotional message on "Stewardship" and closed with an appropriate poem. A litany of the "Disciples Way" was read. The minutes were read and the treasurer reported $54.10 to date which is a decrease of fifteen dollars from 1940.

Messages of thanks was received from folks who had been remembered with gifts and letters. Final plans were made for the 40th celebration at the church with every woman on Rawdon circuit specially invited and the men are welcome.

The program of the day was arranged by Mrs. J. E. Beckel and it was regretted that she was attending the funeral of her brother that afternoon and the prayers of the members led by Mrs. Ross Hoard were voiced that she be given strength and comfort. Mrs. Carleton Potts contributed a vocal number "Take all your heartaches to Jesus." Mrs. Edgar McKeown read an appropriate selection entitled "These plans of ours" telling how even though Jesus planned well, His plans often went astray.

The last of the study book was given by Miss Muriel Sine assisted by Miss Eileen MacMullen. The story entitled "Surgeon of the Skeena" was a brief resume of the life and work of Rev. Horace C. Wrinch M.D., D.D., Hazelton, B.C.

After the wedding of Dr. and Mrs. Wrinch and a visit to friends including the young people of Belleville and Picton districts the Wrinches travelled to Vancouver and spent the winter of 1899 at Port Essington. Later they journeyed to Kispiox and set up a dispensary and here Mrs. Wrinch acted as public health nurse. In 1900 they moved to Hazelton and in 1903 a hospital was built and Dr. Wrinch gave more than 150,000 hospital days of service before he retired. The W.M.S. cooperated and the Doctor helped the Indians in their villages to learn of the value of gardens and good Jersey milk.

From 1924 to 1933 Dr. Wrinch represented Omenica riding in the British Columbia legislative. He welcomed the coming of the G. T. Railway and in 1931 a new fifty bed modern hospital was erected.

He died in October 1939 and thus this great Canadian preacher, physician, surgeon, parliamentarian, lived out his life leaving his church and his community eternally in his debt.

Prayer for medical missionaries in Canada followed and a few missionary items gleaned here and there. The offering of $5.52 was received and dedicated. The service closed with a hymn of concentration and the National Anthem.

She was a faithful member of the Women's Missionary Society and Women's Association and attended until stricken with an illness which kept her confined to her room for the past eight months. In her passing the community has lost another valued member who will be greatly missed.

What gets me is(the number of civilians that can take it just as fast as it's dished out, and still ask for more, pop said. By gollies I dont think I could do it. The first time the roof fell on me I'd have serious doubts, and the 2nd time it fell on me I'd want to sign a separate peace, he said, and ma said, Well you'd never get my signature on it, we're all human beans under the skin and I'm sure I could take it with the rest of them if my patriotism was threatened.

That's what you say now, at a safe distance from the bombs and fires, but if I even called up a picture of a few of the things you'd have to go through, you'd want to resign before you were elected, pop said, and ma said, O would I? Well just call up a picture and see how much I decoil, she said.

All right, imagine yourself shopping in Hookbinders gas mask department, and a bomb falls through the ceiling and blows both your shoes off, and without even pausing to ask for a credit slip you rush down to the shelter beneath the basement, and there you shiver for 4 hours till the all clear signal is sounded, and you no more get out in the fresh air when it happens all over again and you find yourself in another airless and heatless and foodless hole after dodging 3 falling walls and a shower of shattered window panes, wouldn't you of had enough? pop said, and ma said, Certainly not, I'd just be getting hardened to it.

That's lucky, because in the 2nd air raid shelter a mouse runs right up your back, pop said, and ma skreetched as if it was really happening, saying, Willyum Potts I'll never forgive you, how can you say such a cowardly thing, and if you think it's funny you're the only one that's laughing.

PAINTING OVER WHITE WASH—

To use any kind of oil paint over this surface would invite trouble. Lime wash is a tough proposition to remove. Sandblasting would be the best way out of it, but in doing so a lot of the joints would be blown out and have to be refilled. Also some of the softer bricks would be greatly affected. You may try a strong caustic soda solution. Add some paste to it to keep it from drying up too quickly . Give it several coats and rinse with a hose and plenty of water, aided by scrubbing and scraping. Thorough cleaning is required to remove all traces of the caustic.

FIERCE BATTLES RAGE AROUND CRETE AIRDROME

EIRE GOV'T TO DISCUSS CONSCRIPTION ISSUE

Fleet Smashes Axis Convoys To Prevent Landings

Germans, However, Succeed In Bringing In" Some Artillery And Some Mortars"

POSITIONS HELD

London, May 24 —(CP)— Britain will fight on against the Nazi invasion of Crete at almost any sacrifice, authoritative sources said today, as the battle for the Mediterranean island raged through its fifth day.

An authorized declaration that the British forces do not intend to use Crete's southern ports for embarkation and others cautioning the people to expect naval losses were taken generally to mean there will be no retreat.

Prime Minister Churchill declared before the invasion that the island will be defended to the death and without thought of withdrawal.

British reports available up to late today indicated the defenders were holding an edge in the fighting.

A fierce battle was being fought around Malemi airdrome, where British and Greek forces are seeking to dislodge Nazi sky troops with artillery, tanks and machine guns.

Authoritative sources said they had received no information indicating the Nazis had succeeded in landing sea-borne troops on the Greek island "on any scale," but said it was probable that some odd caiques (Greek sailing vessels) had reached the coast.

Describing the situation at Malemi as "not so good," one source said Nazi planes continued to land troops there yesterday and also had brought in "some artillery and some mortars." He said the artillery probably was 75 millimetre or smaller.

Earlier information had indicated the island's defenders were holding the upper hand as the battle entered its fifth furious and apparently climactic day, primarily because the British fleet had smashed Axis convoys around Crete and thus prevented landings of troops and supplies.

British and Greek forces were holding a position east of Nazi-held Malemi and sources here said the situation at Heraclean (Candia) and Retimo, from which the Nazis were reported thrown yesterday, "seems to be all right."

Cleaned Out of Two Coastal Points

Most Nazis have been cleaned from those two coastal points, informed circles said, although acknowledging there might be some odd pockets of resistance left. At Heraclean British troops were reported to be collecting supplies dropped by German planes to nourish the ground forces.

The navy's job keeping sea-borne troops away from Crete's rocky shores can't be "child's play", Britons said, since the navy must have a great deal of difficulty in contending with warplanes.

For this reason, they said, it would seem improbable that the fleet would be able to prevent every vessel from landing troops or supplies along the coast.

Berlin Claims Nine Ships Sunk in Convoy

Berlin, May 24 (AP)—Nazi spokesmen asserted today that Germna submarines have attacked a British convoy in waters near Greenland.

They said the Greenland attack was the one reported in the High Comamnd's communique yesterday which claimed nine merchant ships totalling 70,000 tons were sunk.

(London sources yesterday warned that U-boat attacks in the western part of the Atlantic must now be expected. There was no confirmation, however, of the Nazi claim of sinking 70,000 tons.)

British Shipping Losses Total 30,732 Tons In Week Ending May 23

(By The Canadian Press)

Report on the war at sea becoming available during the week ended May 23 indicated the loss of four British merchant ships aggregating 30,732 tons and two neutral vessels totalling 14,847 tons.

While first reports of these sinkings became available during the week under review, some of the sinkings are believed to have occurred as long ago as early April.

The British vessels included the Canadian oil tanker Canadolite, 11,309 tons, believed sunk off the west coast of Africa, and the former Great Lakes vessel Portodoc, 1,746 tons, sunk in the South Atlantic April 7.

The Germans, however, claimed the Canadolite was captured by their naval forces as a prize of war.

The others were the City of Shanghai, 5,828 tons, and the 11,849-ton Huntingdon. The neutral ships were the 8,299-ton Zamzam, Egyptian, and the 6,548-ton Josefine Thorden, Finnish.

SYDNEY WELCOMES PREMIER MENZIES

Arrives Home After 40,000 Mile Tour of Middle East, Britain, United States and Canada

Sydney, May 24.— (AP)—A large cheering crowd, including Cabinet ministers and members of his family, greeted Prime Minister R. G. Menzies today as he arrived back after a 40,000 mile tour of the Middle East, Britain, Canada and the United States.

In a broadcast shortly afterwards Prime Minister Menzies declared that the impending "critical phases" of the war meant that Australia must concentrate to the limit of her resources on war production and must reduce unessential production and imports.

The Prime Minister said that all the countries he had visited admired the magnitude of Australia's military and industrial effort. He declared the great and growing aid from the United States would materially assist in shortening the conflict.

CLAIMS GREEK ATTEMPTS LIFE ALBANIAN PREMIER

Report Says Car In Which Italy's King Rode Was Fired At During Visit to Tirana

SHOTS GO WILD

Rome, May 24 (AP).—A Greek, declared "affected by poetic madness", emptied a pistol at the motor car in which King Victor Emmanuel was riding with the Albanian premier during the monarch's visit to Albania May 17, Italian dispatches from Tirana disclosed today. All shots went wild.

The assailant, whose name was given as Vassal Laci Mihailoff, was arrested, the dispatches said, "and saved from lynching by the people so as not to complicate investigations begun to run down his possible accomplices."

In the motorcar with the king was Shefket Verlaci, who has been premier of Albania since the Italians first invaded that country early in 1939.

Attempt On Verlaci.

The official announcement described the affair as an attempt on the life of Verlaci.

News of this "criminal act", said the Tirana dispatches, was withheld until today, pending question of the prisoner.

"During questioning which lasted until yesterday," the dispatches continued, "Vassal Laci Mihailoff expressed personal feelings against members of the Albanian government for not having received and employed him, and his intention was to disturb the exaltation of the Albanian people.

"Trial against him is imminent and it will take place before the tribunal of the armed forces in Albania."

King Victor Emmanuel returned to Rome by air from Tirana on May 17 after a week's tour of the Albanian front.

Rumors that four or five shots were fired at the king in an attempted assassination of the Sovereign himself had been current in Rome since his return. Nothing was disclosed in authoritative quarters, however, until today's version of the shooting was given out.

U. S. Warned Against Dangers Of South American Invasion

Washington, May 24 (CP)—The United States was warned in strong language this week of the danger of Nazi penetration—an accomplished fact in aviation— in South America.

Oswald Ryan, member of the United States Civil Areonautics Board, made it plain in a broadcast address Thursday night that Axis-owned and operated airlines form a ring around South America and that commercial profit is not the controlling motive.

"These airlines either operate in sparsely - settled territory where there is no commercial demand or commercial justification for the service, or they operate in territory where the commercial advantages are insignificant as compared with the political and strategic advantages to be obtained," Ryan said.

"Thus the Axis network in South America is not a commercial enterprise; it is the well-considered instrument of a national policy, a policy which is bent upon the cultural and political domination of the South American continent; a policy, which, backed by the financial aid of Axis governments, has the support of one of the most effective propaganda machines the modern world has known."

Ryan said no thinking person could doubt the potential danger of this development to the security of the Western Hemisphere. He said many of the planes flown by the German airlines are identical in type with transports used by the Nazi air force in the invasions of Norway and the Low Countries.

" . . . some of the landing fields of this Axis network are within bombing range of important United States bases in Trinidad, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands; and within bombing range of that key to our naval and military defence, the Panama Canal . . ."

Colombia, Peru and Bolivia, he said, are the only South American countries that have taken steps to break the Axis hold on aviation. He asserted a big job lay ahead to clear the "Trojan Horse" out of South America.

Axis-controlled airlines now cover 22,000 miles of scheduled routes —only 200 miles less than the total routes of Pan American Airways and all its affiliates in the southern continent.

Churchill Tells Britons What to Do if Huns Try Invasion Of Britain

Message of Prime Minister Accompanies Official Leaflet 'Beating the Invader,' 14,000,000 Copies of Which Will 'Be Distributed' on Tuesday

London, May 24—(CP)—If Nazi troops attempt to take the British Isles, "it may easily be some weeks before the invader has been totally destroyed," Prime Minister Churchill warned Britons today in a message accompanying an official "beating the invader" leaflet.

The Post Office will distribute 14,000,000 copies of the leaflet next Tuesday to instruct the public what to do in case an invasion is attempted.

Mr. Churchill's message, painting a graphic picture of what may be expected, said:

"If invasion comes, everyone—young, old, men and women—will be eager to play their part worthily. By far the greater part of the country will not be immediately involved.

"Even along our coasts the greater part will remain unaffected. But where the enemy lands, or tries to land, there will be most violent fighting.

"Not only will there be battles when the enemy tries to come ashore, but afterward there will fall upon his lodgements very heavy British counter-attacks and all the time his lodgements will be under heaviest attack by British bombers.

"The fewer civilians or non-combatants in these areas the better—apart from essential workers who must remain. So if you are advised by authority to leave the place where you live, it is your duty to go elsewhere when you are told to leave.

"When the attack begins it will be too late to go; and unless you receive definite instructions to move, your duty then will be to stay where you are.

"You will have to get into the safest place you can find and stay there until the battle is over. For all of you then, the order and the duty will be—'stand firm.'

"This also applies to people inland if a considerable number of parachutists or air-borne troops are landed in their neighborhood. Above all, they must not cumber the roads.

"Like their fellow-countrymen on the coasts, they must 'stand firm'.

"Home guards supported by strong mobile columns, wherever the enemies' numbers require it, will immediately come to grips with the invaders and, there is little doubt, will soon destroy them.

"Throughout the rest of the country where there is no fighting going on and no close cannon fire or rifle fire can be heard, everyone will govern his conduct by the second great order and duty, namely—carry on.

"It may easily be some weeks before the invader has been totally destroyed, that is to say, killed or captured to the last man who landed on our shores.

Meanwhile all work must be continued to the utmost and no time lost.

"The following notes have been prepared to tell everyone in rather more detail what to do and they should be carefully studied.

"Each man and woman should think out a clear plan of personal action in accordance with the general scheme."

The leaflet, which has been under consideration for more than a month, gives answers to fourteen questions on invasion most frequently asked by the public, and urges:

"Give all help you can to our troops. Do not tell the enemy anything. Do not give him anything. Do not help him in any way."

'VICTORY TORCH' DEDICATED BY CHURCH, STATE

Will be Carried Across Canada, Thence to England for Presentation to Churchill

GUARD OF HONOR

Victoria, May 24 (CP).—Dedicated with full military honors a giant bronze torch engraved with the words "Part of the Tools—Canada's Victory Loan, 1941" left today by bomber plane, bound for embattled Britain where it will be presented to Prime Minister Churchill as a symbol of Canada's determined war effort.

Detachments from the naval, military and air forces formed a guard of honor at Thunderbird Park here as the torch was dedicated by the churchmen and Premier Pattullo.

In a 10-minute dedication address by radio, the premier said "May God speed this symbolic torch to its destination. May it carry the light of love, the breath of inspiration and the strength of unswerving resolution of the people of the Motherland and all associated with her in the task of preservation of the freedom of mankind.

"When it shall be held aloft in the grip of Britain's prime minister, Winston Churchill we know that it will shine with ever-increasing effulgence and will never be dimmed."

Lieut.-Governor E. W. Hamber handed the torch to a guard of honor representing the three services and they whisked it off to the waiting bomber at the nearby Royal Canadian Air Force station at Patricia Bay.

The honor guard will accompany the torch on its flight across Canada, with the first stop at Vancouver later today where other dedication ceremonies will take place.

The four-foot, five-inch torch is being flown to Britain in conjunction with Canada's $600,000,000 victory loan drive which opens June 2. By that date the torch will be well advanced in its flight across Canada, probably at Fort William and Port Arthur.

CANADA-U. S. RESOURCES WILL BE CO-ORDINATED

Economic Planning Boards Will be Set Up in Both Countries

TO ASSIST WAR

By J. F. SANDERSON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, May 24 (CP)—Canada and the United States have agreed to set up economic planning boards to integrate the combined resources of the two countries in prosecution of the war.

Official announcement of the latest in a series of steps to coordinate the war production programs of the two countries may be made in Ottawa and Washington next week, together with the names of the men appointed.

It is understood there that the boards, consisting of three men from each country, will act both jointly and independently. The Canadian Board will survey Canadian resources, manufacturing capacity, supplies of wartime necessities and other economic factors such as priorities, reporting to the Canadian Government.

Meanwhile, the American Board will make the same sort of survey in the United States and make its report to Washington.

It will then be up to the two Governments to take action to integrate and harmonize the industrial war efforts of the two countries.

The General purpose is to carry out the spirit of the Hyde Park declaration which pledged the two nations to the "prompt and effective utiluization" of the "productive facilities of North America," in local and hemisphere defence as well as the most important consideration of winning the war.

COLOGNE BLASTED, ST. NAZAIRE DOCKS UNDER ATTACK

Large Merchant Ship Set Afire By British Bombers Off Netherlands Coast

TANKER DAMAGED

London, May 24 (CP).—The Royal Air Force blasted the industrial city of Cologne last night in its first attack on Western Germany since last Sunday and also pounded the Nazi-occupied Fench coast around Boulogne, it was announced today.

Overnight attacks also were delivered by the Coastal Command on docks at St. Nazaire and airdromes and ports of occupied north-western France.

A communique said a large merchant ship was set afire by bombers off The Netherlands coast and a tanker was damaged by bomb hits off the west coast of France in daylight operations yesterday.

Only light forces took part in the flights over Germany, but observers on Kent coast said sounds rolling across Dover Strait indicated the attack on the French coast was fairly heavy.

German air activity over Britain during the night was light. A few bombs were dropped at scattered places but did little damage and caused few casualties, a communique said.

Nazis Admit Damage

Berlin, May 24.—(AP)—The German High Command today acknowledged that buildings were damaged by Royal Air Force bombers overnight in Cologne and Duesseldorf, and that persons were killed and wounded in various western German localities.

Police Decline To Issue Statement

Toronto, May 24 (CP)—Dr. Howard A. Lowrie, Toronto physician, and James A. Murphy, master control operator at the Toronto studios of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, were arrested by Royal Canadian Mounted Police Friday on charges of violating the Defence of Canada Regulations.

Police said there was no connection between the two arrests. Authorities followed the usual custom in such cases and declined to issue a statement on the specific offences alleged to have been committed.

De Valera Will Give Statement On Monday

Six Counties Northern Ireland Apply To Churchill For Conscription

SUMMONS UNEXPECTED

Dublin, May 24.—(CP)—Premier Eamon De Valera today unexpectedly summoned the Dail Eireann (Parliament) to meet Monday to hear a statement on application of conscription to the six counties of Northern Ireland.

Mr. De Valera has opposed conscription in Northern Ireland because of the number of pro-Eire residents who would be affected.

It was further believed by observers that Mr. De Valera would elaborate his position regarding Eire's defence and growing economic difficulties.

At the same time it was reported from Belfast that an anti-conscription meeting had been called.

(Prime Minister J. M. Andrews of Northern Ireland, who has urged the British Government to apply conscription was in London today with four of his Cabinet Ministers for a conference with Prime Minister Churchill on the question. Mr. Churchill has promised a statement at the next session of the House of Commons.)

The proposed anti-conscription pledge of Nationalists at Belfast said: "Denying the right of the Churchill Government to enforce compulsory service in Ireland, we pledge ourselves solemnly to one another to resist conscription by the most effective means at our disposal, consistent with the law of God".

Archbishop Opposed

Joseph Cardinal MacRory, Archbishop of Armagh and Primate of all Ireland, said: "We are convinced that any such attempt (at conscription would be disastrous. Our people have been subjected to the gravest injustice in being cut off by partition from one of the oldest nations in Europe and in being deprived of fundamental rights in their own land. In such circumstances to compel them to fight for oppressors would be likely to rouse them to indignation and resistance, and be regarded by Irishmen, north and south as an outrage on national feeling."

High Ranking Officer Of German Air Corps Killed In Action

Berlin, May 24 (AP)—Gen. Ulrich Grauert, commanding a flying corps, has been killed "while leading the fight against England," the Nazi High Command announced today.

The High Command did not give the locale or circumstances of his death.

The general was an "outstanding soldier, commander" who directed his corps "in supreme achievements in the fight against the British Motherland," a communique said, and he had won special distinctions in the campaigns against Poland, the low countries and France.

He was credited also with a large part in the resurrection of the German Air Force under the Nazis.

As a colonel general, Grauert ranked only one grade below field marshal.

Hepburn Appeals Against Proposal To Tax Bond Holders

Toronto, May 24.—(CP)—A letter containing a personal appeal from Premier Mitchell Hepburn to Prime Minister Mackenzie King asking him to reject the proposal to impose a 15 per cent tax on interest received by non-resident holders of provincial bonds became public today.

Mr. Hepburn said in his letter, dated May 19, the impost "is not only destructive of provincial credit but is opposed to the best interest of Canada in so far as American good will is concerned, and the impost may militate against the success of the approaching war loan campaign".

The Premier released the May 19 letter and the copy of another dated May 21 following a cabinet session yesterday. Details of the Cabinet discussion were not disclosed.

DUMPING DUMMY SOLDIERS

Cairo, May 24.—(AP)—German planes were reported today to be dropping dummy soldiers by parachute in isolated parts of Crete to draw British fire from actual airborne landings.

Many Memorials Built In France Left Intact By Occupation Army

(Editors Note: War Correspondent Preston Grover has just returned to his post in Berlin after a four-month assignment in German-occupied France.)

By PRESTON GROVER

Associated Press Staff Writer.

Berlin, May 24 (CP)—The many statues and memorials of the First Great War built throughout France have for the most part been left intact by the German army of occupation—with notable exceptions.

The exceptions:-

The monument near the Place De La Concorde to Edith Cavell, British nurse, who was executed by the Germans in Belgium on a charge of espionage, was destroyed as soon as the Germans entered Paris.

Also destroyed was a monument near the Czecho-Slovak legation in Paris commemorating establishment of Czecho-Slovakia under the treaty of Versailles.

Eradicate Jewish Features

Immediately after the capture of the fortress of Verdun, the Germans began eradicating the Jewish feature of the monument there. After the First Great War, Jewish people erected a monument containing the names of all Jewish soldiers who died defending Verdun. The Germans trimmed off all these names, but left the monument standing.

German authorities took particular offence at the oft-appearing statue showing France symbolically as a woman standing with her foot on the German eagle, her sword resting across the fallen bird's neck. Several such monuments were "rectified," the Germans said, by eliminating of the eagle, the rest of each monument being left standing.

Statue of Foch Not Touched

The monument in Paris commemorating the part taken by French negro colonial troops in the First Great War was destroyed.

Immediately after capture of the Compiegne Woods, where the 1918 Armistice was signed, the Germans methodically eradicated most of that bitterest of their memories. The concrete plaque containing inscriptions telling of events of that time was blown up. However, the statue of Foch in that vicinity was not touched.

The fire under the Arc De Triomphe over the grave of France's Unknown Soldier of the First Great War still is kept burning and is visited daily by scores of German soldiers coming to Paris on Leave.

The tomb of Napoleon in the Invalides Palace is undisturbed and open freely to the public. Undisturbed also is the sarcophagus in the same chamber containing the body of Marshal Foch, who led the final Allied drive which defeated the Germans in 1917-1918.

Undisturbed also are the huge equestrian monument to Marshal Joffre in the shadow of the Eiffel Tower, even though upon the base of that statue is a description detailing how he outsmarted the Germans in 1914 and drove them back from the outskirts of Paris in the first battle of the Marne.

PEDESTRIAN STRUCK BY CAR ON HIGHWAY

While walking on the highway one mile east of the R.C.A.F. base on Highway No. 2 late last night, John Donahue, no address given, was struck by a passing motor car driven by Gordon Rosenplot, Trenton. Donahue was removed to the Belleville General Hospital in the Air Force ambulance and was found to be suffering from head injuries and multiple cuts and bruises. Dr. Van Blaksiee was in attendance.

Mr. Rosenplot told Motorcycle Patrolman J. H. Hatch, who investigated, that he was meeting an east-bound car and suddenly felt a bump or jar. He stopped his car immediately and found a man lying in the ditch. Mr. Rosenplot assured the police the man must have been walking directly on the highway when struck. Donahue first told Constable Hatch he resided in Belleville and later stated it was Ameliasburg. His national registration card was taken out at Tweed, however.

POLICE BLOTTER

Belleville police were asked to be on the lookout for two stolen automobiles last night.

From Tweed came information that a black Plymouth sedan, bearing Ontario licence plates number 6-W-629 had been stolen. Chief J. C. Hayes of Tweed, reported the theft.

At Point Anne a 1927 model Pontiac sedan was stolen. The vehicle, which carried licence plates number 4-N-919, was left parked by G. Hayes, of 93 West Bridge St., Belleville.

A transient, who gave his name as John Murphy, no address, went into the police station Friday night seeking protection. After questioning the man Sergeant Booth locked him up on a charge of intoxication. Today Chief Kidd revealed the man had been loitering around Belleville for several days.

As a last-minute warning Chief Kidd reminded all citizens to be cautious with the handling of firecrackers and fireworks over the holiday weekend. "Fireworks can be dangerous if handled carelessly. However, with a certain degree of caution practiced by parents and adults the safety of lives and perhaps property can be assured," stated Chief Kidd in his warning to the public.

Capital Closeups

By JOHN DAUPHINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, May 24 (CP)—Chiefs of staff in the three armed services have done their bit in the movies for Canada's $600,000,000 victory loan opening June 2....each has made a "short" for use in Canadian theatres during the drive.

John Grierson, National Film Commissioner, says he's most pleased with the results....Maj.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, Chief of the General Staff, he describes as a "gifted public speaker"....Rear-Admiral Percy Nelles of the Navy has a "quiet and intimate way, very pleasing to an audience"....and Air Vice-Marshal L. S. Breadner, Chief of Air Staff, is "breezy and vital" on the screen.

These three made short movie talks telling Canadians what money raised in the loan will do for forces....During the "shooting" the men who are running the war took orders from the director like any actor.

Mr. Grierson says three more loan pictures are planned..They'll be "something different," but he isn't saying how just yet..So far it isn't intended to have cabinet ministers make film talks as they did for the first two war loans..The Commissioner says Justice Minister Lapointe is more at home before the camera than any of his colleagues.

Mostly About People

The Governor-General and Princess Alice gave a luncheon for Joao Alberto Lins de Barros, new Brazilian Minister to Canada, and his staff..Also present were Jean Desy, former Canadian Minister to Belgium and The Netherlands, and Escott Reid, second secretary at the Legation in Washington....Maybe that's the tipoff they'll be sent to Canada's proposed new Legations in Brazil and Argentina. They've both been mentioned prominently for the jobs.

Surprising, but: Lady May Abel Smith, daughter of the Governor-General, says that of all the things she saw during the recent vice-regal tour of Western Canada the sea-shells at Qualicum Beach, Vancouver Island resort, impressed her most.

Rev. Dan McIvor (Lib. Fort William) got a great cheer from the Lake Superior regiment's guard stationed on Parliament Hill this week..They come from his riding..He spent an hour with the men one evening and one day was seen clambering down from a snub-nosed army truck.

Lunch-hour brings scores of stenographers from the Centre Block to benches along the broad walk up to the main entrance..And most of them take their shoes off.

Walter Lippman, the American columnist, was in the capital Thursday..He met the Prime Minister, Conservative House Leader Hanson and others..Part of the time he watched the House busy on budget tax proposals from a vantage point in the press gallery.

Most eligible bachelor of the Diplomatic Corps is Victor Podoski, Consul-General for Poland....Just by the way Kruczak, his gift spaniel from Quelph, Ont., soon will be a papa.

Odds And Ends

Prime Minister Mackenzie King told the House 13,807 orders-in-council have been passed since the outbreak of war..That works out at about 690 a month, well over 20 a day.

The Senate has two Knights among its members....Sir Allen Aylesworth (Lib. Ontario) is a Knight Commander of the most distinguished order of St. Michael and St. George..Sir Thomas Chapais (Con. Quebec) is a Knight Bachelor.

Ever wonder where Hansard, official record of parliamentary debates, got its name?..It's from Luke Hansard, English printer who started publishing the "Journals of the House of Commons" in London in 1774..His descendants continued to print the parliamentary reports until 1889 and now the name is used generally through the Empire.

Joseph Harris (Con. Toronto-Danforth) spent three years in the first Great War at food conservation duties..Now he's president of Toronto East General Hospital ..He's puting his experience along those lines to use as a member of a House sub-committee which keeps a watchful eye on cost of food and hospital care for the armed services.

Aosta Bids Farewell To Ethiopia By Symbolic Gesture Of Touching Soil

By GODFREY H. P. ANDERSON

Amba Alaji, Ethiopia, Mal 20 (Delayed) (AP)—After one last symbolic touching of the soil of Ethiopia, the Italian Viceroy, Apulia, Duke of Aosta, formally surrendered to his British Imperial conquerors today to conclude a three-day pageant of military victory and defeat replete with the color and contrast which only Africa can supply. The walking wounded surrendered on Sunday; the main body of troops Monday. The Duke remained behind, spending a last night in the echoing emptiness of his fortress atop 10,000-foot now useless Mount Alaji.

Accompanied by a single aide, he stepped today into the sunlight from the cavernous door of Fort Toselli, cast one sweeping look about him with weary eyes, then picked his way carefully down the rugged mountainside amid the hand-grenade cases and other debris of battle.

Salutes Dead Friend

Part-way down, he stopped at a little cemetery, newly dug from the sloping ground under the fort's battered walls.

The aide, two soldiers and I were the only witnesses as the Duke stopped beside the grave of his friend, General Volpini, bared his head, and bowed in tribute to the dead.

The soldiers, who were banking the grave with greenery and carving "Volpini" into a crude headstone, paused to watch disinterestedly.

The other graves were surmounted by wooden crosses roughly hewn from the ammunition crates, the names scrawled on them in pencil. Each man's identification papers were tucked into an empty champagne bottle half-buried near the cross.

After a moment the Duke stooped and laid his bare palm flat on the soil of Ethiopia, rose and strode on down to where a British staff car awaited him.

At the head of Alaji Pass a guard of honor waited. The Duke silently inspected the guard and surrendered himself to the senior officer—an Indian commander.

Avoid sTopic of War

The Duke, in simple khaki and puttees, was in striking contrast to the gold-braided, booted and beribboned Italian generals who already had surrendered.

He and the senior officer stepped into the car and went zigzagging down the pass. An old Etonian, the Duke talked easily about polo and foreign travel, carefully keeping clear of the subject of war.

But war intruded. At a sharp bend on the road, at the village of Enda Mediani, they came upon thousands of Italian prisoners behind barbed wire. Some rushed to the wire to give the Fascist salute and shout:

"Viva Aosta!"

Others watched with dull indifference.

At the foot of the pass, a car with a staff pennon stood at the roadside.

Lt.-Gen. William Platt, General Officer Commanding the Sudan and Eritrea, stepped forward to shake hands with the Duke, who entered his car for the drive to Eritrea, where he will remain until his final place of internment is decided.

As the car rolled away, the British officers stiffly saluted and Aosta called out in English: "Good luck!"

Last Act of Surrender

It was the last act of the surrender which began on Sunday after the British Imperial forces had battered the Italian fort into wreckage. First the wounded were taken out from the deep caves under the fort, where they were sheltered by 100 feet of rock in bunks carved out of the stone galleries.

On Monday, as the sun reached its zenith, a regiment of South African pipers awakened the mountain echoes with the wild skirl of bagpipes.

As if at the signal, the 4,500 remaining Italians started marching down the mountainside. They kept in military formation behind General Marina Vizetti, a glittering figure in all the finery of his rank.

The pipes gave forth with "Cock of the North'" and 'Highland Laddie" as the head of the line reached the Honor Guard of South Africans, English Midlanders and Indians.

The guard presented arms with a flourish.

As a tribute to Italian bravery, each surrendering man was allowed to carry his weapons—the first time this has occurred in the Ethiopian campaign. Some even clutched machine guns. They made no hostile move, though they outnumbered the British guard five to one.

In the ranks were Italians who had fought the South Africans on the blazing plains of Somaliland, who had checked them for a time at Keren. There were aviators who long since had lost their last plane, sailors who had escaped from Massaua, Alpini in felt hats and swinging alpenstocks, and Bersaglieri with fluttering cock feathers incongruous on their steel helmets.

There were officers immaculately uniformed even to spotless suede gloves.

And there were bearded veterans, almost in rags, limping painfully at the rear with the aid of sticks while they led regimental pet dogs.

As the passing ranks saluted the British officers, they ceased the attempt to maintain military formation and stragged in little groups on to captivity. They carried overcoats, blankets, cooking pots and whatever else they had been able to salvage.

Many gathered around a British field kitchen for hot coffee. Others stopped to bathe blistered feet in a little stream, then pushed on to lay down their arms and burdens beside the prison camp.

The generals were driven on by automobile, but the Duke of Aosta remained in the fort until today. He had already given his men a message of thanks for their gallantry, reminded them to remember their honor and to remember that the war was not over, then called for a final salute for the King and Mussolini.

154 Seamen Rescued From British Freighters Sunk In Mid-Atlantic

An East Coast Canadian Port, May 24 (CP)—Sinking of British freighters in mid-Atlantic with the loss of only two lives among their 154 seamen was reported here by survivors brought in aboard a small Norwegian steamer.

Officers from the lost craft — the exact number of the vessels was not disclosed—said they thought a single submarine accounted for them. Belief was expressed the sub later was destroyed.

No Canadians were aboard the ships, manned chiefly by Old Country crews.

Two Newfoundlanders — Arthur and James Gillette, cousins, of Twillingate—were among the survivors landed here.

Remaining members of the crews were ipcked up by other ships. The seamen here did not know where they were taken.

Two Men Killed

The two men killed were on a ship that was split in halves by a torpedo blast. But no others on that vessel were injured seriously.

The survivors landed at this port showed no ill effects from their experience. They spent only a few hours in lifeboats until they were picked up. But they lost all their belongings because the attack came without warning and left them only a few minutes to launch their boats.

The men reported no other attacks, either by the Nazi air or sea arm, until the fatal torpedoes ripped their ships apart.

Those killed were a third engineer who was on duty below and an able seaman. Their names were not released.

Other ships in the vicinity when the attack occurred apparently escaped the fate of their companions.

No New Experience

For some of the survivors it was no new experience. The wireless operator on one of the vessels entered the fourth ship-wreck tale in his diary and one seaman, it was reported, had been aboard the liner Athenia, first ship to go down in this war.

Undaunted, officers and crew who landed here were awaiting orders and expected to take over a new ship shortly and again help carry on the work of the Empire's merchant marine.

The steamship which brought them to this east coast port was taxed to the utmost in providing shelter and food for the men. Stores were depleted on arrival as she carried only provisions for her own 25-man crew.

Praise Treatment Received

The survivors praised the treatment extended them by skipper and crew of the rescue vessel, as well as that of local Ministry of Shipping officials, Navy League personnel and shop-keepers who assisted in outfitting them and opened their places of business on Sunday to provide clothing and other necessities.

Some of the men were clad only in pyjamas and other scant garments snatched hurriedly in their escape from the sinking ships.

TOP RANK PLOWMEN LEAVE ON "SALADA" TEA TRANSCONTINENTAL TRIP

The International Plowing Match held at St. Thomas last year set a new record in the number of entries and attendance. The most coveted prize offered was that for the special class sponsored by the Salada Tea Company and open to all horse plowmen in Jointer Plow sod classes, who had qualified at branch matches—a six weeks' motor trip to the west coast and back.

It is a coincidence that the trip, along with the gold and silver medals for first and second prizes in this class, was won by two neighbour plowmen, John Lister (left) and Harold Picket (right) both of Hornby, Ontario. Their journey was planned under the guiding hand of J. A. Carroll, manager of the Ontario Plowmen's Association, and will take them to areas of agricultural interest in the United States and Canada from Toronto to Vancouver. Gordon McGavin (centre), another well-known plowman, of Walton, will accompany the winners as guide, companion and manager.

The trip should prove intensely interesting and of great educational value to these three lucky plowmen.

Efforts At Isolation In 1918 Caused Present War Says N. Y. Publisher

Sewanee, Tenn., May 24 (AP)—A University of the South factulty-sponsored club heard from Arthur Hays Sulzberger a statement that the war resulted "in large measures" from failure of the 1918 peace terms caused by "our efforts at isolation."

"I happen to be one of those who believes that the war now going on is our war—nor have I been a recent adherent to that view," Sulzberger said last night. "I believe it just as I believe that the peace that preceded it was our peace, and that the failure of that peace was in large measure due to our efforts at isolation.

"I believe that in these days a nation such as ours cannot isolate itself from any great event that takes place in the world."

The New York Times publisher asserted "no one who has before him the facts of the world situation as it is today can believe in isolationism." He added that "certainly if the newspapers of this country properly perform their function of collecting, evaluating and distributing information isolation will be impossible as a national policy" because "to achieve it we should have to shut our eyes, and block our ears, and black out our minds."

Turning to the question of press freedom under censorship, Sulzberger described operations in Britain and said "I believe that we can have military censorship and still preserve a large measure of our freedom." We pointed out that censorship in Britain does not detract from the papers' right to criticize the government.

INSANE ESKIMO NOW IN TORONTO

Brought From Moosonee After Becoming Violent

Toronto, May 25 (CP)—Mina, Eskimo woman held responsible for the exposure deaths of four Eskimo children, arrived in Toronto on a stretcher. She was brought here from Moosonee after becoming insane following her arrest on a charge of murder.

The woman was said to have driven the children, whose ages ranged from six to 13, into the snow to perish during a wave of violence after religious disputes at the Belcher Islands Eskimo camps. Two other Eskimos also face murder counts.

Splendid Progress Made By British In Ethiopia

London, May 24—(CP)—British troops have taken Gelute, 25 miles northwest of Sciasciamanna in the Ethiopian Lakes region south of Addis Ababa, and captured more than 800 Italian prisoners, an authoritative source in London said Friday.

Farther west, British forces established a bridgehead over the Billate River, "which hitherto had been a considerable obstacle to our advance," this source said.

To the south, British forces have entered Uarage, 30 miles south of the captured Alle, and also have reached Hula, 22 miles south of Dalle, he added. In Italian Somaliland, Gardafui lighthouse at the entrance to the Gulf of Eden and the extreme northern tip of the territory was taken by British troops.

U. S. Women's Clubs Back Aid To Foes Of Totalitarianism

Atlantic City, N.J., May 24 (AP)—The General Federation of Women's Clubs, representing 2,000,000 United States women, approved Friday all necessary aid to the foes of totalitarianism although warned this might mean convoys to Great Britain.

The Federation's Triennial Convention amended the original resolution to oppose the sending of war supplies to Axis powers by United States citizens. A speaker had pointed out that the United States was supplying Japan with a considerable stock of military needs.

Mrs. Frederic W. Beggs, International Relations Department chairman and the woman who introduced the resolution, said she was fully aware of its serious implications, such as the possibility of convoys.

It approved a "policy of giving whatever aid is necessary to those nations whose defence is deemed 'vital' to the defence of the United States."

AT THIS TIME

Within the memory of all Canadians there has been celebrated at this time the observance of the day, known as "The Queen's Birthday," in the days of Queen Victoria and in latter years as "Victoria Day." With this time has been associated the name of Empire Day, marked for years in the schools. Yearly this time is celebrated in Canada as a holiday, in some instances as in this year in Belleville, on Monday, when May 24th falls on a Saturday.

So deeply did the good Queen Victoria impress the people of Canada that her natal day has been observed ever since its adoption. Canada has Dominion Day, July 1st., the national holiday, but Victoria Day remains in the calendar of holidays. It is a tribute to the Queen who had the longest reign in British history and who became the symbol of the Empire to her millions of subjects throughout the world. The people honor the memory of her great personality. Today one of the causes for which the war is fought is the sacredness of personality which the enemy dishonors by his ruthless conquests.

In days of war the people need no incentive to call them to observance at this time. Only too clearly they have come to realize that so many of the things we cherish, and indeed, all the things we cherish in the Empire, have not come by chance but as a result of the loyalty of countless numbers of British citizens and particularly of citizens of the British Isles who have developed through the ages that love of liberty which today has reached the greatest expression in the freedom which prevails in the British Empire and in the United States, a branch of the great British race.

This precious liberty which British subjects possess and which they exemplify before the world has been the envy of the Hun twice in a quarter of a century. Democracy develops strength and the British Empire is strong because it has advanced the boundaries of liberty. Because it is a strong and growing force, the aggressor has threatened it with all the inventions of Nazi fiendishness because Nazism is the expression of every foul influence in the world.

For the world it is fortunate that freedom gives strength. Otherwise the world would be poorly off facing as it does the savage tyrant and aggressor. Today Britain stands against the Nazi darkness and the twilight civilization into which the Huns would crush it if it were not for Britain and her Allies.

Victoria Day is a symbol of that great world light of British civilization, the strength that lies in democratic freedom. It is no wonder that people give thought to this anniversary and rededicate their lives and talents and all they possess on the altar of British justice and democracy. Canadians, like other British subjects, carry the precious heritage of liberty, the torch that lights the world of civilization.

The freedom we enjoy today requires that we preserve this freedom and that those who are free freely give themselves to the cause of democracy. The enemy has no cause except the selfishness and savagery of its leaders but the sons of British freedom have the knowledge that their ideals and sacrifices make the way free and secure for those who come after.

In the long course of history, the innate love of the British people for liberty has won for them an exalted place as the great liberators of the world. They love freedom for themselves and give it to others and their conception of freedom is now, has long been and will continue to be worldwide in its influence.

The spirit of Victoria Day and Empire Day is a mark of this. The world can be thankful that there has been an island kingdom to which men who loved freedom came to dwell and who there have cultivated arts and freedom and civilization. Today this free race has to fight against the aggressor but freedom does not die for freedom is growth and progress, while aggression is but stagnation and destruction.

This time is a fitting occasion for all people to direct their whole thought and effort into the service of their country so that the ideals for which the British race stands may endure and bear fruit for ages yet to come.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

AIN'T IT THE TRUTH!

My girl stood in the corridor
One pay day while she waited for
The quitting gong, when I could go
To supper with her and a show.
The Big Boss passed and saw her there.
He told her, "Madam, have a chair."
He brought a paper with a bow,
So she could read and asked how
She liked the rag and what she read.

She said the woman's page was dead.
The serial was not so hot;
More love scenes needed in the plot.
Upon the sport page she enjoys
Just photographs of handsome boys.
Good murders always has her thrilled,
In special when some dame is killed.
The war news seemed to her two-thirds
Made up of experts shooting words.
She wished the movie pages could
Spill more dirt out of Hollywood
And run the picture of Clark Gable
As many times as they were able.

He took her to his office then
And introduced some other men—
Asked her would she repeat again
The things she said. "It's folks like you,"
He said, "We try to cater to.
We want the woman's point of view."
She stayed an hour for a fact.
While I took up the waiting act.
We took a cab. She wouldn't walk;
She OWNS the rag, to hear her talk!

—Melodious Mat.

A GOOD NEIGHBOR

"WAR planes are being built in Belleville which is just about eleven miles east of where they should be built," says our good pal Harry Moore in the Trenton Courier Advocate.

Lackaday, Harry m'lad, can we help it if we have industrial personality, and the laddies whose job it is to secure such industries are not asleep at the switch? Anyway, a cat can look at a queen, but she shouldn't "Meow" when Her Highness gets another jewel for herself.

TRAMP, TRAMP, TRAMP

THEN there is the sweet young thing from the U.S.A. who admired Canada's highway system because signs pointed out the proximity of hobos. She was referring to the periodical "bump" signs from which, in several instances, the last letter has been removed by jokesmiths.

THINK FIRST!

TODAY is May 24th, Victoria Day. Many residents of the city will observe the holiday on Monday and will utilize the "long weekend" to go on motor trips, fishing parties or loaf around the summer cottage. If our memory serves us right eighteen people lost their lives while enjoying the Victoria Day holiday a year ago.

The toll of life taken by motor, swimming and boating accidents during the summer months last year reached almost appalling figures. And while this perhaps can not be stopped entirely surely the death total could be cut down by the use of ordinary common sense and care. It behooves everyone, whether he or she spends the holiday motoring, boating, camping or fishing, or even in their own homes, to exercise caution and care. A thought in mind will, perhaps, save nine—lives.

NEIGH! NEIGH!

THEN there is the story of the horse-dealer who offered a nag for sale for $50 —was offered $80—and refused. That night the nag died, and the dealer wired the buyer his acceptance of the $50 offer.

The next morning he received a cheque by mail—so he sent the horrse the usual way, by rail.

A few days later he met the buyer and asked how the horse fared.

"Well," that worthy replied, "unfortunately it was dead when it arrived, so I put it up for raffle. I got five men to take tickets for $20 each, and gave the winner his money back."

SOMEONE GOT THE BIRD

"You are in a state!" said the sparrow to his battered friend. "How did you lose all those feathers?"

"Well. I was flying pretty low, and swooping up and down, when suddenly I got mixed up in a game of badminton."

THE FAIRIES RETURN

Just an old fossil, a fool if you will,
A fellow that's lost to the knack
Of all up-to-date methods in business, but still
I tell you the fairies are back!
The fairies Miss Janet knew when she was small
Are back in the flower beds down by the wall.

When Janet began to get grown-up and wise,
And perhaps just a little bit vain;
The fairies rode off on their blue-bottle flies
Saying, "Never you'll see us again!"
And year after year all the summer time through
Never once has a leprechaun come into view.

But yesterday, walking the grandson about,
And stealthily snooping around,
From the depth of a tulip a fairy popped out
With a spring and a leap and a bound.
And he said, "Though Miss Janet once gave us the sack,
For the sake of your grandchildren we're coming back."

This 'Killer Boy' Typical Nazi Product

This portrait of a typical Nazi pilot by Elizabeth Castonier in the London News-Chronicle is based on real life. The author knew such a youth and many like him.

Carl Heinz was about 16 years old in June, 1934, when the three days' Nazi purge was started. Hundreds of people were killed—Catholic leaders, officers who tried to stick to the old Imperial army traditions and hated Nazism, personal friends of high Nazi officials who knew too much about their private lives, and others who had aroused anger or suspicion.

On July 2, Carl Heinz' father, a well-known Catholic doctor who had helped pogrom-injured Jews many times, did not return home as usual after his work.

His wife, fearing an accident, went to the Munich police where she was told that she might get information at the Gestapo headquarters. There she was told that she would hear from her husband in due time. A few days later she received by mail a small tin box with her husband's name on top and an official letter telling her that her husband had died and been cremated by order.

When Frau Heinz told her son about his father's death Carl's only remark was:

"He apparently did something to harm the State. He was an enemy and had to be treated as such. The Fuehrer is always right. Everything that is bad for Germany has to be destroyed."

And never did he mention his father in years to come.

Carl was at that time going through his last stage of the compulsory Labor Corps year, and being prepared for service in the Luftwaffe. In 1936, dressed up as an Italian airman, he was sent with a batch of other German airmen to Naples, and shipped to the Abyssinian front, where he had his first practical year of modern warfare. He liked the job.

He used to tell that it was great fun to dive down, machine-gunning the natives; set fire to their huts and dash away, dropping gas bombs that blinded and burned bodies. He was convinced that the Abyssinians intended to invade Mussolini's colonial empire and that it was a good cause to support him in his struggle, because Italy had the same aims as Germany—to build up a new great empire, a fortress against Bolshevist infiltration.

After a year's training in Abyssinia he was called home, on "secret mission", and sent abroad to an unknown destination.

Parents and relatives of airmen and soldiers were not told that their sons had been sent to Spain, to fight against the Spanish Republicans — the Spanish Bolshevists, as they were called.

Carl Heins came back at the end of 1938, uninjured, from his second war. He was by now an "old warrior"; he had done nothing else but wage war after being trained for war as boy and youngster.

He used to boast about his victories and the "games" the crews of Nazi-bombers used to play.

"We dived down, as we had practised in Abyssinia, and just popped them off. When markets were held, we got special information and went there, dive-bombing from a great height. When they scattered we pursued them, killing cattle and people. In the evening we checked how many cows and horses and people we had finished off. The numbers were then inscribed on our 'planes. Nobody was allowed to cheat and those who had the smallest total had to pay."

If somebody remarked that these had been unarmed civilians unable to defend themselves, Carl's face would assume a mask-like sternness as he replied:

"They were dangerous Reds and had to be destroyed to prevent Bolshevist infiltration spreading in Europe via France."

The year 1938 was more theoretical practice from the home basis. He was commandeered to make reconnaissance flights over the countries to be invaded—Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, France and Denmark, where 15 air bases had already been selected for future Nazi operations against Britain. If forced down, he was just an airman who had lost his way or who had run short of fuel.

He did not like this job of flying round without being actually at war. He had grown fond of war, he felt out of work if there was no enemy to fight.

He was longing to "get at Britain" in the Summer of 1939. And so were his fellow-airmen.

"We shall kick them to their knees and break their necks before they can count 13", he used to say.

To him — to them all — Britain was to be considered as a menace to Germany's future. It was, naturally, Jewish-ruled by perfidious master-liars, it was obviously opposed to National Socialism, and Russian influence was gaining ground.

"We must strike at them before they are ready to fight us. We shall destroy London in a few raids by thousands of 'planes. Our navy will destroy the shore defences and our land army will come up unexpectedly, in the middle of the island, through a secret underwater and underground tunnel. The Fuehrer cannot create the new German World Order without Britain's destruction. That will take us only a few weeks, after France has been conquered."

He believed every word of what he said. No discussion was possible in this later stage of life, when, at 23, he was something of a veteran of two wars. He threatened to denounce as an enemy of the State anybody who dared to utter a doubt as to Germany's overpowering military strength.

Carl Heinz is no exception among thousands of German airmen and soldiers.

He has been thrown with all the others into the melting pot of Nazism. Individualism, humanity and kindness were crushed in his early childhood by the unrelenting grip of the State Almighty, Adolf Hitler, in his deity, to be obeyed blindfold and to be believed in, without thinking. He belongs to one body, controlled by one switchboard.

He has a soul no longer. All he wants is to kill, all he knows is how to kill.

At 23 he has forgotten that once upon a time in his childhood he wanted to be a gardener.

U. S. Army's New Anti-Aircraft Guns Equal World's Best

Fort Monroe, Va., May 24—(AP)—The first full battery of the United States army's new 90 MM. anti-aircraft guns—officially rated "at least the equal of the best in the world"—will be ready for field service within the next ten days, effective range of about 38,000 feet, it was disclosed Friday. With an 11,000 feet higher than the present standard three-inch piece, the highly-mobile new gun has greater accuracy and more destructive force per burst.

Now It's the 'Airgraph'

From The Manchester Guardian

Photography has been called in to assist in speeding up the conveyance of letters to British troops in the Middle East.

The scheme works in this way. The sender writes his message on a special form. This is photographed on a small film which is sent by air to its destination. On arrival an enlarged print is made, placed in an envelope, and delivered in the usual way.

It will be fairly obvious that photography is used to reduce the bulk and weight of the mail. The effect is impressive when stated in avoirdupois: 4,500 film negatives of letters weigh only one pound, whereas the letters themselves would weigh one hundredweight and a half. By this means it is possible to carry the letters, or rather the films of them, the whole way by air, instead of as hitherto partly by sea and partly by air.

The time taken for a letter to reach its billet will be under a fortnight and the cost of sending it will be only threepence.

There are two disadvantages in the method but neither of them unmitigated. One is that there is perhaps less privacy, though in these days of universal censorship there does not seem much in that. The other is that the length of the message is limited by the size of the prescribed form. Some costive correspondents may regard that even as a blessing.

The filmed air-mail letter has been christened the airgraph.

SKIMBLE SKAMBLE STUFF

The good neighbor policy of the United States and Latin America is eliminating from everyday speech two objectionable words that can well be spared.

Back in the days when Americans and Mexicans were not so friendly as they are today the boys north of the Rio Grande fell into the habit of referring to their neighbors to the south as "greasers."

It was a name of utter contempt and not calculated to improve international relations.

In retaliation the people south of the Rio Grande referred to the Americans as "gringos."

This term is supposed to be a Latin American corruption of Spanish "griego," meaning Greek, a word that the Spanish Americans applied in contempt to foreigners, particularly persons of the English-speaking race.

Some authorities say, however, that "gringo" was merely a humorous or facetious Mexican rendering of "Green Grow the Rushes," the march of the American soldiers during the Mexican war.

During the California gold rush of 1849 the efficiency of the U.S. navy and army was greatly reduced because of the great number of men who deserted to search for gold.

The word veteran is derived from Latin "veteranus," from "vetus," meaning old.

Formerly "veteran" was correctly applied only to an old soldier or one who had grown old in the service.

Since the Great War of 1914-1918, however, the term veteran has come to be applied in America to any former soldier, even young men who have served in the armed forces only a few months.

The late Dr. Frank H. Vizetelly said that "hatred" and "detestation" approach as nearly to synonyms as it is possible for words to do.

Under the administration of President James K. Polk the United States fought a war with Mexico, spent millions of dollars and lost thousands of lives to obtain possession of the Pacific coast.

Yet, on March 5, 1849, as the retiring President and the incoming President rode together down Pennsylvania Avenue in Washington to the inauguration ceremonies, President Zachary Taylor, who had commanded one of the armies and had won many victories in the Mexican war, told Polk that he thought California and Oregon were too far away from Washington to become States of the Union and it would be better if they formed an independent republic.

The Stars Say

For Sunday, May 25

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

SUNDAY'S horoscope emphasizes the spiritual, religious, psychological, perhaps the occult or mystical. These should bring many satisfactions and possible conspicuous success or good fortune of a peculiar or mystifying nature. Elders and influential friends figure prominently and the situation might call for a sudden change of place and plans.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year of surprise, mysterious occurrences and rather breathtaking events of an intriguing and obscure quality. Superiors, elders and influential personages may account for this peculiar and fortunate intervention. These perhaps attracted by some outstanding talent in literary, musical or other cultural expression.

A child born on this day should be endowed with a diversity of talents and creative ability which may lift it to conspicuous position or favoritism of intrigued and friendly interests. It may be idealistic and aspirational.

For Monday, May 26

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is rather complicated, there being auguries of favors, promotion, preferment, with possible public approval such meaning success and progress in some group, community or humanitarian interest. Yet this may be negatived or frustrated by wayward, temptestuous, rash and impulsive acts.

Those whose birthday it is should be justified in anticipating a year of promotion, favors, tokens of appreciation from those in high places with much progress in works of public service or community welfare. But shun strife, tumult, and reckless indulgences.

A child born on this day may be extremely energetic and enterprising, determined at all hazards to have its own way. Such intemperate and immoderate rashness and willfulness may prove its undoing, unless given early discipline.

Appreciation Extended

Mr. MacLaurin voiced the sentiments of the members, when he extended words of appreciation to Judge Cameron for his splendid work as president.

Mr. George K. Mitford, general manager, congratulated the Association on the success it has attained in the past and discussed plans for the future. The need of such fine types of concert for building up the morale of people in war times has been amply demonstrated by the outstanding pre-campaign successes of Concert Association in many parts of Canada, and by the great attendance at the Prom Symphony Concert summer series. Mr. Mitford announced that a program by Ruth Draper was assured Belleville audiences as well as two concerts by other brilliant artists.

Miss Leona Riggs, secretary, said that the Association has become a tradition in Belleville and should it be discontinued it would be greatly missed as a worthwhile community project. Since England is not neglecting concerts during wartime, Canada can well emulate her example. Miss Riggs welcomed former workers and new members and explained the various points in connection with the membership campaign which was now opened and would conclude on June 2nd. Discussions in connection with the campaign followed and the enthusiasm of the campaign workers promised a most successful season for 1941-42.

Memorial Unveiled At Toronto School

Toronto, May 24 (CP)—A list of 257 former students of Northern Vocational School who are now enlisted in Canada's armed forces was unveiled at the school's Empire Day program here today.

Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Clive of Britain's Diplomatic Service, guest speaker, outlined the various conceptions of Empires, saying the whole philosophy of the British Empire was based for the past 150 years on a "live and let live" basis. Other Empires of the past failed to adopt that policy and they perished.

"The British idea is that the state exists for the individuals," Sir Clive said. "The totalitarian countries cannot understand that unique concept. There, each individual exists for the state."

Orange Blossoms

Hello Homemakers! Did you ever wonder why Orange Blossoms came to be used in preference to other flowers in the traditional bridal wreath? The story runs that many years ago the King of Spain brought a few expensive Orange trees from Asia. His old gardener cared for the trees till the death of the flower-loving king. The next monarch ordered the garden destroyed.

o—o—o

The king's son, who loved the Orange trees asked the gardener's daughter to plant a few roots secretly near her home—save them—and he would reward her. Fearful of the new king's displeasure the girl decided to go to the queen and tell her the story. Impressed, the queen presented her with five potted trees, and the prince paid her so handsomely that she was able to marry her penniless sailor suitor.

o—o—o

When she was dressing for the wedding, the young girl saw a little spray of Orange Blossoms on her father's garden clothes. She twined it into the wreath that held her veil, explaining to her surprised attendant that she wore it in gratitude, for it was really the Orange Blossoms which had made her marriage possible.

o—o—o

This story quickly spread through Europe and the Americas, and soon it became the custom for brides to wear Orange Blossoms.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Husband Fascinated By Another Woman

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Sometime ago I found out the cause of my husband's indifference around the home, but I'm trying my level best to keep this knowledge from him. He thinks I don't know about it. Everything goes wrong at home. The children get on his nerves; my presence seems to irritate him; he is grouchy and discontented.

There's another woman in his life, and she seems able to make him happy. If only he would talk to me about it, we might find a way out of it. I'd even give him up if it would make him happier. I'd just like to see him smile again. After all, life is short, and without love it isn't worth while. I still love him very much, and the situation is terribly hard on me. Would you advise silence and patience?

Sorrowful Wife

How a man blessed with a wife who can write as affectionately and unselfishly as you do about a philandering husband can be so indifferent is a mystery to me. But when men no longer in their first youth forget their wives, homes and children in a mad pursuit of something they think will bring them happiness, they aren't quite sane.

Sometimes they see the folly of throwing aside everything for what too often proves to be only a case of fascination, and they come back like little boys who have been almost drowned while taking a forbidden swim.

Then, again, they keep on with a new love, to the exclusion of children, home, duty, and everything else, and are selfishly happy.

You have children who require a home and their father's protection. Better not walk out for the "other woman", no matter how self-sacrificing you may feel. Your children are your first consideration. My advice would be to wait.

Her Parents Object

Dear Miss Fairfax;

My girl is 17 years old and I am 21. We've known each other for three years, and for two of them have gone steady. Her family always rather liked me, and never said a word about our going together. But all of a sudden they're objecting, and now her father won't even let me come to the house.

We are very much in love and have been meeting on the sly. I can't understand why they should make a fuss all of a sudden, when we've been good friends so long.

Robert

You haven't given me any reason for the family taboo. Perhaps they think you are too young, or that you wouldn't be able to support a wife. Why not ask the girl's family what it's all about?

I don't approve of sneaking; it isn't good for character. The whole family will think more of you if you talk it over with the parents, and don't try to meet the girl on the sly.

Doesn't Tell Mother Where He Goes

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am employed in the office of a department store, and as my father has been dead for several years my entire pay envelope has to go to my mother to keep things going at home.

I'm deeply in love with a young man who belongs to another crowd, of a higher social standing. He has told me he loves me, and I know I think a great deal of him. He will never take me anywhere except in his car for long rides. He is afraid he may meet some of his friends.

He has also confessed that he tells his mother he goes elsewhere when he comes to see me, which has hurt me terribly. My people are considered highly respectable.

Hurt Pride

It doesn't seem possible that there is any happiness for you in continuing a friendship where the young man plays his part with such consciousness of a higher social position. You are so honest and generous in sharing your pay envelope with your family, that you deserve a friend of a better quality than this boy could be.

It's unlikely that marriage with someone who regards you as an inferior would be happy.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

CHILD CAN BE WELL-TRAINED IN TOILET ROUTINE AT ONE YEAR

Last of a series on normal progress of the child in the first year.

By the time a baby celebrates his first birthday, he should have a fairly well established toilet routine. He should have learned bowel control, to the extent that he can give his mother some indication when he must go to the toilet, and he should have begun to learn bladder control.

Bladder control is more difficult to teach. The way to start is to place the child on the seat several times a day, at regular intervals, usually soon after meals. When he does control himself properly, praise him; let him understand that is what he should do. On the other hand, don't scold him when he fails to control himself. You will be surprised how soon the average baby will catch on and take care of matters properly.

When a baby is a year old, his diapers may be replaced by pants in the daytime — that is, if he has learned some measure of toilet routine. However, it may be necessary to put diapers on him at night for as much as six months longer.

If the one-year-old is kept on a regular routine in other respects, his toilet training will be helped. He must be bathed regularly, and he should spend as much time outdoors daily as the weather will permit. Regular sun baths are as important to him as to adults.

Clothes your child sensibly, don't overdress him, and see that the clothes he has on don't bind him or impede his movements in any way. Choose his shoes carefully, see that they are of soft leather, with hard soles and that they don't cramp the toes.

Mothers of one-year-olds need to be doubly careful of accidents. At this age the child is just beginning to get about by himself. He no longer can be depended to stay in the place where she puts him. So, she should watch that he doesn't wander too near the stove, or near the cellar stairway. Objects that he might swallow must be put beyond his reach. Be careful of knives and other sharp objects with which he might cut himself or put out an eye.

Everything the baby wears and all his cooking and feeding utensils must be scrupulously clean. His body hasn't yet built up an immunity against the diseases encountered in every day life. And so he should not be taken places where he is surrounded by crowds of people, where there is an overheated atmosphere, or where people have colds or any other contagion.

The mother must watch to see that the baby doesn't become overtired. When he does you will notice that he is cross, that he refuses his food and is nervous. His sleep may even be affected. If he has been playing vigorously and strenuously for long periods of time, it's a good idea for mother to take him on her knee and get him to rest and relax for a while.

Just because your baby is a year old now, don't relax the rules regarding his sleep. It is quite natural for him to sleep the entire clock around at night. He may even sleep longer to good advantage. Besides this he may well have a nap in the morning, and of course he must have his sleep in the afternoon. I think about an hour and a half each morning and afternoon is about right.

A great many mothers write me, much upset, because their children, at the age of a year, appear to be bald. They think this means that the child will never have much hair. This is nothing to worry about for lack of hair does not mean that the baby isn't healthy. Actually, there isn't any rule to govern the growth of hair. Dark babies always seem to have more hair than blonde babies. It's the blondes who usually seem to be bald.

The fontanelle, or soft spot on top the baby's head, begins to close by the time the baby in twelve months old. It probably won't be entirely closed until the baby is a year-and-a-half or more, but at a year the soft spot is definitely smaller than it was. If this fontanelle isn't closing at the age of a year, it is often a good idea to consult your doctor, for it may be a sign of rickets.

Digestion — The Great Process of Life

Acute indigestion may arise from overeating or the use of food which is difficult to digest.

But chronic indigestion, which stays with you, causing sleepless nights, headaches, bodily pains and depressed spirits, is usually the result of torpid liver and constipation. The process of digestion is held up and the body is poisoned by accumulated waste matter.

The use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills helps to arouse the torpid liver to action, the bile flows freely to the intestines, stimulating these organs and soon everything is going fine. What a pleasure it is to enjoy your meals and feel that there will be no discomfort afterwards.

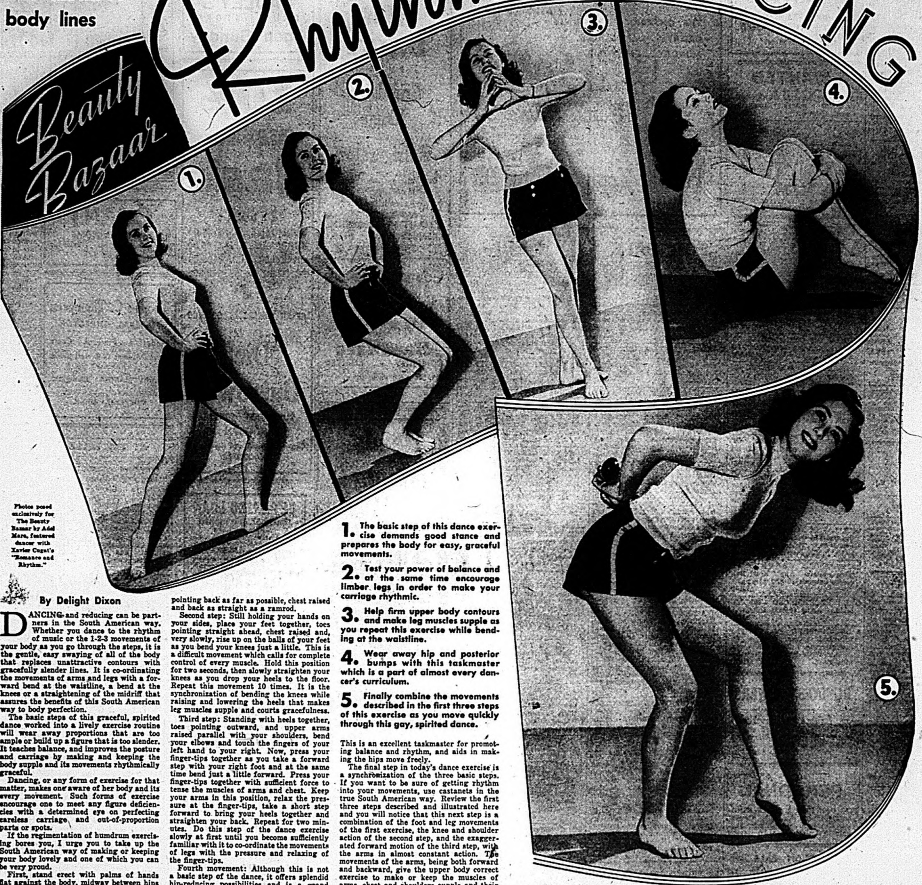
Exercises for dancing your way to slender and attractive body lines

Rhythmic REDUCING

Beauty Bazaar



Photos posed exclusively for The Beauty Bazaar by Adel Mara, featured dancer with Xavier Cugat's "Romance and Rhythm."

1. The basic step of this dance exercise demands good stance and prepares the body for easy, graceful movements.

2. Test your power of balance and at the same time encourage limber legs in order to make your carriage rhythmic.

3. Help firm upper body contours and make leg muscles supple as you repeat this exercise while bending at the waistline.

4. Wear away hip and posterior bumps with this taskmaster which is a part of almost every dancer's curriculum.

5. Finally combine the movements described in the first three steps of this exercise as you move quickly through this gay, spirited dance.

By Delight Dixon

DANCING and reducing can be partners in the South American way. Whether you dance to the rhythm of music or the 1-2-3 movements of your body as you go through the steps, it is the gentle, easy swaying of all of the body that replaces unattractive contours with gracefully slender lines. It is co-ordinating the movements of arms and legs with a forward bend at the waistline, a bend at the knees or a straightening of the midriff that assures the benefits of this South American way to body perfection.

The basic steps of this graceful, spirited dance worked into a lively exercise routine will wear away proportions that are too ample or build up a figure that is too slender. It teaches balance, and improves the posture and carriage by making and keeping the body supple and its movements rhythmically graceful.

Dancing, or any form of exercise for that matter, makes one aware of her body and its every movement. Such forms of exercise encourage one to meet any figure deficiencies with a determined eye on perfecting careless carriage and out-of-proportion parts or spots.

If the regimentation of humdrum exercising bores you, I urge you to take up the South American way of making or keeping your body lovely and one of which you can be very proud.

First, stand erect with palms of hands flat against the body, midway between hips and waist. Then, with toes pointing slightly outward, take a long step forward with your right foot. Be sure that this step is long enough to straighten your left leg. In this position your weight will be resting on your right foot but it will be balanced by the left. Now, keeping your body erect, move your left foot forward, placing the foot squarely on the floor, as you straighten your right leg and balance your weight on the ball of right foot. Move the right, then the left foot forward, repeating this first step 25 times or more.

The position of the body is very important to the correct movements. Keep your elbows pointing back as far as possible, chest raised and back as straight as a ramrod.

Second step: Still holding your hands on your sides, place your feet together, toes pointing straight ahead, chest raised and, very slowly, rise up on the balls of your feet as you bend your knees just a little. This is a difficult movement which calls for complete control of every muscle. Hold this position for two seconds, then slowly straighten your knees as you drop your heels to the floor. Repeat this movement 10 times. It is the synchronization of bending the knees while raising and lowering the heels that makes leg muscles supple and courts gracefulness.

Third step: Standing with heels together, toes pointing outward, and upper arms raised parallel with your shoulders, bend your elbows and touch the fingers of your left hand to your right. Now, press your finger-tips together as you take a forward step with your right foot and at the same time bend just a little forward. Press your finger-tips together with sufficient force to tense the muscles of arms and chest. Keep your arms in this position, relax the pressure at the finger-tips, take a short step forward to bring your heels together and straighten your back. Repeat for two minutes. Do this step of the dance exercise slowly at first until you become sufficiently familiar with it to co-ordinate the movements of legs with the pressure and relaxing of the finger-tips.

Fourth movement: Although this is not a basic step of the dance, it offers splendid hip-reducing possibilities and is a grand posterior reducer and flattener which is often practised by dancers. Sit on the floor, knees raised, feet resting flat on the floor. Clasp your arms around your knees and, letting your shoulders relax as your back curves, raise your feet off of the floor and lean back as far as possible without losing your balance. Then straighten your back and place your feet squarely on the floor. Hold this position for a second, then repeat the entire movement. If you're very adept and not too tired after repeating this movement 10 times, do this: Follow the same basic action, but instead of leaning straight back, lean to the left, then the right, alternately.

This is an excellent taskmaster for promoting balance and rhythm, and aids in making the hips move freely.

The final step in today's dance exercise is a synchronization of the three basic steps. If you want to be sure of getting rhythm into your movements, use castanets in the true South American way. Review the first three steps described and illustrated here and you will notice that this next step is a combination of the foot and leg movements of the first exercise, the knee and shoulder action of the second step, and the exaggerated forward motion of the third step, with the arms in almost constant action. The movements of the arms, being both forward and backward, give the upper body correct exercise to make or keep the muscles of arms, chest and shoulders supple and their movements rhythmic. Take a step forward while keeping your back straight, take a second step as you bend forward and place your hands back of your body. Then take another step and swing your arms forward. Take three steps, straighten your shoulders; take three steps, lean forward. You'll swing into the rhythm of this final step as you count the movements of your arms and legs with the forward bend at the hips. Remember to bend at the hips, not the waistline, if you're out to improve your carriage.

Delight Dixon Says . . .

THE fragrance of two lovely bath aids, dusting powder and cologne, has forget-me-nots as an inspiration. The powder is delicately perfumed and flesh color, and comes in a pink box with light splashes of blue forget-me-nots. The cologne is in a graceful vase-shaped bottle with a handy grip so that it can't slip through your fingers. If you want an endearing fragrance, you'll like these dainty aids. It's nice to have a change of fragrances during the hot weather.

There's a wealth of beauty in a special box of harmonized make-up essentials originally created for brides. The box is pastel blue with a dainty pink elastic fastener and button. It holds a huge lipstick, cream rouge, nail polish, blended eye shadow, face powder and powder foundation. Select the lip rouge most flattering to your skin tones and all of the accompanying aids will be in perfect harmony with your complexion. This simple procedure removes all chances of selecting an unbecoming shade of make-up. There are four sets of preparations for the four basic skin tones. What is your complexion need?

Express the gypsy in your soul by using bright color on lips and finger-tips and by wearing a brightly-colored bow in your hair. Even if you are more angel than gypsy, you can brighten your personality by stepping up the color of your colorful aids and accessories. A drab personality requires color if it is to be lifted out of the humdrum class, and a lively personality must have color for harmony.

Don't get in a rut. Don't perform all of your grooming rites the same way day after day. Vary one step or more of your daily schedule if you want to keep a fresh, alert outlook. For instance, if you always put your left shoe on first, try putting the right on first. Change the color, size and shape of your powder puffs; try a new dressing table arrangement, and change the color, shape and perfume of your bath and toilet soap occasionally. Keep an interest in all of your accessories as well as in their use.

Facial skin that is both dry and oily—dry on chin and outer cheeks, oily on nose, forehead and inner cheeks—requires special care to make it uniform and fine textured. The use of soap and water, with emphasis on the oily regions, will help overcome enlarged pores and at the same time slow down over-active oil ducts. Gentle soap and water cleansings, plus frequent applications of lubricating cream over the dry regions will aid in speeding up under-active oil ducts while the cream works toward softening the skin and overcoming surface dryness.

Nobody's a recluse when it comes to looking good and well groomed. Think of your public. Whether you are a housewife and your public is the corner grocer, the milkman, coal man or your next door neighbor, or whether you are an office worker or salesgirl, you must consider your public. Don't let carelessness in dress, make-up or hair arrangement catch you off your guard. Be spic and span and well-turned-out all of the time. Being perfectly groomed all of the time is the best cure in the world for an inferiority complex.

WHAT ARE YOUR PROBLEMS?

I'M 18 years old, weigh 118 pounds and am five feet four inches tall. My legs are very thin. How can I make them fatter and give them better shape, and how long should I wear my skirts? Many thanks. P. H.

Any exercise, done leisurely, that acts directly on the legs will help give them better shape. Walking around the room on the balls of your feet for from three to five minutes morning and night will aid in developing the calves of your legs. Roller or ice skating, when not done to excess, will also serve to develop the legs and give them more pleasing shape. It's impossible for me to state exactly what length your skirts should be. The best plan is to wear them at the most becoming length.

I have a feeling that starches, such as in white bread, pastries, gravies and sauces, are responsible for excess weight and a heavy, listless feeling I have after eating. Can you give me a diet which excludes starches? I might also add that my skin is very oily and has enlarged pores and blackheads. Would correct eating also improve my complexion? Sincerely, HELEN C.

Why don't you ask your family doctor to check your diet to determine whether or not your system can properly "handle" starches? However, you couldn't possibly cause an systemic disturbance by cutting down on starches for a time. I haven't any starchless diets on hand, but suggest that you eliminate white bread and toast, pastries and rich gravies and sauces from your meals. Substitute vegetables, fruits and salads and have a baked potato occasionally. Correct eating habits will do wonders toward improving the condition of your skin. If you would like my leaflet containing diet suggestions for improving the complexion, send me a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope and I'll rush the leaflets to you at once.

We read your very interesting articles every week and always find your advice most beneficial. I'm writing now for my 16-year-old brother who has adolescent blemishes. Our doctor told Mother that my brother's skin would clear up without special attention, but that was two years ago and it hasn't improved at all. I'm certain you can solve our problem which is making my brother's life miserable. Is there a cream or lotion not too highly perfumed which he could use?
Miss GRACE MAC AVOY.

There are many lotions made especially for the purpose and I'm sure your brother would not object to any of them. One lotion in particular has a clean, fresh fragrance and is very pleasant to use. Send me a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope and I'll forward my suggestions for overcoming facial blemishes. I'm sure your brother will be more than pleased with results.

With the bathing season practically in our laps, I'm almost frantic about my much too ample lap and waistline. I need speedy help. Will you please tell me how to trim my figure? MIRIAM.

Stand in an open doorway and, while holding fast, swing your right leg forward and up as far as possible; then, without touching your foot to the floor, continue the swing pendulum-fashion, backward as far as you can. Repeat 15 times with each leg. This will reduce your thighs and waistline. Remember to do this exercise twice each day, increasing the number to 25 if it doesn't prove too strenuous.

MISS DIXON will be happy to answer questions on beauty upon receipt of a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply, sent to her in care of this newspaper.

Desert Makes 'Good' Germans Out of Huns

John T. Whitaker Cables from Lisbon, to the Chicago Daily News.

However the campaign may go, the Germans have already suffered a significant, perhaps decisive, failure in the Libyan operation. Germany sent two columns, roughly 100-odd miles south of the seacoast, hoping to drive all the way through Girabub Oasis to the Nile by all-out tactics similar to her armored forces in France. The British brought these columns to a standstill, raiding supply lines and bombing an airfield.

Equally significant is the British capture of Salum which now has changed hands for the fourth time. Salum is not important in itself, but it shows that the British have punch. That is important because the only way to beat the German tactics of driving armored columns all the way through is counterattack by driving British columns through the German positions.

These minor British successes may prove decisive because with each day of German delay the mercury goes up. Soon the tanks should run about 200 degrees Fahrenheit at noon and even the greaseless German frys in that heat.

While the British have been conditioned in the desert, Lieut. General Rommell, commander of the German tank forces in North Africa, trained his units in Bavaria and even his efforts to put them in steam baths was no substitute for experience on a given terrain. There is no ersatz for a desert any more than there is ersatz for the kind of heroism Britain's thinly spread forces show, whether it be withdrawing from the Greek mountains in perfect order under Stukas, or holding Tobruk. The Germans are faced with the possibility that they cannot continue during Summertime their offensive on the Western Desert.

In this connection, it is reliably learned here that the morale of Germans captured in Libya is very low. They have been brought in, foodless, waterless, sick with the heat and the ghibli which blows sand clean through clothes and even goggles. One Briton, who questioned hundreds of these prisoners, says that many of them burst into tears and showed themselves unstrung.

This Briton's remark was amusing and also very penetrating:

"You know", he said, "when a German has had hell beaten out of him, he is almost a human being."

THAT BODY OF YOURS

James W. Barton, M.D.

How Low Back Pain Due to Injury Can Be Relieved

For a number of years after the Xrays were discovered, a good picture of the spinal column with its bones and ligaments and its connections with the hip bones, was difficult to obtain. This made treatment of low back pain and sciatica rather difficult and operations to "steady" the spinal column upon the hip bones were not numerous.

Today with the great advances made in Xray equipment it is possible to get a splendid picture of the lower back region. In this region there is the joint between the last spine bone and the hip bone, and the joint between the last spine bone and the bone that lies between the two hip bones at the back. If anything happens to these joints—a strain, sprain, dislocation —it means that the top "half" of the body cannot be firmly set or attached to the lower half.

Injury to these joints can be caused by lifting, a fall, swinging a golf club, a misstep, or other accident. The usual treatment is rest, a plaster cast to hold joints together for some weeks, a Goldthwait or other brace which supports the joints but allows the patient to move about. In severe cases operation may be necessary.

In speaking of injuries in the low back region, Dr. Gilbert E. Haggart, Lahey Clinic, Boston, in the Journal of the American Medical Association says that the problem of treating patients whose first symptoms are low back pain, often with sciatica in hip and leg, continues to worry the orthopedic surgeon. In cases where rest, strapping with adhesive tape, and the application of a cast or a brace has not brought relief, operation to cause the joint between the last spine bone and the bone beneath it to grow solidly together has given excellent results.

I am passing on the above information because so often I meet or come in contact with cases of "unstable" condition in lower back, often with severe sciatic pain.

Nearly all cases of low back pain due to injuries can obtain relief without operation, that is by rest, heat, and supports. And even in severe cases, operation to fasten the "loose joint" together is now available so that low back weakness and severe pain going down the leg, can be relieved.

AT THE BELLE

"The Devil and Miss Jones"

Telling what happens when the richest man in the world sets about making a private first-hand investigation of personnel troubles in one of his many enterprises, "The Devil and Miss Jones" now on the Belle Theatre screen stars Jean Arthur as a department store employee, with Charles Coburn as the millionaire and Robert Cummings in the romantic lead opposite Miss Arthur.

Edmund Gwenn, Spring Byington, S. Z. Sakall and William Demarest are also featured in the hilarious comedy-fantasy, which is said to embrace uniquely entertaining episodes. Some of Manhattan's best-known landmarks form the background for many of the film's gay sequences. A Coney Island outing on a crowded week-end afternoon is one of the high-lights.

The trouble begins when, as a protest against working conditions, Coburn is hung in effigy in front of a big department store that happens to be one of the hundreds of corporations and establishments he owns. Furious, he decides to see for himself what is going on and plans to trap the ringleaders of the scheme red-handed.

In the disguise of a clerk in the store's shoe department, Coburn meets Miss Arthur, a fellow clerk who feels sorry for the seemingly friendless old man and takes him under her wing. Her boy friend, Cummings, is the leader of the rebels who objects to the unfair policies of the management, along with the pompous section manager of the shoe department.

How the rich man is brought to understand what his new acquaintances are seeking, and how his sympathies are suddenly swung to the side of the workers, with dramatically funny results, bring about the unexpected climax of the film. The romance of the two young people, as well as one between Coburn himself and an elderly saleswoman at the store, adds spice to the story, and its elaborate settings, including one of the largest department-stores sets ever constructed for film purposes, makes the picture unusually interesting.

One of the funniest sequences ever turned out in recent years is the Sunday outing episode at Coney Island, when Coburn gets lost, without a nickel in his pockets, tries to pawn his beautiful watch for a dollar and is arrested with side-splitting results.

Gwenn as the bossy section-manager and Miss Byington as Coburn's romatic partner give the chief support to the three principals: Sakall as Coburn's butler, Demarest as a detective and Walter Kingsford as the stores' general manager also have important roles.

Sam Wood directed the Frank Ross production for RKO Radio from Norman Krasna's original screen-play. Written especially to suit the talents and personalities of its top players, "The Devil and Miss Jones" strikes a brand-new note in modern screen fare.

"A Gentleman's Gentleman", the tops in color fun cartoons will be exhibited on the same program with the Belle latest world news events and a new and entertaining "Information Please", with Anna Neagle as guest star. Continuous shows will be presented today.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Waterloo Bridge"

Vivien Leigh and Robert Taylor in "Waterloo Bridge" will be presented the first of the week at the McCarthy Theatre. The theatre will run continuous shows due to the holiday.

One of the tenderest romances brought to the screen since "Farewell To Arms," the story is woven around the whirlwind courtship and love affair between a ballet dancer and a handsome young officer. They meet on Waterloo Bridge during an air raid, are engaged in twenty-four hours, and then are separated on their wedding day when he is suddenly called back to the front. She reads that he has been killed in action. But a year later they are brought together again at Waterloo station, when he returns after having been held in a prison camp.

Both Miss Leigh and Robert Taylor have vital, sympathetic roles in the dramatic film which damns the evil forces of war for what they are, destructive, senseless and brutal.

Supporting the stars in an outstanding cast are Lucille Watson, Virginia Field, Maria Ouspenskaya, C. Aubrey Smith and many other great screen personalities. The picture was directed by Mervyn LeRoy, who gave the screen "The Wizard of Oz" and "Anthony Adverse." It was produced by Sidney Franklin noted for his direction of such hits as "The Good Earth," "Smilin' Thru" and "The Barrets of Wimpole Street."

In addition to "Waterloo Bridge" the McCarthy program will include the laugh crammed comedy hit "Who Killed Aunt Maggie" featuring John (Turnabout) Hubbard Willie (Ghost Breakers) Best, Wendy Barrie and Edgar Kennedy. Latest McCarthy-Fox News events will also be presented, rounding out an ideal show for your family and friends on the holiday.

AT THE CAPITOL

"High Sierra"

"High Sierra," the film which opens Sunday midnight at the Capitol brings all the thrills, suspense and dramatic action which movie audiences hope for in their movie fare. With Humphrey Bogart as "the last of the Dillinger mob." Ida Lupino as his sweetheart, and made under the direction of Raoul Walsh, whose most recent success was "They Drive by Night," "High Sierra" packs a punch.

Supported by a cast that includes Alan Curtis, Arthur Kennedy, Henry Hull, Henry Travers, Joan Leslie, Bogart and Lupino are said to triumph in the two top roles.

Bogart plays Roy Earl, a strange sort of criminal to whom crime is an unpleasant, but nevertheless necessary, business. It is a role somewhat reminiscent of the one he played so brilliantly in his first motion picture, "The Petrified Forest." Miss Lupino is seen as the girl who loves him so much that she eventually proves his downfall. Another member of the cast whose love helps to lead to his eventual undoing is a small, loyal and lovable wire-haired terrier, named "Pard."

"High Sierra" is a paradox. It's a gangster story that isn't a gangster story at all.

Humphrey Bogart carries a gun, an unsmiling face, and a prison record all through the film. But he doesn't admit he's a criminal. As a matter of fact he never thinks about it. If your asked him, he'd say he was a farmer.

"High Sierra," introduces you to one of the strangest men in the annals of American crime. His name is Roy Earle, and as played by Humphrey Bogart, he's an amazing character.

Novelist W. R. Burnett, who wrote the best seller, and who then helped Scenarist John Huston adapt the novel to the screen, drew on his own police reporting to set his characters. Incidentally, Burnett was also the author of "Little Caesar."

A coloured cartoon, "Sparkles Bells the Cat" and a new comedy with the three stooges, "Saved by the Belle" are included with "High Sierra" on the same program.

Darlan Fails To Clear Up Situation

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington, May 24 (AP)—Provided Britain accepts it at face value, the formal declaration from Vichy that neither the French Fleet nor any French "colonial territory" is involved in Franco German "collaboration" negotiations tends to ease London-Vichy tension at least momentarily.

That assurance, voiced in a Vichy broadcast to the French people by Admiral Darlan, Vice-Premier and a key figure in the deal with Hitler, does not answer all British anxiety over the future role of her former ally. In effect, however, it does answer at least partially the British demand for a clarification of French purposes. It delays if it does not wholly avert a complete rupture between London and Vichy and possible open warfare.

Darlan's statement was too brief and cryptic save in one respect to clear the air fully. The exception was his claim that Hitler had not asked any act of French military aggression against Britain because he, Hitler, is confident of victory alone against any "coalition."

"Coalition," as Darlan used the word, could mean only United States help for Britain, whatever the form it has taken or may take. That both Premier Petain and Darlan share that German victory view goes without saying. It was the keystone of the French surrender policy and its virtual reiteration by Darlan is not apt to trouble either London or Washington very much.

Exactly what was meant by the Darlan assertion that Hitler had not asked him for either a war declaration against Britain or French "colonial territory" is another matter. If that means no German or Axis use of French ports or bases in Africa against Britain, it would relieve London's greatest fears and soothe Washington-Vichy relations incalculably.

It is not clear, however, that within the term "colonial territory" Darlan intended to include the French-mandated Syrian route to Iraq. Nazi planes are already using that French-controlled route to reach Iraq and are being serviced to an unknown extent at French air fields in Syria enroute. A hair-splitting distinction is possible if not implied.

That is a serious problem for Britain, just how serious remains to be seen. The fate of Crete, still holding out uncertainly against the most audacious cross-sea invasion attempt of the war, is intimately interwoven with the war in Iraq. That is not only true in the sense that its strategic values are great but also because of the moral effect a British or German victory might have on the Moslem world generally, and particularly in Iraq, Iran and Turkey.

Prime Minister Churchill has told Parliament that the Battle of Crete might affect the whole trend of the war in the East. He did not amplify that to say just why a British-Greek fight to the death on the invaded island is essential, but the facts are clear enough to any observer.

It is also clear, however, that French "collaboration" with Germany to the extent of making colonial bases other than in mandated Syria available for Axis use would increase Britain's peril from other directions so greatly that Crete would lose some of its strategic importance. If it is against that possibility that Darlan sought to give assurances, then his statement is of major significance, a recognition of French mass sentiment.

Contract Awarded For Machine-Gun Plant

Windsor, Ont., May 24 (CP) — Dinsmore-McIntire, Limited, of Windsor were awarded the general contract for the construction of the $8,000,000 machine-gun plant to be erected here by the Dominion government and operated by General Motors Corporation of Canada, Limited.

Cost of the new building will be approximately $1,250,000 to $1,500,000. The balance of the $8,000000 will be spent for equipment.

Work on the new plant is expected to absorb all skilled labor in the building trades in this district as well as requiring some to be brought here.

Amusement Tax Added To Admission Says Conny Smythe

Toronto, May 24 (CP) — (Conny Smythe, General Manager of Maple Leaf Gardens Ltd., said in comment on the extension of the 20 per cent amusement tax to spectator amusements that "we cannot carry it ourselves" and the full additional burden would be added to admission prices.

Replying to a question whether his organization would discuss the extension with government officials in Ottawa, he said "We'll show them where it may cost them a lot..we need some common sense in this."

"There should be a dividing line somewhere," he said. "We're not like the moving pictures. Our money stays in Canada. It doesn't go down to Hollywood for Clark Gable or Barbara Stanwyck to spend."

DOMINION OF CANADA
VICTORY BONDS
ARE BETTER THAN CASH

It will be far better to invest money in the forthcoming issue of Victory Bonds than to keep it in cash. Buyers of Victory Bonds during the last war will tell you that. The security for both principal and interest is Canada's unconditional promise to pay.

CANADA IS IN THIS WAR TO WIN. Without Victory our Freedom cannot survive. Money, possessions, even life itself would be imperilled. Right Honourable A.V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, said recently:

> "Make no mistake about it; if we were defeated, we should perish. Let no one think that any compromise or peace terms could be possible with Hitler in such a case."

You see, therefore, how imperative it is for Canada to marshal all resources in men, materials and money to insure victory. We have the men, we must have the materials, and our people have the money.

Money must be placed at the service of Canada with the same degree of spirit that actuates our soldiers, sailors and airmen.

Help finish the job!

Joe Louis Awarded Decision Over Buddy Baer when He Fails To Answer Bell for 7th Round

Argument Eensues After Hoffman Alleges Baer Hit After Bell Sounded—Donovan Says Punch Was Started Before Bell

BAER BADLY BEATEN

By GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Washington, May 24 (AP)—Unwilling to be labelled the 17th victim of Joe Louis since the negro became heavyweight champion, big Buddy Baer today put a claim in against the Bomber's title on the ground he had been fouled by the blow that ended their fight.

Through his manager, Ancil Hoffman, Buddy has a date to appear before the District of Columbia Boxing Commission this afternoon to argue that he should be champion instead of loser on a disqualification in seven rounds of the battle put on before 23,192 in Griffith Stadium last night.

"The last blow of the fight," Hoffman said upon being granted the hearing by the District Commission, "was struck at least three seconds after the bell sounded ending the sixth round, and thus was illegal. The timekeeper, Major Ernest H. Brown, told me that.

Donovan Referee

"Arthur Donovan was the referee and should have realized that. You know, we had to accept Donovan (who was brought from New York) as the referee. Otherwise, we wouldn't have been given the shot at Joe."

Baer put up a surprisingly good fight before he failed to come out for the seventh round.

Hoffman claimed Louis clouted Buddy after the bell rang ending the sixth round. He was correct by the matter of a half second, perhaps, but it wasn't important. Baer was badly beaten.

"I'm not sure Louis hit him after the bell," Donovan said later in the dressing room. "It was close, but, anyway, Baer probably wouldn't have gone long in the next round. He was in bad shape and I would have been watching to stop it."

The sixth round—the one that caused all the argument — Louis dropped Baer for a count of six with a terrific right to the jaw. Baer staggered up to run into another—and went down again.

Final Punch Started.

Donovan had reached the count of nine when Buddy heaved himself up off the floor. His arms hung limply and Louis charged in for the kill. Louis had the final punch started when the bell sounded.

The blow caught Baer on the jaw and down he went and was carried to his corner. At the end of 60 seconds the Californian had revived but his manager was tearing around the ring arguing with the referee. Donovan shook off Hoffman and pointed to Louis as the winner.

The first round belonged to Baer on a wide wide margin, and the fourth and fifth could have been given to him. The opening chapter was almost ended when he fetched up a thundering left that catapulted Louis through the ropes.

The Negro bobbed right up at the count of four. He climbed through the ropes and started to work on Buddy. Thereafter there never was much doubt.

Baseball Loop To Function With Only Three Teams

After a spring in which baseball seemed as though it were a dead issue in the once-popular South Hastings Baseball League, a revived interest, due principally to the good samaritan work of Dr. Jack Empson and Dr. Harold Welsh of Roslin, it now appears that the rural league will again function this year, with only three teams, however, one less than operated last season.

At the annual meeting of the league held in Cannifton earlier in the week, President Ed. Shorey of Cannifton was re-elected for another term to that office while Dr. H. E. Eckardt of Shannonville was returned as Vice-President and Arthur Hall as Secretary. Representatives from Shannonville, Latta and Cannifton were in attendance at the meeting, it being decided to operate the league this year as a three-teamed league.

Discussion relative to the possibility of the three above-mentioned villages being able to field a team due to the removal of players from the district to accept employment in other areas, or because of enlistments in the active forces, was one of the main features of the meeting. Decision in the matter of importations to fill the ranks was left in abeyance, however, and the matter of ineligible players will be settled at a meeting to be held after the playing season gets under way.

Nothing definite in regard to the length of the playing schedule was decided, this being left with the secretary who will draw the schedule. The opening date, which will see the South Hastings League begin operations as a three-teamed league, was set for June 4th, with games to be played on Wednesdays and Fridays as in other years.

Reds Cannot Be Counted Out As Flag Prospects As Week's Record Shows A Big Advance

Win Five of Last Six Games With Cubs Latest Victims

INDIANS STILL WIN

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The world champion Cincinnati Reds have given tremendous advantage to their pennant rivals in the National Baseball League but with four-fifths of the season still ahead, it is too early to count them out.

They apparently are on the upgrade after a six-game losing streak.

Since then, they have won five of six contests and yesterday conquered Chicago Cubs 8-4. Johnny Vander Meer and Elmer Riddle combined to pitch four-hit ball.

The Reds made ten hits, four of them singles by Ernie Lombardi.

The victory left the Reds 8 1-2 games behind the pace-setting St. Louis Cardinals.

The Cards clipped Pittsburgh Pirates 2-1 in the first night tilt of the year in St. Louis.

Mort Cooper pitched five - hit ball, fanned nine and singled in one of the Redbirds' runs.

Cleveland Indians, leaders in the American League, also opened their night-game schedule with a 4-2 victory over St. Louis Browns.

Decided in First Frame

The encounter was decided in the first inning when Ken Keltner tripled with the bases loaded and Ray Mack singled him home.

The second-place Chicago White Sox split a doubleheader with the Tigers at Detroit. Old Ted Lyons pitched Chicago to a 7-1 victory in the opener and Paul Trout retaliated with a 9-0 shutout.

Bruce Campbell hit two home runs for Detroit in the second game.

New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox wound up in a 9-9 tie when darkness and a dust storm stopped play at the end of nine innings. With Charley Keller getting a triple, two doubles and two walks, and Tom Henrich hitting a two-run homer, the Yanks moved into the ninth inning leading 9-7. But Oscar Judd, a former Guelph, Ont., amateur pitcher who was called in as a pinch hitter, delivered a two-run single to knot the score. Nine hurlers gave up 23 hits and 19 bases on balls.

Belleville Bowlers To Open Season On Monday

Belleville Lawn Bowlers will officially open their season with a club tournament of mixed rinks for the President's Trophy on Victoria Day (Monday) at the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club.

The official opening will be preceded by a flag-raising ceremony when club members will gather around the 75-foot steel flagstaff in the centre of the spacious greens on Yeomans St.

A splendid silver trophy has been donated by President Harvey Stewart to be competed for at the season's opening club mixed rinks. Cliff Argue, games chairman, urges that all club members, both old and beginners, take part in the opening day's program and enjoy the play.

On Dominion Day the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club is hopeful of staging a district-wide bowling tournament with all proceeds going to the British War Victims' Fund.

BIG-Z LASSIES WITH THE OPENER FROM VIKINGS

Last Year's Champions Score 20-12 Win With Many Hits Registered

MANY ATTEND

"Chuck" Barnett's league champion Big-Z lassies commenced the 1941 girls' softball league schedule just about where they left off last fall, after winning the league title, when they downed "Mike" Powers' Viking lassies 20 to 12 in the opening game of the City Girls' Softball League at the Armouries lawn last evening.

Rapping out four runs in the initial frame, with Helen Garrow's circuit blow driving in three counters, the Big-Z gals assumed an advantage they never relinquished, despite the fact the Viking girls scored three runs in the second frame without the resemblance of a base hit. The winners came back with three in the second and four in the fourth and were never headed.

Helen Garrow and Wilma Clarke hit home runs for the winners while S. Adams blasted a four base blow for the losing cause. Miss Douglas, a new entry into the winners' line-up, had five hits in six tries, but hero of the piece was Rita Rabbie, the losing pitcher, who had a perfect batting average of three hits in as many tries and put out four and had five assists in her own cause.

The game was cluttered with base hits, muffs and errors to add excitement and entertainment for upward of 400 fans who lined the Armouries to witness the opening of the girls' softball season in Belleville.

The second game of the league schedule sees the Corbin girls meet the newly-entered Deacon lassies when they clash in a league fixture Saturday night.

GOSSIP NEWS COMMENT

Here's the latest fish yarn, but for reasons quite obvious no names can appear.

It seems two local anglers planned some extensive pickerel fishing at Moira Lake last Wednesday. Garnering their fishing tackle together into their motor car, the pair stopped enroute at the "government chain store" near the Post Office and supplemented their angling equipment with some "snake oil," in the event of snake bites no doubt.

Upon arrival at Moifa Lake and about three hours and several drinks later, the pair put into shore with but two small fish for their efforts. Their game bag practically empty and the "giggle soup" container more so, the pair decided to take a walk and a few minutes later came upon a farmer's scarecrow in a field as they were relating some tall tales as to the length of fish each had caught in years past.

Gazing at the outstretched arms of the scarecrow, one of the tipsy anglers sarcastically remarked: "It's a lie, there never was a trout that long."

The City Girls' Softball League got away to an encouraging start last night when a goodly crowd saw last year's champs, open the 1941 season with a convincing win over the Vikings. Actually Chuck Barnett's champion Big-Z nine displayed too much batting power for Mike Powers' Viking lassies and therein lies the answer to the question of victory and defeat. Helen "Poker-face" Garrow strutted to the plate in the initial frame and blasted a home run clean to the Post Office, cleared the bases and from that point the winners were never headed. It wasn't a bad exhibition of softball for the opening fixture despite the fact the girls showed nervousness and booted the ball around for numerous errors, which were expected. Skipper Powers showed the fans a real find in Miss S. Adams while Rita Rabbie, the losing pitcher, was the unsung hero with a perfect batting and fielding average. The improvement in the catching departments of both clubs was most pronounced.

Umpire Bill McGowan of the American League, and not Lou Gehrig, has the longest endurange record in baseball, reveals Dick McCann of the New York Daily News, who points out McGowan had not missed an assignment in sixteen seasons in the majors and only one game in ten years of umpiring in five minor leagues until taken ill one morning last August.

"The lone game McGowan skipped in this span," commented McCann, "came in his first year—1915—when he was umpiring as a 19-year-old boy in the Virginia League. The league was having pains in the pocketbook and when he didn't get paid for eight straight weeks, McGowan staged a sit-down strike, thus producing the strange situation of a guy refusing to call a strike by calling a strike. McGowan's cheque came the next day.

"During his first season, McGowan met his first mob. He was severely banged up in Portsmouth, Va. In the comparative safety of his hotel room, the bruised umpire nursed his wounds and debated upon the wisdom of exposing himself again the next day to the fury of the Portsmouth rooters. He was all for fleeing, but as he was packing his bag, he remembered what a sports writer back home in Wilmington, Del., had scornfully remarked when he started out as an umpire. 'You'll be back in two weeks, McGowan,' the scribe had scoffed. 'You'll never stand the gaff.'

"So Bill took his other shirt out of his bag and umpired at Portsmouth the next day. Thirteen years later, after he umpired his first World's Series—the 1928 Cardinals-Yankees affair — McGowan triumphantly wired the Wilmington sports writer: 'It's been a helluva long two weeks!'

"Bill's streak had some narrow escapes. Three seasons ago Bill worked ten straight days with a broken toe. Sports writers commented on his Spartan-like courage, explaining he suffered the injury from a foul tip. The real truth is he stubbed his toe on the iron leg of a bed. I'm sure you understand why he let everybody believe it was a foul tip. He's a proud man, that McGowan—and like every umpire, upon whose shoulders rest the entire structure of baseball, he has a right to be."

Efforts to revive the South Hastings Baseball League were made this week by Dr. Harold Welsh. Only three clubs seem interested in the venture, however, Foxboro turning its favor to softball this season. Latta, Cannifton and Shannonville entries were present and Ed Shorey was re-elected to the office of president once again, while Art Hall will continue as league secretary and Dr. H. E. Eckhart as vice-president. Inability to ascertain possible or relative playing strength is the problem that now faces the "SHL" and the only manner in which the question can be settled is by arranging a few games and test the strength of the clubs on the playing field. Secretary Hall was asked to draft a schedule, which means district baseball fans will at least be afforded a little of their favorite summer pastime, thanks to such baseball-minded men as Doc Welsh, Ed Shorey, Art Hall, Dr. Eckhart and others in the South Hastings League.

Do you remember when the dynamite-laden New York Yankee bats cracked out 27 hits to score a lop-sided 25-2 win over the Athletics at Philadelphia five years ago today. It was a new major league record for runs batted in and was scored against the team that formerly had held the mark, for the A's had been tops with 25 runs scored in a single game in 1929.

Is Joe Louis slipping? Fight fans are asking themselves that question after last night's fiasco at Washington when Buddy Baer really tagged Louis in the first and had the champ off his feet for the first time since Max Schmeling pinned him five years ago. Then the fans will never know whether Louis heard the sixth round bell or not and when he tagged Baer after the gong it was a perfect out for Manager Hoffman and now Promoter Mike Jacobs has a perfect set-up for a return engagement in one of the New York ball parks.

Prices Steady On The Market

Transplanting stocks, such as tomato, cabbage and Spanish onions, with hundreds of boxes and flats of perennial plants flooded the local produce market as varied hues of greens were predominant among the numerous displays featured by vendors. Prices for cabbage and tomato plants ranged around 15c per dozen plants or at 75c per hundred, while Spanish onion set were held at 75c and $1 per large flat. Perennials sold readily at prices ranging upward from 15c per box.

Prices on the inside market were essentially the same as the previous week's quotations with eggs retailing at 25c per dozen for grade "A" and ranging downward to 20c for other grades. Butter held at the previous figure of 35c per pound with a few vendors asking 75c for two pounds. Fowl ranged from 25c to 28c per pound, with broilers ranging from 60c and 70c per pair up to $1.50 per pair. The majority of broilers, however, sold around the dollar mark per pair.

Bunched vegetables such as rhubarb onions, lettuce, radishes, went for 5c per bunch. A few bunches of parsley were noticed at 10c per bunch. Asparagus sold at 15c, 20c and 25c per pound, according to grade. Honey was held at 45c per four-pound can or at $1 per 10-pound pail and potatoes sold at the regular price of $1 per 75-pound bag. Good Spy apples sold at $1.75 per hamper or at $1.50 for slightly lesser grades. Starks were $1.20 per hamper and cooking varieties around $1 per bushel.

Lake trout and white fish were the only varieties offered on the fish market, with the former selling at 25c sliced or at 22c whole, while white fish was 22c per pound. The absence of other fish from the market was due to nets in the bay having to be lifted by the fifteenth of the month, stated vendors.

Young porkers were fairly numerously offered with prices ranging upward from $4.50 each, according to age and quality.

Mr. Woods, who retired from active newspaper work in 1936, died Tuesday night, aged 73. He was a former president of The Canadian Press, former chairman of The Empire Press Union and former president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

At yesterday's memorial service were representatives of City Council, the School Board, the 10th Calgary Highlanders of which Mr Woods was honorary lieutenant-colonel, the Church of England and the Press.

Canadian Soldiers Relax From Duties To Hold Empire Day

London, May 24.—(CP Cable)—Canadian soldiers overseas relaxed today from their wartime duties to join in Empire celebrations in London and other parts of Britain.

A number of regiments made the holiday the occasion for at-homes and their messes were opened to military and civilian friends. A Quebec machine-gun regiment gave a party for underprivileged children in their area, each officer adopting a child for the day.

A sports-minded soldiers' corps in the headquarters area competed at a field met organized by the Young Men's Christian Association. An Eastern Canada infantry unit in the 1st Division held a sports day.

In London, where Empire Day coincided with close of war weapons week, a holding unit band was the centre of attraction of Trafalgar Square, where it gave a concert. A number of the services' clubs entertained soldiers at tea dances and cabarets.

A 1st Division Eastern Ontario Infantry regiment supplied one company and a band for the Mitcham War Weapons Week parade and display. Men from a 1st Division Western Canada Field Regiment also took part in this show, staging an anti-tank display.

BBC Says Germans Intend To Colonize Many Old French Cities

New York, May 24 (AP)—The BBC in a French language broadcast heard here today by CBS asked the Vichy vice-premier Admiral Jean Darlan, why he suppressed a report which revealed that France would have to give up vital territories, in addition to Alsace and Lorraine, if Germany wins the war.

The report, the BBC said, was made by the president of the French delegation to the Armistice Commission at Wiesbaden and the broadcaster said that he had its full text which he quoted as saying that most of France's eastern Provinces, including the Cities of Lille, Arras, Amiens, Reims, Verdun, Nancy, Epinal and Besancon, were objectives of German expansion.

The broadcaster added that colonization, as well as annexation, of those sections was planned by Germany, and quoted the report as saying that "only a British victory could spare France that fate."

The speaker quoted the report as saying that "if Germany wins the war, the Nord and Pas de Calais, part of the Somme and Aisne districts, the Ardennes, the Meuse, the north of Moselle, a part of Haute Saone and of Doubs will, as well as Alsace and Lorraine, but cut off from the Motherland and not only annexed, but colonized by Germany."

A military court convicted the plotters of trying to prepare the way for a possible second attempt to force a landing in the strategic West African port after a British-backed effort by Gen. Charles de Gaulle's French forces failed last Sept. 23-24.

RURAL CARRIERS UNDERPAID SAYS HEAD OF DEP'T

Low Bids Under System of Competitive Tenders for Delivery Cause of Trouble

ESTIMATES PASSED

By C. R. BLACKBURN

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 24 (CP).—Postmaster General Mulock told the House of Commons yesterday that rural mail carriers are underpaid because they submit such low bids under the system of competitive tenders for mail delivery contracts and that he would welcome suggestions to improve the situation.

A number of members representing all parties argued, as is the case each year when the Post Office Department's estimates are being considered, for an increase in compensation for the country couriers.

But Mr. Mulock said the law remained that this work must be thrown open to bids and the lowest, qualified bidder gets the contract.

Arthur Slaght (Lib. Parry Sound) said the present was an inopportune time to urge increased expenditure but that immediately peace returned the case of rural mail couriers should be given consideration.

Estimates Adopted.

Others to urge greater consideration for those who serve the rural districts were H. H. Hatfield (Con. Victoria-Carleton), E. E. Perley (Con. Qu'Appelle), and F. D. Shaw (N.D. Red Deer).

Mr. Mulock was putting his estimates through the House in Committee of Supply for the first time since his appointment last year.

He escaped the difficult task which has faced holders of the portfolio in peace years when long and bitter political debate usually has accompanied adoption of these estimates.

This subject occupied the House throughout the afternoon and all but $1,300,000 of the total estimate of $40,654,770 was approved before the adjourned hour was reached.

Many Questions Asked

Before the estimates were taken up the last items in the Budget Taxation resolutions were adopted without debate and four of the six bills necessary to effect the changes were given first reading.

Almost all the afternoon discussion was taken up with questions and answers as members sought information of mail delivery conditions in their own ridings.

Mr. Mulock said that at the present rate of increase in air mail poundage that branch of the postal services would be paying its own way in a matter of months. A large part of the increased appropriation for post office advertising would be applied to stimulating increased use of the air mail service.

In reply to questions he said means were being studied to extend the air mail advantages to every part of the Dominion.

While he believed it unwise to publish the details of losses of trans-Atlantic mail due to enemy action, the Minister said they were "remarkably small".

Northern Ireland Premier Confers With Churchill

London, May 24.— (CP Cable) — Premier J. M. Andrews of Northern Ireland, in London conferring with Prime Minister Churchill on the question of conscription for Ireland's six northern counties, flew from Belfast in the King's private plane, it was learned today.

He was accompanied by Lord Glentoran, minister of Agriculture, and John F. Gordon, Minister of Labor. Two other members of the Northern Ireland Cabinet Sir Basil Brooke, minister of Commerce, and J. C. MacDermot, minister of Public Security, are also in England in connection with the talks, which it is understood are being held in the country.

Mr. Churchill has promised a statement at the next sitting of the House of Commons on the Northern Ireland conscription question. Mr. Andrews and his colleagues are understood unanimously to favor conscription, which is strongly opposed by Eire on account of the number of pro-Eire residents of the six counties.

Petain Gov't Enters Protest

Vichy, May 24.—(AP)—The Petain government is protesting to London, through the United States State Department, against British seizure of the French tanker Sheherazade while she was crossing the Atlantic with a British Navicert.

The Admiralty announced capture of the 13,467-ton tanker Thursday. She was carrying a full cargo of United States Oil for North Africa.

Vichy authorities said they had received no further information about a second French tanker reported to have been taken about the same time.

The Navy Ministry, meanwhile, reported British seizure of two other French merchantmen en route from Dakar to Madagascar: The 4,564-ton Criton, taken May 9, and the 4,484-ton Bourbonnais, captured May 12.

Germans Lose High Proportion Of Troop-Carrying Aircraft In the Past Five-Day Conflict

Cairo, Egypt, May 24 (AP).—The British and Greek defenders of Crete have "decisively dealt with" German reinforcements landed at Heraclean (Candia), and at Retimo, 30 miles west of that place, and the Nazis have lost a high proportion of their troop-carrying aircraft in the five-day conflict, the Middle East Command announced today.

Heraclean and Retimo are towns over which, the British Command announced Friday, they have gained military control.

Intense fighting goes on at and around Malemi airdrome, in the extreme western part of the island, the command said. The Germans holding a large section of the airdrome "have launched their main effort in this area to extend their original foothold," the communique added.

Determined efforts were made all of Friday to reinforce the Nazi airborne army, it was stated.

Trenton and District

Trenton, (Special)—Major Angus Mowat, second in command of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, Second Battalion, has been transferred to Military District Headquarters to take part in the recruiting drive.

Frank W. Sherbert, principal of College Street public school, and a lieutenant in the signal section of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment before the war is back in uniform, to take over command of the company.

He has been promoted to a captaincy.

Capt. F. W. Sherbert has been trying to get into the war ever since its outbreak in September 1939, but was turned down on his medical examination. He was then placed on the reserve, subject to recall at any time.

Last week Lt. Sherbert was notified that he had been promoted to captain and that he was made officer commanding Headquarters Company, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Nursing Sister Helen Kerr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Kerr, Trenton, has been spending a few days with her parents prior to her departure for Yorkton, Sask., where she will participate in the opening of an operating room at the R.C.A.F. there.

Nursing Sister Kerr is being transferred from the station at Pt. Alberta, Ontario. Her departure there was the occasion for a farewell party.

Lions Plan Jamboree

The Trenton Lions Club are planning a mammoth jamboree to be held at Governor Simcoe Park during the first week in June. The club is holding the jamboree in an effort to raise money for underprivileged children in Trenton. A chesterfield suite, radio and many other prizes are to be given away by the club during the jamboree.

It is reported in this town that the Stokley-VanCamp of Canada, Limited, is arranging to re-open the former Empire Foods canning factory this season.

Field men are reported to be canvassing the district to contract the farmers to grow corn for the company. The factory is one of the most modern equipped canning factories in the province, but it has not been operating for the past two years. At the present time it is known as the Colonial Canners.

Automatic Gun Control Will Make It Hot For Mosquito Boats

Fort Story, Va., May 24 (AP).—The first test of a new automatic gun control led coast artillery experts of the United States Army to express high confidence today that they soon will have a greater defence against speeding, twisting mosquito boats.

Closely guarded for months, the new device was given its first beach test here, aiming shells from a 37-mm. gun at a 40-mile-an-hour, radio-controlled boat zig-zagging in Shesapeake Bay almost a mile from shore.

All that can be said of the new control is that it reduces the human element, and consequently the chance for error, to a minimum and that it is an improvement of the directors, really lightning calculators, that have given the army such faith in the basic efficiency of their anti-aircraft batteries.

An indication of the effectiveness of the army's present fire control system, with manual directors transmitting fire computations continuously, is the fact that a battery of the 74th Coast Artillery Regiment here put two holes in the target boat in the first nineteen rounds of firing and put the $25,000 craft out of commission with its last string of five shots. The gun fires twenty shots a minute.

The target boat—twenty-six feet long with a five-foot beam—is one-third the size of the new mosquito boats and the coast artillerymen were firing only practice ammunition. Had they been firing high explosive shells the first two hits probably would have blasted the boat out of the water.

The fire control system already is in production for anti-aircraft defence. With slight modifications to perfect its adaptation, experts of the Coast Artillery Board predicted that it would be of the same tactical use against mosquito boats as it has proved to be against tanks and planes. The improved director can be used to control the fire of any auomatic weapon and that includes up to 90-mm. cannon.

With speeds around 60 miles an hour and high manoeuvrability, mosquito boats have attracted much attention recently for their value as raiders.

Anglers of City Ready for Assault On Neighboring Lakes

Anglers of the city made ready today for the biggest assault on the fishing spots of the district this year, as the "long week-end" opened vistas of extended activity at their favorite sport.

Lakes in the northern part of the county will bear the brunt of the attack as pre-holiday reports brought stories of the plentitude of fish and their biting proclivities.

The "boys" will go after the pickerel and trout and many fine catches are anticipated.

The Bay of Quinte and Prince Edward County spots, especially East and West Lake will be the meccas of many out-of-town fisherman.

Don Wood, Wellington boat liveryman, who was in the city this morning, stated that at nine o'clock today all his available boats had been requisitioned by visiting "Waltons."

All in all it looks like a gala week-end for the boys who like fishing, and weather permitting, it may be productive of some record hauls.

FLEET SMASHES

Difficult to Land

However, if Nazi troop or supply ships did reach the coast, these sources continued, "landing in the face of opposition from an army ashore is a very difficult operation".

The Germans also would need some time to land heavy equipment on the beaches and that is why the recapture of Heraclean with its relatively good harbor for mountainous Crete was "very important".

There was no information about Nazi troop landings on other parts of the island than Maelmi, but military quarters here said the Nazis probably were still dropping parachutists.

Dispatches last night from Alexandria said 5,000 Germans headed for Crete had drowned in the dark hours before dawn Thursday when a British naval squadron smashed into a convoy in a three-hour engagement in which an Italian destroyer two merchantmen and forty sailing vessels were sunk.

None Reached Crete.

None of this convoy reached Crete, British sources declared, and an attempt to land men and material on the eastern tip of the island from the Italian Dodecanese Islands also was smashed.

Fresh invaders landed from the sky, however, and again the defenders inflicted heavy casualties as desperate fighting men for whom there is no retreat slugged it out in an endless series of hand-to-hand encounters.

Most of the fighting was reported in the extreme western end of the island in an area about 10 miles square, where villages were being taken and retaken half a dozen times daily.

Around Malemi, Cairo dispatches said, the British and reeks were tightening a ring of tanks, machine guns and artillery. Big guns were said to be throwing a heavy barrage at the Nazis at Malemi airport, which is a short distance from Canea, new home of the Greek government on Suda Bay.

Nazis Have No Supplies.

The longer the fight on Crete lasts, and so long as the fleet maintains control of the waters around the island, the better the British chances for ultimate victory, informed quarters said.

If the battle goes on much longer, they said, a larger proportion of Nazi planes—which up to now have been ferrying troops and parachutists—will have to carry munitions and other supplies. The British and Greeks are depending on hoarded stores of food and other supplies already on the island. It was pointed out also that the defenders have tanks and heavy guns, while the Nazis have not.

British Lack Air Defence.

The one danger point—and the British acknowledge it to be a gigantic handicap—was complete lack of air support, since the Royal Air Force was forced to withdraw soon after the battle began, through lack of adequate bases. Swarms of Nazi dive bombers were said to be harassing ground defenders.

In all phases of the fight, Cairo dispatches said, the Nazis have been prodigal with their planes and are operating a virtually constant ferry service from Greece to Crete despite the loss of at least seventeen big transports and the disablement of an unestimated number of others attempting to land on make-shift airfields.

These inadequate airfields and the rough terrain of the embattled island also are causing many gliders carrying Nazi troops to crash and kill or injure the occupants.

SENATOR CLAIMS U. S. SUPPLIES REACHING AXIS

Guy Gillette Going to Press for Congressional Committee to Investigate

OIL CHIEF COMMODITY

Washington, May 24 —(AP)—Declaring he had received reports that United States companies had supplied war materials to the Axis powers "in scores and scores" of instances, Senator Guy Gillette said today, he would press for establishment of a joint Congressional committee to investigate.

"It is a strange thing," the Iowa Democrat said in an interview, "that we are spending such vast sums to aid one side in the war and that we still allow vital war materials to go to the Axis countries. The people are entitled to know the facts about the situation."

He said "the most flagrant reported abuses have been in the petroleum industry" and added:—

"Motor fuel supplied by United States companies has been leaving Latin American ports for Germany and Italy.

Increase Allocation

"The Netherlands' East Indies recently have increased their allocation of petroleum to Japan and this is being refined and transported by British and American companies. West coast shipments of petroleum to Japan have increased tremendously since the first of the year, and the Japanese now are running virtually a ferry service to get it across."

In some instances, Gillette declared, American companies have worked through foreign subsidiaries to send materials to the Axis countries or have acted as American agents for German companies.

"We now are paying royalties to Germany on every inch of the special glass used in the manufacture of our warplanes," he added. "We also are paying royalties to Germany on a substance used in making airplane wings."

Discussing Crash Man Is Knocked To Ditch By Car

While engaged in a discussion over the responsibility of a minor motor accident, James Runciman, Myersburg farmer, was struck by a passing truck near his home east of Campbellford, late last night. Runciman was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital where it was disclosed early today he was suffering from multiple head lacerations, a broken arm and leg and general chest injuries and was reported to be in a serious condition. Dr. G. H. Stobie is in attendance and announced early Saturday the man's condition was exceedingly serious.

According to investigating police Mr. Runciman's motor car had been in a minor accident along with another automobile and the two drivers were standing in the road engaged in a discussion relative to the responsibility, when a truck drove over a knoll and struck Mr. Runciman knocking him some 19 feet into the ditch. The injured man was treated by Dr. Stewart of Campbellford at the scene and immediately rushed to the Belleville Hospital in a critical condition.

DE VALERA WILL

So far residents of Northern Ireland have served in the British armed forces only by volunteering.

An official Eire statement said: "Following conferences yesterday between members of the government and of the chief opposition and the labor parties, the government met today to consider the situation regarding application of conscription to the six counties."

Jean Arthur and Robert Cummings romantically paired in the breezy uproarious comedy hit, "The Devil and Miss Jones," featuring Charles Coburn, now on the Belle theatre screen.

New Rules Covering Gift Parcels Aimed To Conserve Shipping Space

Ottawa, May 24—New regulations governing the despatch of gift parcels to the United Kingdom, issued with a view to conserving shipping space, were announced by Trade Minister MacKinnon. The regulations, issued by the British Food Ministry, are effective June 26.

Unsolicited gifts, whether containing rationed food or not, still may be received by parcel post addressed to individuals in the United Kingdom, but the new regulations state that no parcels may exceed five pounds gross weight or contain more than two pounds of any one foodstuff.

All parcels must be clearly marked as gifts, and must be sent without prior communication from the recipient to the donor to qualify as "unsolicited."

Nazi Agent Attempting to Purchase U.S.-Owned Oil Properties in East

New York, May 24 (CP). — The Herald Tribune said today that Dr. Kurt Rieth, Nazi diplomat, has been in New York almost two months "charged with the job of buying up rich American-owned oil properties in eastern Europe, now almost valueless to citizens of the United States."

Dr. Rieth, German minister to Austria at the time of Chancellor Dollfuss' assassination, arrived in the United States March 22, crossing the border at Brownsville, Texas, the Herald Tribune said.

He arrived in Rio De Janeiro on a special mission to Latin America March 8.

The Herald Tribune said that on crossing the United States border he gave "as a future destination the office of Walter C. Teagle, chairman of the board of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey", in New York City and that he had used Teagle's name as a friend at several banks and financial firms.

The Herald Tribune quoted Rieth as denying he had any official assignment in the United States but reported from other sources "that Dr. Rieth's major objective was an attempt to arrange for the sale to the Reich at a cash price of around $25,000,000 the Hungarian subsidiary of Standard Oil of New Jersey known as Maort."

Oil Officials Deny Any Contact.

Dr. Rieth, contended he is here to see about some property owned by two sisters, the Herald Tribune said.

The paper quoted W. A. Farish, president of Standard Oil of New Jersey, as denying that he, Teagle, or anyone in authority in his organisation knew or had been approached by Dr. Rieth.

The Herald Tribune quoted Farish as saying his organisation had had "inquiries as to whether or not we would sell our German subsidiary and our Hungarian subsidiary.

"These feelers for sale never developed to any conclusion and we are unable to say whether they were genuine or not."

Standard Oil's German subsidiary has paid almost nothing to its American owners since Hitler came to power, a condition existing among other American owned German firms.

Farish was quoted as saying that for months his company has had "no control from New York of the operations of these two companies and for years have not been able to get dividends out of these companies.

While in South America, the Herald Tribune said, Dr. Rieth assisted in the formation of the American Abstention Committee composed of two Japanese, an Italian and a German.

"The real aim of the committee is to hinder the application of the lease-lend bill at every means, from propaganda to more direct methods", the Herald Tribune charged.

Noted Canadian Editor To Speak Here Wednesday

One of the outstanding features being brought to Belleville in connection with the forthcoming Victory Loan Campaign will be in evidence here on Wednesday, May 28, when Napier H. Moore, editor of McLean's Magazine will be the guest speaker at a banquet to be held in the basement of Bridge St. United Church. The function will bring together canvassers who have already offered their services in connection with the campaign, and much valuable information will be imparted.

Entertainment of a variable nature has been arranged for and motion picture shorts dealing with Canada's part in the war, especially in regard to the duty of Canadians in taking part in the Victory Loan Campaign, will be shown.

The banquet will start at 7.30 p.m. Daylight Saving Time, campaign officials announced today. This hour has been set in order to facilitate matters for district canvassers and officials.

Mr. Moore, the guest speaker, is an outstanding newspaperman and speaker. His services have been in demand for many years and he will bring a ringing message that should prove to be of immeasurable benefit to not only this county but the district as a whole.

14 NAZI PLANES DOWNED

Cairo, Egypt, May 24. — (AP)—British long-range fighters have challenged the German Air Mastery of Crete, combining with bombers from distant bases to destroy at least 14 German planes in one day in the spreading battle at the western end of the island, Royal Air Force headquarters announced today.

Vivien Leigh and Robert Taylor co-stars of "Waterloo Bridge" the most memorable screen romance since "Smilin' Thru" which opens Monday at the McCarthy theatre with the added laugh hit "Who killed Aunt Maggie" featuring John Hubbard, Wendy Barrie, and Edgar Kennedy.

VOICE OF ENGLAND THUNDERS AGAINST THE ENEMY

An impressive picture made somewhere on the coast of England, as a member of the gun crew gave the signal to fire the huge railway gun which is now employed to bombard German positions across the English Channel.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop didn't look so cheerful this morning, so I waited till he had his 2nd cup of coffee and then I said, Hay pop?

What can I do for you, in your opinion? pop said, and I said, Can I go to the movies this afternoon?

Do you have the price of admission? pop said, and I said, No sir, and he said, Do you know any sure way of obtaining it?

No sir, I said, and he said, In that case I should say your chances of going to the movies are decidedly remote, if not null and void. Of course I could give you the money without seriously crippling my financial resources, but if I did my conscience would accuse me the rest of the day, he said.

Well aw G, pop, why? I said, and pop said, I'm glad you asked me that. It's always a refreshing experience to be asked a question to wich I have a pat and convincing answer. In the first place today is Sattiday, a word derived from the Greek word Sat, meaning did sit, and the Persian word Idday, meaning from Monday to Friday inclusive. In other words you've been sitting in school all week with your mussels and possibly even your mind inactive, so Sattiday is the logical day to encourage your vitality by combining the energy of the rocky mountain goat with the grace of the butterfly in the filtered air of the public streets. And in the 2nd place you will derive a much sounder attitude tords life from the give and take of association with your own kind and age than you would fro mthe give and take of a lot of strange inhabitants of the screen, most of whose counterparts never lived on land or sea. In less elegant phrazeology, the movies are out, he said.

Well jimminy, pop, I mean gosh, why? I said, and pop said, If you want the situation explained more briefly and to the point, ask your mother.

Wich I didn't.
